CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE SCHEDULE OPENS TO-NIGHT

The City Hockey League will open its schedule to-night when a double header is on the bills for the Brock street rink, the Americans clashing with the Batchelors, and the Pennants doing battle with the East City team. The clubs have gathered together some good material and there promises to be keen competition all the way. The Americans, for instance, have Richardson, Smyth and Jackson of last year's junior O.H.A. team. Billy Breen the coach of the Electric Hockey Club, will referee the game, and His Worship Mayor Duffus, will face off the puck. The Americans and the Pennants play the first game and the Batchelors and East City team meet in the second battle.

INTERESTING TALK BY MR. J. McCORMACK

Superintendent of the Church Camp Missions at St. Luke's Last Evening

The Sunday School Hall of St. Luke's Church was well filled last evening with an audience that followed with attentive interest the splendid lecture on "With the Sky Pilot on the Frontier," by Mr. J. McCormack, of the Church Camp Mission. Life in the construction and lumber camps of the Dominion was vividly described by the speaker, his remarks being made even more interesting by a large number of lantern slides which were thrown on the screen. The latter told the story of the building of a great railway, from the time when it is first started until it reaches its completed state, and towns spring up along its line. The great work the Church is doing in carrying the Gospel to these men in the camps very often, under trying circumstances, was referred to by the speaker. The heroism and self-sacrifice of the missionaries in this branch of the missionary enterprises of the Church were deserving the highest praise. Their noble work was deserving of the encouragement and help of every Churchman in Canada.

At the conclusion of the address, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer of the evening, it being moved by Mr. R. B. Rogers, and seconded by Rev. Canon Davidson. Rev. Mr. White acted as chairman.

Constables Bendell and Butters, the latter of whom served in the Boer War, have joined the Simcoe Battalion for overseas service. All the men have their positions left open for them by the Town Council on their return after the war.

Pte. Thomas Perry at Bramshott, England, in a recent letter home, asked that his thanks be conveyed to the priests and to the ladies of the Sacred Heart for the parcel he received from them at Christmas.

Mrs. Gray has received a letter from her son Bomb. Geo. Gray, of the 1st Reserve Battery, Ross Barracks, Shornciffe, in which he says he has received a Christmas card from ex-Mayor Buller, whom he wishes to thank for his kind remembrance. Bombardier Gray says the Peterborough boys are fine. The boys get The Examiner every week and are pleased to see what the 39rd is doing. "Come along boys, you will all be needed," is Bomb. Gray's advice.

Writing to a member of The Examiner staff Pte. A. Picard, who left with the 39th Battalion and is now in France, asks about the hockey situation. The Peterborough boys here are playing hockey with the trench rats, he adds.

WEDDING BELLS

HANNA-ARMSTRONG.

An interesting military wedding was solemnized in St. Jude's Church, Gray's Inn Road, London, England, when Rev. A. Nesbit, assisted by Rev. E. Pearson, united in wedlock Miss Lillian Thane, the youngest daughter of Mrs. and the late Alex. Thane Armstrong, of Toronto, to Sergeant Norman W. Hanna, of the 23rd Battalion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hanna, Millbrook, Ont. The bride who was given away by Mrs. Fuller of Belgrave Square, wore her wedding gown of ivory charmeuse trimmed with lace and deep pearl trimmings, the whole being draped over an exquisite embroidered skirt made for her mother's wedding; her only ornament being a military pin, the gift of the groom. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white heather. Miss G. Fuller acted as bridesmaid, wearing a suit of khaki, with picture hat. FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 10—A RISK or SURE THING—Which?

Here are two cases, very appropriate at the present time, as many householders know. A total stranger, probably a German or other foreigner, calls at your house, and offers eyeglasses for sale. He makes them sound cheap perhaps, and you risk injury to your eyes by buying and wearing glasses that are not correctly fitted to your requirements.

The other way is when you notice the least eye trouble, you go to Dr. Fowler and have a proper scientific test made of the eyes. He supplies what he knows is a correct lens for just the weakness you may have in your vision, and you wear what, you are taking no risk in connection with whatever.

In this case you have an absolute guarantee from the oldest continuous optical business in Peterboro, and can see Dr. Fowler at any time. Can you afford to risk of the Fakirs' hap-hazard service? It will be Fowler's eventually, better come there first.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM H. HUNTER.

A well known resident of Millbrook passed away on Sunday night in the room above Leckie's drug store, in the person of William H. Hunter. Mr. Hunter had lived there for some time, since he sold his own premises. He has been unwell for a month or more, and at the last meeting of the Millbrook council asked for assistance, which was granted. His brother, Alexander, spent part of Sunday afternoon with him finding him in bed, but did not realize that he was so far spent, yet he breathed his last some time during the night.

William Hunter was born on the old homestead just north of the town 70 years ago, being the oldest of the family. He learned the saddlery business in Omemee and carried on the business here for some years, being a good mechanic in that line. Afterwards he conducted a grocery until the death some 12 years ago of his wife, who was a Miss Nolcom of Omemee. Since then he has lived alone.

The funeral took place on Tuesday to the Presbyterian cemetery, Rev. Dr. Lee conducting a service at Mr. Gillott's undertaking rooms.

It takes a young man four times as long to button his best girl's gloves as it does his sister's.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.

Expenditures and Receipts—Work of the Railway Board.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—The annual report of the Board of Railway Commissioners for the last fiscal year shows that out of 46,709,280 passengers carried by Canadian railways eight were killed and 230 injured. Out of 159,142 railway employes 89 were killed and 873 injured. Trespassers on railway property to the number of 170 were killed. The board is taking up with the Attorneys-General of the various provinces the question of instituting more rigorous prosecution of trespassers.

The board also recommends further action by the Government towards assisting the elimination of grade crossings. During the year the board issued 1,897 orders.

Canada spent nearly twenty-five million dollars during the last fiscal year on capital account for Government railway construction and permanent improvements, and five and one-half millions on canals, bringing the total Government expenditure, prior to and since confederation, on capital accounts for railways, up to $362,947,000, and for canals to $112,472,600. Returns in revenue last year were $42,985 net surplus on Intercolonial Railway operations, and $236,277 from hydraulic and other rents along canals. These statistics are given in the annual report of the Department of Railways and Canals. On the Hudson Bay Railway the Government spent $4,773,743, making the total expenditure up to March 31 last $10,980,778.

The Intercolonial Railway shows a small surplus of $42,985. Gross earnings were $11,444,873, a decrease of $1,433,675. On the P. E. I. Railway there was a deficit of $188,731. On the small portion of the National Transcontinental put into operation by the Government expenses totalled $239,697, while earnings amounted to only $153,312.

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buchu Nut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—In again denying that the German Emperor had been treated by an American physician for a cancerous condition of the larynx, the Overseas News Agency characterizes the report as "a malicious attempt to influence foreign public opinion falsely.." and adds: "The Emperor is travelling from one line of battle to another, as only a healthy man can do."

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS WIPED OUT BY FIRE

Fire Believed To Be The Work of Incendiaries

FIVE LIVES LOST AND SCORES INJURED IN HUGE CONFLAGRATION THAT DESTROYS CANADA'S PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

Only the Bare Walls of the Dominion's House of Parliament Left Standing, Following Fire Which Swept the Building Last Night—Government in Session When Fire Started in Reading Room of the Commons.

CAPT. BURNHAM AMONG INJURED

Examiner Special:

Ottawa, Feb. 4—Five persons are known to have been killed, as well as many injured, in fire which completely destroyed the Dominion Parliament Buildings last night. Only the bare walls are now standing. Loss is estimated at ten millions.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Canada's Parliament Buildings, the finest Gothic structure in America, were completely destroyed by fire last night. Only the bare walls are now standing. Parliament was in session when the conflagration started at 8.50 p.m. By midnight all hopes had been abandoned of saving any portion of the wings except, perhaps, the Parliamentary Library, but even that is doubtful. It is probable that Parliament will meet to-day in the Russell Theatre.

The fire is believed to be the work of incendiaries, and General Sir Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, has issued orders to the Militia, who are on guard duty at every point of ingress and egress on the Canadian border to exercise the utmost vigilance, so that no persons may pass without thoroughly accounting for themselves. The Dominion Police have also been notified everywhere, and United States authorities have been apprised of the occurrence at Ottawa last night, so that every effort will be made to prevent the escape of any persons suspected of participation in the firing of the buildings.

FOUR MEN LOST LIVES.

At one o'clock one of the walls of the building collapsed and four men lost their lives, two policemen and two messengers, who were endeavouring to save some valuable Parliamentary records that had been thrown out of the windows earlier in the evening. Two lives were lost within the building. A number of persons are badly scorched, and many are suffering from suffocation. The fire, which broke out at 9 o'clock in the Commons' Reading-Room, swept with tremendous fury down the corridors and leaped to the galleries, and in the space of three minutes had filled the whole wing with an impenetrable volume of smoke. It was followed quickly by flames.

BURIED IN THE RUINS.

Four men are reported to be buried in the ruins, but the fierceness of the fire has so far prevented search for the bodies. They were buried by a falling wall. Filled with thousands of loose papers, the flames leaped from stand to stand with an almost inconceivable rapidity; at the same time the smoke burst forth in dense clouds of suffocating volume. While an alarm was instantly raised, the escape of members of peopled galleries and the house staff with so small a list of missing, is remarkable.

TWO WOMEN ARE DEAD.

Mrs. Bray and Mrs. Morin, of Quebec City, were found dead in the Speaker's chambers when the police and firemen forced an entrance. The two women were friends of Madame Sevigny, wife of the Speaker, and had been visiting here for some days. Madame Sevigny herself escaped by jumping from a second story window. She was somewhat bruised, but is not believed to be severely injured. No sooner had the alarm sounded than General Hughes took control of the situation, and the 77th Regiment, the Engineers and other detachments of overseas troops in training here were called out. He himself and his staff were present at the scene, and a cordon of troops surrounded the building. The fire broke out in the Reading-Room, adjacent to the Chamber of Commons, in the main building of the Parliament Houses, and rapidly spread.

BEYOND CONTROL OF FIREMEN.

At midnight it was still beyond the control of the firemen, and spreading to the Senate side of the building. Six lives are known to have been lost, while scores of people were overcome by the dense smoke and others injured. The damage cannot yet be estimated. Members of the House of Commons in the Chamber and the various Parliamentary offices had to fight their way to safety. People in the upper storeys of the buildings had narrow escapes, scores having to be taken out by ladders.

HON. MARTIN BURRELL INJURED.

Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, whose office is off the Reading-Room, escaped through tongues of flame, and was badly burned about the face and hands. Dr. Michael Clark, M.P., was knocked down by streams of water, but escaped with slight injuries. Sir Robt. Borden escaped hatless and coatless, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not in the House. So far as can be ascertained at this hour, all the members are safe.

LOSS TEN MILLIONS.

The loss is believed to be at least ten million dollars.

Members Heard Two Explosions In Main Chamber

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Many seem to take it for granted that the fire in the buildings was the work of an incendiary, and in the absence of confirmation, the stories of Mayor Martin, Mr. Bradbury and others were eagerly listened to.

Mayor Martin, of Montreal, who was one of the first to discover the fire, says he heard an explosion. Mr. W. R. Bradbury, stock broker, was standing near the post office in the main chamber when he heard a crash. Before going any distance he heard another explosion of some kind which knocked him off his feet. Major Gerald White, M.P., also heard two separate explosions.

Atlantic City Hotel Destroyed

Special to The Examiner:

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 4.—Five persons, one of them a woman, lost their lives and at least a score were injured in a fire which completely destroyed the Hotel Overbrook here early to-day.

The Fire Fiend In New York

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Six persons burned to death, one missing and two injured, was the toll of an early morning fire which destroyed the $50,000 home of Mrs. Casimir Tag, widow of President Tag of the German American bank, Brooklyn, to-day.

HAVE BEEN MARRIED FOR SEVENTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson, who reside on a farm near Meaford, Ontario celebrated the seventieth anniversary of their wedding on January 27th, 1916.

They were married in the English Church at Kingston, Ontario on Jan. 27th, 1846 by the Rev. Dr. Harkmore.

Mr. Watson was born in England in the year 1826, and came over to this country when a lad of 11 years, taking nine weeks to cross the ocean in a sailing vessel. He settled near Kingston, where his wife was born in the year 1825, and where they lived until 50 years ago, when they moved to the Township of St. Vincent and where they still reside on the old homestead with their youngest son.

Mr. Watson walks the seven miles to Meaford, and claims it is good exercise. Mrs. Watson knits and sews without glasses, and has done her share of knitting for the soldiers. Both are in possession of all their faculties.

They have five living children, 30 grandchildren, 46 great grandchildren and one great, great grandchild. This makes five generations still living.

EVERY THREE MINUTES ONE DIES IN THE U. S.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy, who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is the very one to contract tuberculosis—and none are immune.

During changing seasons, or after sickness, blood-quality is most important, and if you and your family will take Scott's Emulsion after meals it will charge your blood with health-sustaining richness, quicken circulation, and strengthen both lungs and throat.

Notified Dept. of Justice That Parliament Buildings Were to Be Objects of German Attacks

Also Rideau Hall and Large Munitions Plants in Ontario ---Providence Claims to Have Had Information Three Weeks Ago

Special to The Examiner.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Feb. 4.—The Providence Journal prefaces its story of the Ottawa Parliament Buildings fire this morning with the following statement:

"The Providence Journal three weeks ago notified the Department of Justice that it had received information directly through employees of the German Embassy that the Parliament House of Ottawa, Rideau Hall, the home of the Governor-General in Ottawa, and large munition plants in Ontario were to be the next objects of German attack on this continent in the order named. The Journal, furthermore, notified the Department of Justice at the same time that the German Embassy had given instructions that the work of destruction in American munition plants should be temporarily suspended; and that the next move to be made would give the people of Canada a few things to think about. The statement was also made by Embassy officials that the arrest of Paul Koenig and the prevention of the destruction of the Welland Canal would only stimulate these activities in Canada. This information, given by the Journal to the Government, was conveyed to the Journal through a channel which the Government officers at once declared, when notified of the source, had to their knowledge been in constant touch with members of the German Embassy for many months past.

INFORMATION GIVEN BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—If the Providence Journal, as it declared to-day, had warning three weeks ago that German conspirators planned to fire the Canadian Parliament Buildings, the Department of Justice officials to-day said it was extremely probable the British Government had the same information. As an act of friendship, Department of Justice officials said, such information, if received, would have been given the British Embassy.

GERMANS ADMIT TURKISH FAILURE IN THE CAUCASUS

Ten Thousand Wounded Turks Have Arrived at Trebizond—Germans Are Flooded Out of the Styr River District—Italian Steamer Captured, Together With Three Hundred Serbian Refugees.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, Feb. 4.—German sources admit the Turkish failure in the Caucasus. Ten thousand wounded Turks have arrived at Trebizond.

KIEV, Russia, Feb. 4.—All the roads in the region of the Styr River are under water, driving the Huns out.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—A Zeppelin is reported to have bombarded and sunk the collier Frank Fisher in the North Sea, killing thirteen of the crew.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The steamer Koenig Albert, flying the Italian flag, with 300 Serbian refugees aboard, was captured by an Austrian war craft in the Adriatic.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—J. Pierpont Morgan, who sailed from New York, is expected to return with a hundred million dollars worth of war contracts.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—It is stated to-day that the German cruiser Roon, which captured the Appam, is off Hampton Roads, and may be coming in to intern.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—An airship squadron, led by Jules Vedrines, bombarded and did much damage to the railways and forts behind the German lines.

Senate is Destroyed But Library Is Alright

FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—The fire is under control. The Senate is gone, but the Library is saved.

Five lives are lost.

CAPT. BURNHAM INJURED.

Captain Ham. Burnham, of Peterborough, is among those slightly injured with cuts or burns. Thomas McNutt, M.P., of Saltcoats, and Dr. Cash, M.P., of Humboldt, had particularly narrow escapes, being trapped in the main lavatory. With the corridor a mass of flames, they opened a window but found a twenty-foot drop between them and the floor of air well on inside of the building. Mr. McNutt twisted and tied together towels, with which he lowered Dr. Cash to where he could drop, and he escaped with a slight injury to his leg. Mr. McNutt then fastened the towels to a pole, which he placed across the window opening, and was able to drop safely to a small ladder which Dr. Cash had found.

In the well he was followed by a lavatory attendant, who was almost helpless from a crippled hand, but who also reached the ground over Mr. McNutt's shoulders. Even in the well they found themselves penned in by heavy iron gates, but their cries were heard by a messenger, who led them to a doorway in the darkness.

Relation Between Germany and United States is Nearing the Breaking Point --- The Lusitania Controversy

WILL NOT YIELD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Deep pessimism prevails in official circles over the latest communication from Berlin on the Lusitania question. It is understood that Secretary of State Lansing has received a report from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin and has forwarded this to the President. It is known that President Wilson will not yield in any particular in the demands he made on Germany. It is known to be his belief that a crisis may develop with Germany on the Lusitania issue at any time. The United States government feels unable to "dicker" longer on the question and some understanding must be reached this month.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Feb. 4.—Unless America waives disavowal of the sinking of the Lusitania, or agrees to submit the question to Hague arbitration an amicable adjustment of the German controversy is impossible. This is the unanimous view taken by German officials and Berlin newspapers to-day.

CAN'T ADMIT ILLEGALITY.

Germany Likely to Refuse to Meet United States Demands.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The semi-official Overseas News Agency yesterday gave out the following statement, which is regarded here as indicating the nature of the German reply to the latest American demands with reference to the sinking of the Lusitania:

"A leading authority on international law, when asked about the legal aspects of the Lusitania question, answered, 'According to the reports of the English press, the question is not whether Germany officially admits that the sinking of the Lusitania was "illegal." Germany, however, to my mind, cannot declare this, because in this way it would prejudice itself in the negotiations about the legality of submarine warfare which are to be expected after the termination of the present war.'"

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Girls—If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

The battle of the herrings was the comical name given to a fight between an English force and a French detachment not far from Orleans in 1429. The English were conveying a large quantity of supplies, mainly herrings, for it was Lent, to the army that was besieging Orleans. The English had 1,000 men, the French 6,000. The former repulsed the assailants and saved the herrings, so the battle was named in honor of the supplies.—London Telegraph.

Tried to Fly.

John Milton in "Britain to the Conquest" says that in youth King Harold, last of the Saxons, strangely aspiring, had made and fitted wings to his hands and feet. With these, on the top of a tower, spread out to gather the air, he flew more than a furlong; but, the wind being too high, he came fluttering to the ground, maiming all his limbs, yet so conceited was he of his art that the cause of his fall was attributed to the want of a tail, as birds have, which he forgot to make.

The English Pheasant.

It is claimed that the pheasant of the English preserves can trace its pedigree directly to the brilliant bird of the same species in Japan. About the middle of the nineteenth century a few live pheasants were brought from Japan and crossed with the common species. The result of this was, it is said, that a new race of birds was introduced, and the beautiful pheasant, with its iridescent plumage, was produced and naturalised as an English bird.

One Way to Cut Brass.

To cut sheet brass chemically the following method meets with great success: Make a strong solution of bichloride of mercury in alcohol. With a quill pen draw a line across the brass where it is to be cut. Let it dry on and with the same pen draw over this line with nitric acid. The brass may then be broken across like glass that has been cut with a diamond.—Exchange.

Recommendation Not Necessary.

"So you're going to leave us, Mary?"

"Yes, mum. I've got to."

"And do you want me to give you a letter of recommendation?"

"It ain't necessary, mum. The man I'm going to work for is willing to take chances. I'm leavin' to get married."—Detroit Free Press.

SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE RHEUMATISM, DROPSY.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to tell you of a recent experience I had when suffering from backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, and congestion of the kidneys. I tried a new medicine called "Anuric," which has recently been discovered by Dr. Pierce, of whose medicines and Surgical Institution in Buffalo, N. Y., you have no doubt heard for years. This medicine acted upon me in a wonderful manner. I never have taken any medicine so helpful in such quick time. I do wish anyone in need of such a remedy would give it a trial.

(Signed) G. H. HERR.

NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery" which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

LIKE A MONEY TREE.

The possibilities of a really enterprising trading company are realised at Kiôku, central Africa, where the Kongo Oriental company owns all stores, where money can be spent and fixes its own prices for ivory, rubber, labor and trade goods. "It was as if by planting a few francs in the ground money bearing trees had sprung into existence." The lucrative precedure is explained in James Barnes' "Through Central Africa."

"As soon as a native was paid cash for anything, either as an advance or for services rendered, he hastened bottfoot to the company's stores and bought anything from a harmonicon to a secondhand gold braided uniform, and as the profit in these articles ran from 100 to 250 per cent it can easily be seen where the money trees come in.

"The man who had brought in ivory was paid for it in cash at a rate that insured a profit of about 150 per cent. and immediately he repaired to the store, where he bought things he had no use for, giving another profit of cent per cent at least. The money was sent from the store to the company's offices, where the native was paid for carrying the ivory on the first stage of its long journey to the coast. The money received was the same that had been paid for the ivory in the first place, and the bearer would surely come back and spend his wages at the store again.

"It was a lovely system, and the only real chance for loss was the wear and tear on the money itself and the expense of bookkeeping. If the native demanded an extra price for ivory or labor there was very little trouble made over it—the extra cost was added to the articles in the store."

Blood Stains on Silk.

To remove a blood stain made by a pricked finger on any silk material place about four inches of white sewing silk in the mouth and moisten. Then roll into a ball and rub the spot gently, and the stain will disappear as if by magic. Just try it and see.—Woman's Home Companion.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as many folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases, which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water brash, or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

"Grate Victory For Sence."

Two large orchards, side by side, brought much profit to Farmer Turmut and much trouble, for the orchards were considered fair game by the youth of the village and two orchards are harder to watch than one.

One day, looking from one orchard to the other, Turmut saw a small boy shin down a tree and, uttering a word of warning to another imp still up among the apples, ran off.

Turmut reached that tree in record time.

"Got yer this time!" he roared to the boy almost hidden among the leaves. "Come down!"

Getting no answer and not being in a hurry, he sat down and waited. Time passed, and still he waited, until a servant brought him a note that had just been dropped through the letter box. He did not wait after he had read it, as follows:

"Some people as apples, some as sence. You bin watchin a pare of trowsis stuffed with straw, and we bin gettin' your apples from the other orchard. Grate victory for sence!"—London Answers.

Chinese Women at Theaters.

In order to prevent trouble the various Chinese theaters and musical houses are not permitted to sell tickets to Chinese visitors with their women folk. But as there are some foreigners who wish to hear Chinese singing and music and always buy tickets for their wives and female friends and refuse to observe this rule, the owners of the musical houses and theaters petitioned the police about the matter. In reply the chief of the police said that as foreign men and women enjoy equal rights in their own countries and are permitted to make friends with each other without restriction they should not be treated in the same way as Chinese women and girls, so the owners are permitted to allow foreign women theater goers to sit together with their male friends, but Chinese females are still not allowed to enjoy the same privilege.—Pekin Gazette.

One of the Family.

Boarding round, as the old time district school teacher did, was not always an unmixed joy, but occasionally, writes Sophie E. Eastman in her book, "In Old South Hadley," teachers were able to administer needed discipline by reason of their intimate knowledge of the family life of their pupils.

There were some teachers who did not need the usual injunction to "make yerself to hum." Miss Mary N. one day called to her desk a boy with whose widowed mother she was then boarding. She gave him what she called "a good ferruling," although he had no idea for what offense he was being punished.

"There," she said when she had finished, "now we'll see whether you will make up faces at your mother the next time she tells you that you are to have hasty pudding and milk for breakfast!"

Pasteur's Modesty.

In 1882, when the international congress of medicine first met in London, Pasteur was the most distinguished of the foreign delegates present. With his usual anxiety to avoid publicity, he came over accompanied only by his son and son-in-law and took rooms in Clarges street. For ten days before his arrival invitations were addressed to the famous Frenchman at the bureau of the congress, but no one called for these, and he was not seen till he entered St. James' hall to attend the opening meeting. One of the stewards was leading him to the place reserved for him on the platform when he was recognised, and immediately cheers rang through the hall. Quite unconscious that these were meant for him, he said apologetically: "No doubt the Prince of Wales is arriving. I ought to have come sooner."

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Hand in the Dark.

[Original.]

When my father, who had been a very wealthy man, died insolvent his children were like persons thrown into deep water without having learned to swim.

Had it not been for my mother and sisters I would have got on well enough. I was young and strong and perfectly willing to work. But they must live. Mother was too old to do anything for herself, and, as to my sisters, it was before the admission to the various fields which are now open to women. I secured an agency for the sale of sewing machines. One day I went home and found the family all being turned out of the little cottage to which we had been reduced for nonpayment of rent. I had sold that day a machine for which I had collected the money. I paid the rent with it.

There are cases where the penalty for dishonesty seems very harsh. That I had appropriated the sewing machine funds soon became known to my employers. I was given twenty-four hours to make good the deficiency or submit to arrest. There was no way in the world to save myself. Of a naturally sensitive disposition, to go behind bars was more than I could endure. I resolved on suicide.

I owned a revolver which I had purchased in the halcyon days. I had a few cents necessary to buy cartridges. Following a plan usual to suicides for the purpose of lessening as much as possible the shock to those who love them, I went to a hotel, registered and asked for a room. The hour was for 6 o'clock in the evening, but it was in December and as dark as midnight. The clerk assigned me to a room, and I was shown to it by a bell boy. It was in a wing of the hotel at the end of a dimly lighted hall. My conductor found the door unlocked and opened it. I entered and shut the door behind me. I was in absolute darkness, which was what I preferred—that is, if a man about to die has any preferences.

My knee rubbed against a chair. I took hold of it and sat down with my face to its back, and dropped my head on my hands. My mind of course was on my misfortunes. Had I not been suffering from a partial temporary insanity I might have seen the folly of my course. It would have been better for me to disappear. Then I might still be of use to my mother and sisters. This did not occur to me. My mind had become saturated with one subject—arrest, handcuffs, prison bars. I am a believer in the power of purely temporary physical conditions to force one into crime, and such condition I suffered from.

Presently I straightened up, put my hand to a hip pocket and took out my revolver. There was no necessity for a light. I could do what I intended through the sense of touch. Indeed, I did not care, as some suicides have done, to shoot myself standing before a mirror. I dreaded to see the horrible expression that was on my face. I slowly raised the revolver, my finger on the trigger, intending to place the muzzle against my temple. Just as I felt the cold steel a hand grasped my wrist.

Doubtless nothing could have occurred better calculated to bring me to my senses. The spell in which my mind had been caught was suddenly broken. Surprise was the first sensation, curiosity the second. Neither had anything to do with the monomania that had possessed me. I had suddenly been transferred into a free thinking man. I noticed first that the hand about my wrist was small and soft. It must be a woman's. But what was a woman doing in that room, and how did she know that I had raised a pistol to my head? She might have heard me come in and sit down, but it would have required light to detect noiseless motion. Not for a moment did I fancy that some one from the dead had come to save me. The hand was warm, human, and I felt human currents passing from its owner to me. What has required a whole paragraph to tell flashed through me in an instant.

"Who are you?" I asked.

"One whom God has doubtless sent to save you from a crime," came the reply in a low musical voice.

"I will strike a light."

"Please don't. I am under the care of an oculist. He has placed me in darkness preparatory to an operation. I have been here all day without a ray of light entering my eyes, for, in addition to the room being darkened, my eyes have been bandaged. Hearing some one enter, I lifted the bandage. Having been so long in perfect darkness, my sight is very strong. I have seen you, though dimly, from the first and can see you now. Hadn't I better ring for some one to take you away?"

"No; I will go alone. There is no fear that I will act as I intended. You have relieved the mental strain under which I suffered."

I gave her a brief account of the causes that had led up to my intended suicide. She exacted a promise from me to go to her father and tell him the story, including my adventure with her, giving me a ring as a token. I left her and kept my promise. I was given a check to pay my indebtedness, with another for temporary requirements. On going out I discovered at the office that I had been taken to the wrong room.

When I saw the lady who had saved me I saw an attractive girl of twenty. We became close friends. Indeed, she and all her family were extremely kind to my mother and sisters. Her father gave me a desk in his counting room, and I am now on a fair way to prosperity.

Laws Regulating Laundry Marks.

Laundry marks vary greatly in Europe. Most of us are familiar with those used in Britain, consisting of certain small letters or figures stitched in red thread. Not all Continental laundries are so considerate. In some parts of France linen is defaced by having the whole name and address of the laundry stamped upon it, and an additional geometrical design to indicate the owner.

In Bavaria every piece has a number stamped on in large characters. In other parts of Germany a small cotton label is attached by means of a hot-water-proof adhesive. In Bulgaria each laundry has a large number of stamps engraved with designs, and in Russia the laundries mark linen with threads worked in arrow shapes.

In some Russian towns the police periodically issue regulations for laundries, while in Odessa books of marks are furnished annually to the laundry proprietors, and these marks and no others may be used. By this system criminals and revolutionary agitators are often traced.

A Glimpse of Tennyson.

Apprehension of being mobbed by the "profane vulgar" amounted almost to monomania with the poet Tennyson. Many stories are told in illustration of this weakness of his. One of the best of them will bear repetition. Lord Tennyson was taking a country walk with a friend when a fellow creature was espied in the distance. "We must turn back," said the poet. "That fellow means to waylay us." His companion persuaded him, however, to continue on their path. They caught up to the enemy and passed him. He took no notice of them whatever. "What an extraordinary thing!" cried the irate poet. "The fellow seems to have no idea who I am!"

WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sweep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always."—Mrs. PETER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are just what is needed by every woman who is in Mrs. Marco's condition.

For free advice in regard to any annoying symptom write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

A PAIN IN THE BACK

COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS.

When a pain asserts itself in the back you may rest assured that it comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and would be without a pain or an ache.

For backache, lame or weak back, there is no remedy to equal Doan's Kidney Pills.

They take out the stitches, twitches, and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak, lame, aching back.

Miss Iva A. Ferris, Mill Cove, N.B., writes: "I suffered for two years from pains in my back. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged until I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I thought it would not hurt to try them. I had only used two boxes before I noticed a great difference, and after I had taken four boxes I was completely cured. I would not be without them in the house. I can recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WRITTEN BY CHILDREN.

Some of the best known hymns in the language have been written by children. Everybody knows "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," a hymn with a unique record. It was the first hymn the author, Dr. Ray Palmer, ever wrote. It is by far the most popular of his hymns. It was written when he was a mere lad, and he survived its publication and popularity sixty years. It was set to music in the year of its birth and has always been sung to the same tune.

One of the best known hymns in the world is "There Is a Land of Pure Delight." Yet it was written by Isaac Watts before he reached manhood. It is said that he was staying in the Isle of Wight and looking across to Hampshire when he penned the lines:

Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood
Stand dressed in living green.

That fine soldierly hymn, "Oft In Danger, Oft In Woe, Onward, Christian, Onward Go," was actually written by a boy and girl who never saw each other. The boy was poor Henry Kirke White, who died before he reached manhood, and the girl was Frances Fuller-Maitland.

The fact is that when the boy poet died the little girl was not born. Exactly when Kirke White wrote his verses is not known, for they were found among his papers after his death. He had worked some sums in algebra on the same sheet.

Twenty years later the little Frances, fourteen years old, wrote the verses beginning respectively, "Let your drooping hearts be glad," "Let not sorrow dim your eye," and "Onward, then, to battle move," which made a fine hymn of what was really only a set of verses.

Frances Ridley Havergal wrote one of her best known hymns when she was a girl of fifteen. In fact, it was the first thing of any importance she ever penned. This is the pathetic hymn, "Thy Life Was Given For Me."

It was scribbled on the back of a circular in pencil and first read to an old, bedridden woman who liked it so much that the little girl repented of her first intention to burn it, and her father wrote the well known tune, Baca, to it.—London Tit-Bits.

Careless Driving.

As motorcars multiply in numbers it is evident that increasingly careful driving is called for. The driver who "hits her up" endangers not only his own safety, but the safety of other motorists. There are drivers who fail to slacken speed when they come to cross streets. There are drivers who dash around corners or across a boulevard at high speed. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the really competent driver always has his car under control; that he always drives on the theory that every other driver may be careless or may lose his head. Caution marks the competent driver. Recklessness belongs only to the jay.—Kansas City Times.

She Didn't Dance.

In 1736 a gentleman living in Hampshire, England, named Samuel Baldwin, died after a rather stormy and most unhappy married life. In his will he directed that all his vast estate be given his wife on condition that she should dance upon his grave from time to time. As the will further instructed that his remains should be taken by boat to the Needles and from there cast into the sea, this, of course, prevented his widow from fulfilling the conditions of the will and thus lost her the property. He, however, had his revenge for the various tempers she had exhibited and for the remarks she often made that she would yet "dance upon his grave."

Widows' Caps.

Who do widows wear caps? This is one of the things that every woman does not know. It is not because caps make them look pretty and interesting. It is because when the Romans were in England they introduced the custom of shaving the head as a sign of mourning. Of course women couldn't let themselves be seen with bald heads, so they made themselves caps.

So, though the hideous custom has passed, the caps remain.—London Answers.

Felt Like One of Them.

"Tuther day," related old Dad Sing, the cattle baron, who is temporarily in our midst, "I was rambling along in a street car when a batch of young fellers got aboard. I judged they were college students by their funny clothes and queer shaped heads. The car was pretty full, and they pushed and snorted back and forth in the aisle, tramping on people's feet and committing similar frivolities that a-way. Bimeby they all reared back and fetched loose a long yell. Then the nearest one to me took a look at me and says:

"'Well, my rural friend, don't you like it?'

"'Shore, I like it!' says I. 'I'm half witted myself.'"—Exchange.

That Poole Story.

In his book, "My Memories," Lord Suffield, who was considered "the very pink and model of fashion," sets us right about the well known story of Poole, the tailor, which is sometimes attributed to the Prince of Wales:

"As a matter of fact, it was not the Prince of Wales, nor was I the witty author of the repartee. The true story is that Poole went down to Bradgate park to visit Lord Stamford, and on his return he was asked by Alfred Montgomery, the wittiest man of his age, how he had enjoyed his visit and whom he had met. 'Well, sir,' replied Poole, 'the fact is that the company was rather mixed.' 'But, — it all, my good fellow,' retorted Montgomery, 'surely you did not expect them all to be tailors?'"

TOO HAUGHTY TO WORK.

The Lowells lived at 31 Lowndes square, having moved there from another house in the same square. Their establishment was not magnificent, but adequate, with a sufficient complement of servants. These servants were engaged for special posts in the "service," as is always the custom in England, and each was a stickler for his prerogatives and perquisites and quick to resent any demand that did not fall in the province of his sharply defined duties.

It so happened that in moving a carpet from the former house had been put down in the new one, leaving a few inches uncovered in a corner, which the furnishers had overlooked. As there was a dinner party at the embassy that night and Mrs. Lowell possessed a piece of the carpeting to cover the bare spot on the floor, she rang for one of the menservants and asked him if he would kindly tack it down for her. He drew himself up, distinctly offended in his pride.

"I beg your pardon, your excellency," he said, "but it is not my place to do that. I will ring for Alfred."

Alfred appeared, and his answer to the same request was:

"I beg pardon, your excellency, but it is not my place to lay carpets. I will call Charles."

And Charles came with the same answer. Mrs. Lowell called up, I think, every male servant in the house, but one and all stuck their noses in the air and looked with disdain upon the humiliating hammer and tacks. She then had them stand in a row while she herself proceeded to nail down the small corner of carpet and instantly dismissed them from her service.—Princess Lazarovich in Century.

Bargain Hunting.

An amusing story is told in connection with the early days of Sir J. B. Robinson, the South African millionaire. He was crossing the Vaal river in 1866, looking for diamonds. He asked the natives if they had seen any "pretty stones," and at last he found a man who had a diamond. It was a small stone, and the prospector offered him £10 for it, but he refused to part with it. He increased his offer to £12, but still the man refused.

"What will you take for it?" he was asked.

"I sent off to the nearest farm," says Sir J. B. Robinson in telling the story, "and bought twenty goats for £7 10s. and so got possession of my first diamond."—London Globe.

Fallibility of the Eyewitness.

When Professor F. C. Dockeray, in the psychological department of the University of Kansas, got into an altercation one day with the janitor, who entered the classroom and insisted on sweeping while Dockeray was lecturing, a number of students rushed to his rescue. The affair grew into a free for all fight, during which the janitor, who had drawn a revolver, was overpowered and disarmed. As a burly student grasped the pistol a shot was fired. As soon as order was somewhat restored the frightened and fleeing students reassembled and accounts were taken from them of the affair. All the students swore they had heard the shot, and several told of seeing the smoke from the revolver. Then Professor Dockeray told them it was an experiment, a fight had been planned carefully, and the shot of the revolver was from the outside of the building by a student posted there. The purpose of the experiment was to show the unreliability of information, even when furnished by an eyewitness.

The Best Treatment For Constipation

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better — no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Princess styles have come back with a rush. They seem to be a protest against the overtrimmed effects which prevailed during the summer months. At present the princess leads all others in handsome costumes, at least, and we find suggestions of it in even the simplest of garments.

The dress which is illustrated in the accompanying picture shows a frock which is simple enough for the house, although the addition of something fancy in the way of collar and cuffs will make it appropriate for the street if developed in suitable materials.

The entire front of the dress, including both waist and skirt, forms an unbroken panel. At each shoulder there is a small tuck which gives fulness over the bust, while the back of the waist remains plain. The closing is placed at the side of the front panel and may be made invisible or with buttons that show through. This last manner is newer.

The sleeves are either full length or shorter as the wearer prefers and if long they are finished in shirt style, open at the back of the hand and edged with a plain band cuff. If made short a turn back cuff is used and this and the collar should be of the same material.

The skirt is made with seven gores. The front gore forms part of the panel beginning at the neck, and the balance of the skirt is fitted neatly, flaring at the hem.

For street wear such materials as taffetas, serge and velveteen are liked for these frocks, while for home use cashmere, challie and other wash materials are employed.

The dress pattern, No. 7344, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires four yards of 44-inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27-inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE OLD NIPIGON LINE

PIONEER RAILWAY HAD A BRIEF AND PICTURESQUE CAREER.

It Has Served as a Line of Communication for Construction Armies of the Canadian Northern and the National Trans-Continental — Its Officials Were All Plain Men and Real Railroaders.

TO-DAY some discerning visitor to the old settlement of Red Rock — now called Nipigon — would have his curiosity aroused by a string of ties which drop from the limits of the town, down the face of a lofty and precipitous sandbank, across the Canadian Northern tracks, into the seething waters of the Nipigon River, which run at the rate of some eight miles per hour.

Talk of momentum grades, this nameless road can boast of the greatest momentum, outside of an incline railway or Swiss Funiculaire. If it were in any place that such a thing could be, one would suppose that this was a disused spur, but what business could any civilised, well conducted spur have had on the face of a sand cliff and what could the watery plunge at the bottom suggest but insanity and suicide? Up stream there is nothing but the forest, and the wild things, which make it their home, have no dealings with freight shipments, spur tracks, or industrial sidings. Down stream are Nipigon Bay and the open waters of Lake Superior, in short, the whole proposition appears freakish, if not futile.

Nor would the visitor's curiosity grow less if he came, as I did, in the search for an Indian burial mound of reputed antiquity, upon a trail winding its way through the woods back of Camp Alexander, the first portage; a trail of ties half hidden in brambles and waving grass, but still in fair condition and laid for the same obsolete type of narrow gauge as the water shute 12 miles lower down. Shades of Harriman, what is the meaning of this defunct line, apparently starting from nowhere and bound for the same place?, says a writer in Toronto Saturday Night.

The explanation is simple. While the Nipigon Forest Reserve is penetrated to-day by the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway System, in addition to which the C.P.R. crosses the river at a point where it broadens out into a landlocked arm of Lake Superior, and the N. T. R. touches the far northern shore of Lake Nipigon, there was an earlier railway to reach the heart of that picturesque and interesting region, which flourished unheeded by the outer world, and is now but a memory perpetuated by several thousands of grass grown spikes and ties.

Despite the absence of elaborate equipment, massive terminals, gilded officials, or advertising literature, its brief career was one of busy usefulness, for it served as an important line of communication for the construction armies of both the Canadian Northern Railway and the N.T.R. These lines, running from 40 to 100 miles north, and hundreds of miles east or west of the nearest distributing centres, felt the need of some more rapid method of transportation for material and supplies than the wilderness could afford, and so the Nipigon Construction Company came into being.

Building a forty-mile railroad does not appear to be much of a stunt, but the company's undertaking was more ambitious than would appear on the surface. In the first place, it is a drop of 240 feet from Lake Nipigon to Lake Superior which means an average northbound grade of more than 1 foot in a thousand, with a maximum as steep as you please. Having discovered that the only location suitable for their purpose involved a combined rail and water route, the second difficulty presented itself in the method of reaching the river, as hills rise sharply from the water's edge and the formation is generally the most solid variety of rock. Having got over this by the shortest cut, a final obstacle was presented by the river itself. Nipigon is really a chain of lakes, varying in length from three to eight miles, situated on gradually descending levels which are connected by turbulent streams that force their aggressive way through walls of rock with a resulting swiftness of current to which reference has already been made.

Finally, however, in the face of these and other difficulties of which the builders never complained and which will now certainly never be known, this first railroad through the heart of the Nipigon was completed, and direct service to the head of the Nipigon lake by water and rail for a distance of over 100 miles through the virgin forest was placed in regular operation.

Inhabitants still speak with reminiscent relish of how the Operating Department used to take a few turns with a rope round the axles of the light trucks in use and "Let her drop" into the water and the waiting crews; the return trip being made with less speed and more effort by oxen and of course donkey engines. We can fancy the cars crawling across the treacherous depths of Lake Helen with the sunlight blazing on the rugged, green-clad hills and the quaint Indian mission nestling beneath their heights. We can hear, too, the jests exchanged with the strain of the clumsy scows on which are perched laden trucks. We can hear too the jests exchanged between the half-breeds and the polyglot community of some C.N.R. construction camp as the river winds its tortuous way through the marshy meadows of the Indian Reserve. Arrived at Camp Alexander the trucks are slid onto the rails which jut out over the water from an embankment flush with the level of the decks, and so the miniature train is drawn through the cool silence or sunlit glades of the forest by an important, puffing little locomotive.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Nightfall and home and you!
Across the west the heavy shadows lie.
Shutting from out my heart the long, long day—
The empty day that held no speech with you
Who once did walk with me beside the way.

Nightfall and home and you!
Oh, blessed dusk that holds a little while,
Forgetfulness of all the world outside!
What care we for its little hurt and jar?

Nightfall and home and you!
One red star hangs above the wooded hill.
Guiding my eager feet along the way
To home and love and—you. Dear heart, dear heart,
What more has life to give at close of day?

—Florence Jones Hadley.

All housekeepers are not home makers. The housekeeper lets the house take precedence of the pleasure of the husband, and many bright happy hours with the children. The home maker may not be perfection personified. However, neatness and cleanliness is her motto. She never thinks of refusing a walk over the fields with her husband or a pleasant afternoon ride to a friend's on business. By so doing, she feels fresher and better to perform the duties that perchance were left undone. She tries to make home with her bright presence, though (maybe) storms of sorrow may have swept over it, the place where each member of the family can turn and feel there is love, patience, and guidance awaiting them.

* * *

If You Want to be Loved.

Don't find fault.

Don't believe all the evil you hear.

Don't jeer at anybody's religious belief.

Don't be rude to your inferiors in social position.

Don't repeat gossip, even if it does interest a crowd.

Din't go untidy on the plea that everybody knows you.

Don't contradict people even if you are sure you are right.

Don't underrate anything because you don't possess it.

Don't believe that everybody else in the world is happier than you.

Don't conclude that you never have had any opportunities in life.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friends.

Don't try to be anything else but a gentlewoman—and that means a woman who has consideration for the whole world, and whose life is governed by the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

* * *

The love between a mother and daughter is a very fair and gracious tie, but to gain it you must find the golden mean between priggishness and want of dignity, for you must enjoy life without being frivolous; you must guide unconsciously, so that the check is unnoticed; you must learn the art of making new friendships, to appreciate new impressions, to move with the times; and above all, you must never appear dowdy. It is a great matter; but alas! too common a one to neglect dress; it is absolutely imperative that the middle-aged woman be garbed becomingly and well. Dress to a woman is like the setting to a jewel. It is a duty they owe to themselves and to the world in general. We are always influenced by our surroundings and a well-dressed woman has the same effect on our senses as a charming picture or a melodious strain of music. Believe me, there is a dignity as well as a grace in dress which does much to influence those about us. It is the duty for every woman at all times of her life, to look as beautiful as possible.

* * *

How to be Loved in Old Age.

How seldom do you see a loveable old woman, whose age is as beautiful as was the bloom of her youth. And when you do, you wonder how it has happened? Well, this is how:

She learns how to forget disagreeable things.

She made whatever work she had to do congenial.

She did not lose sight of her illusions and would not think all the world wicked and unkind.

She helped the miserable and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost little and are treasures to be encouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by, and her reward is love and consideration in her old age, and she has learned the secret of a long and happy life.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

MUST BE NATURALIZED TO QUALIFY FOR PROMOTION

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The Packard Motor Car Company of Detroit, took the first steps yesterday to Americanize its own plant, and, by publishing its plans to other manufacturers, gave the start to a movement, which it hopes may become national in its scope, to make every American workingman, a real American and a citizen of the United States. Under the Packard plan promotion in the plant is to be restricted to citizens of the United States, whether native or foreign born.

No discrimination is to be made against foreign workmen. Those now employed by the Packard Company will not be disturbed in their work. Others may be employed as occasion arises, but one and all will be informed that advancement will depend, before anything else, on their citizenship in this country. The Packard Company has made this a pre-requisite without which promotion will be impossible.

THE WAR IS COMING CLOSE TO US

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS BURNED---FIVE KILLED

YOUNG MEN, DON'T YOU THINK IT'S TIME TO ENLIST!!

Public Opinion Blames Huns For Last Night's Big Fire

Chief of the Dominion Police and Other Officials However Do Not Think the Blaze Which Destroyed the Parliament Buildings was of Incendiary Origin---It is Feared That B. B. Law, Member of Parliament For Yarmouth, Lost His Life.

DENOUNCED BY A U. S. SENATOR

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Col. Sherwood, head of the Dominion Police, declared to-day that there is absolutely no ground for the rumours that the rfie was of incendiary origin. "That is impossible," he said. "It started right under the nose of the policeman." Col. Sherwood explained the rapid spread of the blaze by the fact that the reading room was full of papers. The Government has denied that a warning was given by the United States or from any other source.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Among the members generally feeling of thankfulness prevails that the fire was not much more serious from the standpoint of the loss of life. It was a quiet evening in the House, and there was but a small attendance of members. Only a few people were in the galleries. Had a full dress debate been under way with a crowded chamber and crowded galleries, the loss of life would have been appalling. It was equally fortunate that the Senate was not in session. Although the flames did not reach the Senate end of the building until a late hour, it is probable that members of the Upper House who are advanced in years, would have experienced difficulties in finding their way out of the building.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Madame Morine, one of the women who met death in the Parliament Building last night, formerly belonged to Ontario. Ten years ago she went on a visit to friends in Quebec, and there met M. Morine and her fate. They were soon married and now she had six children, and though she was in love with Ottawa, she was the mother over all, and would soon be home. She told friends here last night.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—It developed this afternoon that Sergeant-at-Arms Panet, saved the mace from destruction, and it was used at the temporary parliament buildings in the Museum at this afternoon's session.

No trace yet of J. B. Laplante, assistant clerk of the Commons, and it is feared he also was lost.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—There are some people of German extraction in the employ of the Government, one of the heads of the Mines Branch is a German who came here from the United States when a young man. One of the private secretaries is of German parentage. The superintendent of dredging is another. There are two others, one in the Observatory, and one at the Experimental Farm. So far as can be learned there are the only ones at least in high ranks. They are all naturalized Canadians of years' standing, and not subject to the remotest suspicion.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Monetary losses of Canada variously estimated at between three million and five million dollars. No insurance.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—C. R. Stewart, chief doorkeeper of the Commons, states that he ran into the reading room and attempted to stamp the fire out. "I am sure that it was accidental, and that no enemy caused it," he said. "I think that perhaps some member was smoking in there and dropped a stub or a match."

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Twenty-one Zeppelins and eight other German dirigibles have been destroyed or lost since the beginning of war, aeronautic writers estimated to-day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The destruction of the Ottawa House of Parliament was denounced to-day as wanton and barbarous and an unwarranted crime of incendiarism, in a resolution by Senator Thomas, of Colorado. Senator Gallinger inquired what proof Thomas had that the fire was incendiary, and from what source he received his information, and from what source the fire started, German, British, French or American. Thomas refused to answer. His resolution described the burned buildings as one of the most beautiful pieces of architecture on the North American Continent, and declared the destruction of civil buildings by incendiarism in time of war was as unjustified by any principle of civilization. At Thomas' request the resolution was simply read and referred.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Heavy artillery fighting, particularly in Alsace, was reported in this afternoon's War Office communication, but there was no indication that the great German offensive forecasted by military critics had commenced.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—It is believed now that the death list will include one member of the House of Commons, B. B. Law, member for Yarmouth, N.S.

It is stated that Law was at the House last night at the time that the fire broke out, and has not been seen since.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—The man in the street is sure the Germans did it. "They knew in Berlin by now that their reprisals on Canada have started," said one citizen to-day.

Sir Thos. White said this morning that he took no stock in the incendiary idea. He was one of the last to leave the reading room. The racks were fifty years old and dry as tinder.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Reuter's Athens correspondent says he has received a report from a good source that an encounter between Bulagrians and Entente Allied troops took place Tuesday on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier. The Bulgarians fired on French detachments reconnoitring at the point where the Greek-Serbian-Bulgarian frontier meets, but the Allies repulsed the Bulgarians.

A German Zeppelin made another attempt to raid Salonika Wednesday night, but was heavily bombarded by British artillerymen and driven off, according to despatches received here yesterday. The dirigible pitched violently in retreating and is believed to have been hit.

The Salonika correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"Two German regiments have arrived north of Lake Doiran, near the frontier to the north of Salonika, replacing two Macedonian Bulgarian regiments. These are the first Germans to appear.

"The Turks have three infantry regiments and four cavalry squadrons at Gumuljina.

"As a reprisal for the Zeppelin attacks here Monday night, 16 aeroplanes went to Patrich, 53 miles northeast of Salonika, where there are large enemy camps, and dropped 161 bombs, of which 14 were incendiary. Twenty-six fires were started. The aeroplanes all returned safely."

MISS B. CURTIS WINNER OF THE CAPITAL PRIZE

Results of the Dollar Day Competition Announced---10,807 Were Dropped Into the Box

LIST OF WINNERS

Miss Bertha Curtis was the first prize winner in the estimating contest that was a feature of Dollar Day, yesterday. She estimated the number of blanks filled in and dropped into the ballot box at the Examiner Office would be 10,790. The correct number was 10,807, so that Miss Curtis was but seventeen out. The number of blanks was less than last year, but the volume of business done was much greater, 25,000 blanks having been given out, which indicates that a large number of people were out after the splendid values given rather than a chance to win the prizes. Here are the results:

GUNNER BERT HAMILTON
33rd Battery

ENTHUSIASTIC AT APSLEY OVER THE RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

Thirty-five Men Have Been Secured for the Apsley Detachment of the 93rd---Nineteen More Taken on the Strength of the Battalion This Morning---To-day's Military News.

That the pioneers of Apsley and the north country are enthusiastically taking part in the campaign for the 93rd Battalion is the report brought back from Apsley by Lt.-Col. Johnston, Capt. Munro and Major J. H. Eastwood, who returned last night after an official visit, during which twelve recruits were added to the Apsley detachment. It speaks well for the physique of the men who are offering themselves at Apsley that there was not one rejection among the twelve examined. A Khaki Club has been formed in the village, and Lt.-Col. Johnston presided at a very successful concert which was held. The drilling of the thirty-five men at Apsley is being carried out by Lt. Hughes and Sergt. W. Theobald, and the men are making rapid progress.

Mr. Simmons, of Peterborough, has received a cablegram from his son, Gunner Ned Simmons, of the 4th Battery, saying that he is in London on leave.—Signaller E. J. Paunes, of Peterborough, is also away from the front for a week on a holiday in England.

Orderly Room Sergt. King and C. I. M. Sergt. Manley have returned to duty, after having been absent through illness.

Mrs. Miller, 193 Reid Street, has received a letter, dated Jan. 16th, from her husband, Gunner T. Miller, 1st Contingent, now at the Duchess of Connaught's Red Cross Hospital, Bucks., England. Gunner Miller is progressing nicely, walking around on a cane. In his letter he says he received a Christmas card from Ex-Mayor Buller, whom he wishes to thank for his kind remembrance.

The 57th Chapter, I. O. D. E., are tendering a reception to the men of the 93rd Battalion in the Recruiting Rooms, Simcoe Street, from 7.30 to 9 o'clock on the evening of Tuesday Feb. 8th. A cordial invitation is extended to citizens generally to attend.

J. E. R. MUNRO, Captain,
Adjutant, 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

The following marching song is contributed.

We don't want to fight
Butt by jinks if we do,
Was the song of British tars,
And Tommy Atkins too;
We didn't want to fight
But the Germans forced us to
So now we'll show those kultured cads
What Britain's sons can do.

Chorus—

We don't want to fight
The song has changed 'tis true,

BUSINESS WILL BE PROCEEDED WITH

SOME NARROW ESCAPES

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 4.—It is feared here this morning that the toll of death in the destruction of the House of Commons is not yet complete. In the morgue lie the blackened and burned bodies of Mesdames Bray and Merin, guests of Madame Speaker Sevigny, whom they assisted on Monday in her official state reception. Buried in the ruins somewhere, it is believed are the remains of Robert Fanning, the Speaker's waiter, Alphonse Desjardins, a Dominion policeman, and his uncle of the same name. The public gallery is believed to have been the scene of the death of several. Eight soldiers were seen to leave the gallery with their mouths muffled with their handkerchiefs, against terrific clouds of smoke which rolled in. In addition it is feared that various secretarial employees not known very well may have been trapped in countless small and intricate rooms throughout the four stories of the great structure.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister, arrived at his office in the east block at nine o'clock after a broken night's rest. He is much worried about the awful disaster which has overtaken the capital, but faces the situation calmly. Sir Robert said that he would immediately consult his colleagues and the heads of the various departments in regard to arrangements for the continuing of the session of parliament. Sir Robert said that business would be proceeded with, with all possible despatch.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.— Premier Borden stated at ten o'clock this morning that the Government had decided that the Parliament will continue its session in the Victoria National Museum. The House as constituted this afternoon will be a very democratic body. It will be shorn of all forms and ceremony. Just no wit is not known whether the Parliamentary mace was saved, but the probabilities are it was left on the table of the House when the members made a rush for the exits. There is absolutely no doubt that the destruction of the Parliament Buildings will shorten the session appreciably and have a settling effect on the political situation. Deprived of their accommodation and conveniences, the members will not be disposed to remain in the capital a day longer than is necessary, and it is freely predicted this morning that the House will rise before the end of the month. The Premier will make a formal statement this afternoon. It is believed that the bill to extend the parliamentary term for one year, necessary war measures and estimates and a small amount of pressing private legislation will constitute the parliamentary bill of fare. The prediction is also made this morning that any possibility there has been of a general election has passed away.

OTTAWA, Feb. 4. — Irregular columns of smouldering debris are all that remain of that imposing pile which for half a century has been the home of the Senate and the Commons. The front and side walls remain, but the roofs are down, while the interior is absolutely gutted. The upper portion of that majestic tower which surmounted the whole, has toppled to the ground, a crumpel mass of iron and masonry. Only one thing was saved,

LOCAL MEMBER OF 21ST BATT. ON WOUNDED LIST

Pte. R. H. Muir, of 210 Dublin St., Admitted Into Hospital at Etaples, His Wife is Official Informed

THIRD TO BE WOUNDED

Mrs. R. H. Muir, 210 Dublin street received a telegram this morning to the effect that her husband, Pte. Robert Hart Muir of the 21st Battalion, had been wounded, and admitted to hospital at Etaples, France.

Pte. Muir is the third Peterborough member of the 21st Battalion to appear on the casualty list. Pte. H. Ballard and Pte. Chambers having been previously reported wounded.

No particulars have been received in regard to the wounding of Pte. Muir, whose wife and children reside on Dublin street.

Brock Street Rink Skating To-night

93rd Battalion Band in Attendance —Ice in Grand Condition

Owing to a mistake in not changing the advertisement for the Rink last evening, quite a number of skaters were disappointed when reaching Brock Street Rink, to find there was no skating. The City League opened its season last night, instead.

To-night there is grand ice, and with the 93rd Battalion Band in attendance there will likely be a good crowd.

To-morrow, there is skating afternoon and evening. In the evening, from 7.30.

Ice cleaned at half-time. Don't overlook the fact that there is afternoon skating throughout the week, also.

WINNERS IN THE EXAMINER CONTEST

C. Brownscombe 165 Murray St. Estimated the Exact Number of Coppers in Jar

The following is a list of the prize winners in the Examiner Contest. Some of the Examiner estimates have been deposited in other of the city and there may be some change, but it is thought to be correct. The list will be republished to-morrow again, and confirm the winners.

1—C. Brownscombe—2246 .... $10.00

MISS VOADEN WON THE DISHES

Mis Rhoda Voaden, Gilmour street was the lucky winner of the magnificent set of dishes donated by Turnbulls for the closest estimate of the number of individual sales made in that store during the day. Miss Voaden's estimate was very close to the correct number. Mr. W. R. Morris, chartered accountant certifies to the correctness of the count and of the result.

FRIDAY, FEB. 4, 1916

THE CAPITAL CALAMITY.

The incendiary fire at Ottawa last night is a capital calamity in a double sense—it destroyed the parliament buildings of Canada, the most splendid and picturesque pile of Gothic architecture on the continent, destroyed in an hour four million dollars worth of buildings, the pride of the Dominion, the crowning glory of the Capital City, and it will take at least ten millions to replace them. Five persons lost their lives, and many members of parliament were injured among them the member for West Peterborough, but, it is a pleasure to state, not seriously.

It is too early and details are yet too meagre to appraise fully the extent of the calamity; but there is one outstanding fact—the great fire disaster was the work of incendiaries—and there can be no doubt but these are Germans. The Providence (Rhode Island) Journal, which was instrumental in exposing the plotting and incendiarism of members of the German Embassy, in its story of the fire at Ottawa, this morning, says that it notified the Canadian Department of Justice that a plot was matured by employees of the German Embassy to destroy Rideau Hall, the parliament buildings, and munitions plants in Canada. Whether or not the Department acted on this information and took measures to prevent the disaster is not known, and it is now too late to inquire into such a detail. But the fact stands out prominently that we all in Canada, the Dominion, the Provincial and the municipal authorities must wake up to our danger, and change our attitude towards the Teuton element of our population, especially the aliens. We have been too tolerant; we have shut our eyes to the danger of the plotting fiends who, there is reason to believe and fear, are moving fearlessly amongst us, plotting destruction, whose place and hour none can foresee or foretell. We are confronted with the task of organizing to fight the enemy abroad, but the lurking, sneaking enemy at home, must also be watched and foiled. We can, in a small sense, realize the conditions in the war zone, in Europe, where ghastly deeds, to which the Ottawa disaster is a trifle, are the incidents of every hour and minute.

Parliament will meet again to-day in temporary quarters; for there is still work for them to do. There is more need now than ever, that it should knuckle down to its work. Its first work should be to devise means, to meet the menace of plotting and destruction that overshadows us loudly. Then Parliament cannot adjourn without providing money to equip Canada's new levy and extending its own life which will expire before another session is due.

Parliament must continue, for, though every public building in Canada were blown up, we must keep the machinery of the nation moving. We are fighting for the preservation of the blessings of a free parliament, and the settled course of life, the exercise of freedom, and the privileges of freedom of which it is at once the instrument and symbol.

We have in this last act of frightfulness this ghastly fulfilment of the lust of destruction, an example of the spirit of savagery we in Canada will come under unless we unite to crush the German militarism, whose essence is the ambition of world domination and oppression and destruction for destruction's sake. Any Canadian young man who has red blood in his veins must feel it rise to the boiling point when he sees brought home to him and his home, the barbarities for which the world can be saved only by his help and the help of others, whose personal freedom, whose right to quiet life and the freedom and similar rights of his family and fellow Canadians are at stake.

THE LION'S WHELPS.

We Canadians are inclined to be proud of ourselves and of our country; to boast that we are greatest of the overseas dominions. In some ways we are; in bulk of territory and extent of resources. But it is doubtful if we can claim superiority over, say, little New Zealand, in the matter of spirit, pluck and enterprise. We have before us a copy of the special war number of the Auckland "Weekly Express," a splendidly illustrated 80-page number—not only full of war illustrations, but with many advertisements, showing that in industrial importance and enterprise New Zealand, for her inches, is quite abreast of, if not superior, in many respects, to any of the overseas dominions. This special edition is devoted to "New Zealand at the Dardanelles," that glorious but disastrous expedition that served to show the splendid pluck and fighting spirit and quality of our cousins from the other side of the world. We are not surprised at this when we understand their conception of duty, the reasons "why we are fighting" in this war, as expressed by the "Express":

"We are fighting because we are one of the Britains beyond the seas, over which King George reigns. Because one or other of the British Isles reared our fathers, and was beloved by them as their home, and we know it to be our home, too, though we may never see it. Because we are British in blood, in sentiment, in pride of our race and its past achievements. We are fighting vigorously and enthusiastically, because we see plainly that Germany threatens our liberty, and Wordsworth spoke a true word of his countrymen when he said "We must be free or die." This it is which more than all else reconciles New Zealand women to their sufferings and sacrifices, and would, if occasion arose, cause them to appear in the trenches beside their men folk, content to suffer hardships, wounds, and death, but not to suffer loss of liberty.

With this spirit animating the New Zealanders, it is no wonder that a little country of 104,000 square miles—about one-quarter the size of Ontario—with a population of a million, sent 5,000 of the best fighting men, living, to the Dardanelles, has under arms about 45,000. The lion's whelps are true to blood. Wherever they are found—under the southern cross or under the great bear—they show the same spirit, the same pluck, the same indomitable love of liberty, the same sympathy with humanity as the parent races in the little isles in the North Sea that dominate in material and moral force the world of civilization. We in Canada are doing our part in preserving to ourselves our Empire and the world the priceless boon of that liberty which men of the British breed must have to live.

A NEW TROUBLE TOO MUCH BRAINS.

In this practical world in the matter of doing things, the difficulty generally met is to get a man "big enough for the job." In the matter of this great war Britain was in luck enough to find the man to fill the bill in the person of Kitchener; the French had Joffre, the Italians, Cadorno, and Canada has Sir Sam Hughes. Canada also leads in another way, in the matter of munitions; we seem to have for the chairman of the munitions board a man "too big for the job." The Ottawa Free Press says:

Those who know Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, will not be surprised that he has had trouble with other members of that organization. Nobody questions Mr. Flavelle's honesty on his patriotism or his business ability, but it is doubtful if he can work with other big business men on a munitions board, where his colleagues are supposed to have some say.

Mr. Flavelle has so long completely dominated business ventures in which he is engaged that it is easy to imagine him trying to run this new board according to his ideas only. He sees the way clearly and all he asks is that he be allowed to forge ahead, all others following on. It isn't likely any idea of compromise ever enters his head. He is anxious for results and he must have his own way.

But on the munitions board there are other men who have been accustomed to do big things in their own way — sometimes differently from Mr. Flavelle—and the clash comes.

Zealous patriots have often made apparent failures in the same way before. Apparently when a government wants the services of a big commanding financier he ought to be given rubber stamp colleagues or else none at all.

This is truly, a trying situation, a regrettable embarasse des riches. It comes to this, that Mr. Flavelle must either be provided with colleagues without brains or give up the job, for we must have munitions. If the Free Press is serious, it becomes a serious thing. If we adopt and act upon its reasoning we must rely on one-man power. If we could do this it would be a great saving in money and promote efficiency in public service. If we had a premier who so dominated his colleagues in bigness of brain and ability, we could dispense with the other fifteen or sixteen cabinet ministers. But unfortunately we have not and never had a prime minister with the dominating intellect of the chairman of the munitions board—the man "too big for the job." The explanation won't do. If we still have difficulties in the matter of handling the munitions matter, the cause is not due to top-heaviness of intellect and ability on the Board. There are some things that die hard. The patronage system seems to have an indistructible vitality. Like the fabled hydra, cut off a head of the patronage ogre and another sprouts out in another place. We scotched a head or two of the patronage hydra when we investigated horse deals and other deals of a like nature in result, but others sprouted out in the old shell committee and other directions, and now we have trouble in the new munitions board. Is the trouble graft or excess of gray matter? Somebody try an explanation "that will wash."

WEAKNESS OF DEFENCE.

"Each new raid discloses some weakness in our preparations. We suggest, in the light of Monday night's experiences, that the Government might well revise methods of dealing with railway traffic in case of Zeppelin alarm. Some dislocation of traffic is inevitable, but necessary steps ought to be taken with the least possible inconvenience to the public, which was not the case on Monday. A number of trains, heavily laden with passengers, were suddenly held up wherever they happened to be and kept standing for hours without explanation. At some stations crowds were allowed to gather, waiting for trains. A single bomb dropped in one of these buildings would have caused a shocking massacre. When it is known that train service will be suspended the travelling public ought to be warned not to congregate in stations. The studied air of mystery thrown over the interruption of traffic on Monday was calculated to make the timid uneasy."—London Times.

TO A SOGER'S LOUSE.

(Written in the trenches in Flanders by a private of the Dandy Ninth, the following humorous verses are characteristic of the cheerful spirit of the troops in face of the enemy.)

Wee scampering irritatin' scunner,
Hoo dare ye worry me, I wunner;
As if I hadna lots ta dae
Blookin' the road tae aud Calais
Without ye.

Ye hardly let me hae a dose,
For ye're paradin' richt across
Ma back, ma neck, an' doon ma spin,
Thinkin', me doot, ye're dain' fine,
Sookin' ma bluid.

When at ma country's ca' I came
Tae fecht for Beauty, King an' hame,
I read ma Yellow Form twice—
But it said naught about feechin' lice,
Or I'd hae gibbered.

When "Little Willies" skil ma heid,
An' me about tae draw a bead,
I fain would stop tae scart ma back
Tae shift ye aff the bitten track
Afore I fire.

When through the shirt of Sister Sue
I search maist carefully for you
I smile to think the busy wench
Nair dreams her seams mak' sic a trench
Tae gie ye cover.

What Labyrinthine dugouts, too,
Ye're makin' in oor kilts the noo!
Ye're reinforcements tak the bun
Encouraged by the Flanders sun,
Tae keep us lively.

Gott strafe ye, little kittlin' beast,
Ye maybe think ye'll mak a feast
When next ye try to promenade
Across ma kist.

The mixture in the bottle here
Is bound tae mak' ye disappear,
Ain dose, they say, will dae the trick,
As shure as death.

IS THE MUDDLING IN THE MATTER OF MUNITIONS YET GOING ON?

Is it not about time that the whole business of munition-making in Canada was placed on a business-like basis, and the public given a plain straightforward statement as to what is being done? So far we have had, from the authorities, nothing but boasting about the wonderful orders brought to Canada, and the astonishing number of pounds of steel that it will take to fill these orders. From other sources, however, it would appear that, except for the fine enterprise shown by a few private firms, the whole business has been exploited and bungled.

The recent statement issued by the Imperial Munitions Board has vastly increased public anxiety and suspicion. This statement showed that from a business point of view the prices charged were altogether out of reason, and announced that orders were being held up for want of fuses, the making of which the old Shell Committee never fostered. That, however, is not all. It is now made to appear that the members of the Imperial Board are at loggerheads with themselves and with the Government. It is said there has been a good deal of trouble over the order for a million shell fuses, which was one of the first pieces of business let under the chairmanship of Mr. Flavelle. In this case the allegation is that the contract was not let to the lowest responsible tenderer for the business, but the people who got it were not upon unfriendly terms with some members of the Board.

One despatch sent out from Ottawa states that "An indication of how things have been going upon the new Munitions Board is found in the relations which Mr. Flavelle has established between himself and Mr. J. A. Vaillancourt, of the Board, who has resigned. It seems that Mr. Vaillancourt took his responsibilities for placing large orders seriously, and intimated to Chairman Flavelle that this was his attitude. Apparently Mr. Flavelle did not want too much interference from his associates upon the Board, and gave Mr. Vaillancourt to understand that he would not be expected to give a great deal of his time to the business of the new Imperial Munitions Board, even though he had been appointed a member. Recently Mr. Flavelle invited Mr. Vaillancourt to sign vouchers for some thirty-five million dollars. Mr. Vaillancourt is the president of the Hochelaga Bank, and from his experience in finance feels that there is serious responsibility in large financial transactions. As he had nothing to do with the letting of the contracts he declined to put his name to the vouchers; and instead resigned. So far there has not been much success met with in efforts to get some responsible gentleman to take his place." As comment on the truth or otherwise of this despatch, it is denied to-day from Ottawa that Mr. Vaillancourt has resigned.

Obviously there is trouble somewhere behind the scenes. And obviously all this muddle and all these cross-purposes cannot continue. So war Canada's part in the making of munitions has been nothing but one national humiliation after another. Let there be an absolute end to the exploitation of the Empire's need for private purposes. Let there be an end to this bickering and muddle. Let us call for a national service in the making of munitions comparable to the national service we are rendering by means of the men in khaki. Let the excessive profits be cut out, and the awarding of contracts be done on such a basis as to place them above all suspicion of patronage and graft. Let our Government railway and marine shops be placed into the work of making shells at cost. But above all, let the bickering and jealousy at headquarters be stopped. If Mr. Flavelle is the right man at the head of the work, he should be defended. If he is not, he should go. There is now much talk in Government quarters of the appointment of a Minister of Munitions. If such a course be adopted, the country should first be given the reasons for deposing the present Munitions Board, and should be absolutely assured that the new move is not another bit of patronage, designed to give a fat post to a party favourite.—

KEEPS PEACE
RIOT QUIET

German Government Forbids Any Newspaper Mention, Correspondent Says.

Charges that the German Government, while allowing the press to discuss the opposition to the voting of further war credits expressed by the minority of the Socialist section by the Reichstag, forbids the slightest reference to the fast that there have been attempts at street demonstrations in favor of peace, are contained in a letter smuggled out of Berlin and printed in a recent number of the Swiss Socialist paper, the Berner Tagwacht. Rumors of popular race demonstrations in the streets of the German capital during the December session of the Reichstag have reached this country both by cable and letter, but have been denied by the German news agencies, and copies of German papers covering the period mentioned contain no accounts of any anti-war parades in Berlin, or anywhere else in the empire.

The letter to the Tagwacht, which does not corroborate any of the stories of stern repression by the police and the shooting down of many of the demonstrants, current outside of Germany, but lays stress upon the suppression of news regarding the anti-war movement, reads, in part, as follows:

"The Government forbids the publication of news regarding the street demonstrations for two reasons. If twenty Deputies in the Reichstag protest against the continuance of the war by voting against the war credits, the servile press can easily say, 'It's only an echo of the old position of the Social Democrats; these twenty disturbers are envious of Herr Liebknecht's laurels, 'and can continue along this line. But when thousands and tens of thousands brave the threat of the most severe punished and go into the street to demonstrate against the war, the matter is too big to be explained away with pretty phrases.

"The Government knows well enough that there is great dissatisfaction in the ranks of the workers. Peace is the universal topic of conversation in the factories, the working class districts, the street cars, and the saloons. Consequently, any news of a labor demonstration in the street would surely have an inspiring effect. And the thing the Government fears the most is the possibility of the great mass of the people joining in the demonstrations.

"But, even if the newspapers hush them up and they are not mentioned in letters to the soldiers in the field, is it not likely that the reports will be carried back to the front by the soldiers now in the hospitals in the big cities when they return to be fresh fodder? And if there are serious clashes between the police and the demonstrants, how is the matter to be kept still, and, if it cannot be kept still, what effect will it have pon the soldiers in the trenches?

"Already the news of the advanced cost of living has discouraged the men, because it presents 'the good German brethren' for whom or soldiers are bleeding in their true colors. How will the workingmen in the soldiers' coats feel, and what will they think and—who knows?—and do when they learn that their fathers, brothers, and wives are being treated by the patriotic police as they feared to be by the Czar's Cossacks?"

SCARCITY OF GLASS.

There is a great scarcity of glass bottles abroad owing to the destruction of some of the great glass manufacturing centres of France and Belgium in the war.

BARBAROUS ACT.

"Something must be done to safeguard human life in this country, and punish those who commit these barbarous acts. The British public has no desire to hear that German women and children have been slaughtered by British bombs, but it feels that the point has been reached when vigorous steps are necessary to halt these German manifestations of frightfulness."—London Telegraph.

The Connecting Link.

The connecting link between the merchant and his customer is the newspaper advertisement. In it the merchant may make plain to the housewife or the householder, the advantages of his store and the commodities he has to offer, in a way that would be impossible otherwise, because of the limited time, and the interruptions when the customer visits the store.

When people go out to shop, they want to get what they need, and go home again. They want the business news, but they want it when they have time at their disposal. You can give it to them through the advertising columns.

British Steamer Gives Brave But Short Fight

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 4.—Sir Edward Merewether, head of the Sierra Leone Colony, who was landed from the Appam, gave the following account of the fight between the Appam's captor and the British steamer Clan MacTavish:

"While we held to our course the cruiser changed hers and made straight for the British ship.

"To all appearances the cruiser was the quite offensive lumbering freighter that we had mistaken her to be. But some sharp-eyed sailor must have read her real identity aright, for the three-inch gun the Clan MacTavish carried suddenly belched and a shell went screaming across the water and buried itself a scant fifty feet abaft the cruiser.

"Then fell away railings and deckhouses, and the Germans let go a broadside full at the Clan MacTavish.

"It was a fine fight, if one-sided, for all of a half hour. We well knew the Britisher had no chance, but we could not help admiring her pluck as she continued to bark away with her one little gun long after the German shells had set her afire in a half dozen different places.

Two Torpedoes Fired.

"Finally the Germans discharged two torpedoes from tubes mounted on the forward deck. Both the projectiles struck home. The Clan MacTavish heeled over as if some giant had attruck her a sudden blow—and within a very short space she had disappeared.

"The Germans again proved that there is at least one breed of Teuton who knows and practises the laws of humanity. They lowered boats with all possible speed and rowed to the spot where the Britisher had gone down in a search for survivors. Four of these survivors were at length brought to us badly wounded, but still full of fight. We could not resist the impulse to give the game lads a rousing cheer as they were brought over the side. And even our German captors applied an unbegrudging approval."

JAPANESE OPPOSED CHINA JOINING WAR

And the Benefits of Project to China, They Argued, Would Be Very Slight.

TOKIO, Feb. 4.—The suggestion of the Entente Allies to bringing China into the war on their side is unfavorably received in Japan. The press has voiced unmistakable antagonism to the project.

It is not true, as some Japanese papers have said, that Japan was not consulted by the Allies on the question. As a matter of fact, the project was communicated to Baron Ishii, Minister for Foreign Affairs, by the Ambassadors of the Entente powers, who at the same time requested the support of the Japanese Government.

Baron Ishii explained that Japan could not join in the project because such an idea was incompatible with Japan's policy, which is based upon a localization of the war, and not its extension. The Minister thought that if China abandoned her neutrality, endless complications would arise with the German and Austrian residents in China, which could only tend to disturb the peace of the Far East. He said he doubted whether these complications were worth while and whether the benefits from the step would be sufficiently great to warrant the risks. It would be better, Japan thought, to reach the goal of the Allies by other means which Japan was ready and willing to discuss.

Japan's position does not indicate any division between Japan and the Allies, it is stated. The Chinese question is regarded by Japanese as of the greatest importance in connection with the future policies of Japan in the Orient and, indeed, the entire question of the development of the Far East. In considering the politics of the Orient the fact is to be borne in mind that Japan undoubtedly will pursue the doctrine that she is entitled to take the predominating role in Oriental affairs. She feels herself responsible for the peace in Asia and thinks that it is her destiny to guide the development of China in a friendly manner.

If China were to enter the Entente group and have a voice in the peace conference at the end of the war, Japan, it is said, must take account of the probable attitude of China toward the interests of Japan in the Far East. If, for example, China were to oppose the cession by Germany of Tsing-tao and the German islands in the South Pacific, it might prove disturbing to the interests of Japan.

The Asahi sees no necessity of the project which, was said to be designed to preserve peace in the Orient. The newspaper comments:

"The Allies have left in Japan's hand the task of looking after the maintenance of peace in the Orient, which task Japan admirably accomplished, and is still doing. The Allies approved Japan's move in warning China against her monarchy restoration scheme, from her sincere desire to preserve the peace in the Far East. All these testify to the Allies' trust in Japan, to whom the Allies have commissioned the task of looking after affairs in the Orient. Viewed from this point the proposal of the Allies is absurd.

"Supposing that the Allies intend to induce China to join the Entente with a view to preventing China being made a catspaw at the hands of Germany, the Allies' plan is an idle dream, as they would never derive any benefit from China, which is in a chaotic condition, and can give no substantial support to the Allies'

The Hochi Shimbun, which is owned by Katsundo Minoura, Minister of Communications, warns the Japanese that the future will undoubtedly witness remarkable commercial activity by Americans in China. While the allied powers are engaged in a life-and-death struggle in Europe and the Near East, there are signs that the United States is beginning to start commercial enterprises, independently or in conjunction with Chinese, on the Asiatic continent and on the Pacific. Conspicuous among these are a Chino-American bank, a Chino-American steamship company, and a Chino-American commercial museum.

With the enormous wealth in her hands, the newspaper says, the United States is in an advantageous position to control international commerce, and no one doubts that the trade of all other nations in China will ere long be surpassed by America.

The newspaper points out that China has for some time been the only lucrative market for Japanese products, and the future of Japan depends on the development of economic relations with the neighboring republic. Nevertheless, Japanese business men and bankers adopt a passive attitude, in spite of the fact that idle money is plentiful at home and the country's specie reserve continues to increase as a result of the war. Politicians and business men are bent on discussing domestic affairs.

The hope is expressed by the journal, however, that, instead of trying to harass the Government in regard to domestic questions, business men will turn their attention to international affairs, especially to China, where trade opportunities are inexhaustible.

MANAGING A HUSBAND.

Do not hesitate to remind your husband every few days that you have nothing decent to wear. Never have had since you were married. Ask him as often as possible: "Why is it we never have anything like other people—never go anywhere?"

Do not fail to tell him now and then that he has been hard up for money ever since you were married.

Do not forget to twit him with the fact that he took you out of a comfortable home and buried you in an obscure out of the way place, and that he never has any time to go anywhere with you.

Do not forget to remind your husband often that your children do not dress as other children do; that the girls should take music lessons from the best teachers and that they should have a first-class piano and other things to correspond.

FEARS GERMANS WILL EXTERMINATE SERBIANS

LYONS, France, Feb. 4.—M. Muchkoritch, the Montenegrin Premier, to-day said the Austrians had threatened to exterminate the Serbian race and he was afraid they would if there were no witness to their acts, the diplomatic representatives having all left.

He declared he was going to see the American Ambassador in Paris in an effort to interest him in the fate of his countrymen. Perhaps, he added, it would be possible to form an American relief committee.

The remaining Serbians numbered at least 300,000 and were exposed to great suffering. If the army could not reach Durazzo it would be forced to disperse in the Albanian mountains, for the Austrian occupants of San Giovanni di Medua had cut off its telegraph.

Must Get Better Fall Fair Judges

LINDSAY, February 4.—An improved method of selecting judges for fall fairs was urged at the annual convention of the Association of Fairs and Exhibitions on Tuesday. President J. C. Stuart explained that though they had as good a system of selecting judges as any in America, yet owing to incorrect information being supplied by local secretaries, the best men could not always be obtained.

President Stuart also suggested that rural school fairs and the regular agricultural fairs be united. W. J. Connelly of Cobden proposed that the province be asked to levy a rate of one-tenth of a mill on the dollar for support of the competitions in field crops. This would cost only $150,000, and he considered the expenditure was justified.

Food Conditions in Russian Cities Are Improving

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 4.—Russian papers arriving here say the food conditions in Petrograd, Moscow and other large cities slowly are getting better. There is less suffering among the poorer classes than three months ago, because the new minister of the interior, Chwostow, is making strenuous efforts to bring provisions in sufficient quantities to the crowded centers of population.

The freight service of the railroads is less demoralized than in October, but is still leaves much to be desired. The government, however is not to blame for this, as it really endeavors to stamp out the corruption and inefficiency which almost caused a rebellion of the working classes.

Recently several high officials were sentenced to long prison terms or deportation to Siberia, because they accepted bribes from speculators and held up food trains which were intended to relieve the distress in different cities.

Only in Riga are the conditions still bad. It is almost impossible to bring enough foodstuffs to this city, as the railroads are crowded with transports carrying troops, war material and army provisions. Meat often is not to be had for weeks, and when a shipment arrives no purchaser gets more than one pound. Sugar is so high that it cannot even be bought by the wealthier middle class. A wholesale dealer recently obtained a shipment of 80,000 pounds, but when the sugar arrived it was confiscated by the military authorities for the use of the army.

BATTLES WON BY SOLDIERS FEET

Sounds peculiar, does it not? But quite correct. A military expert says: "Much of the success of the Canadian Army depends upon its feet!" Napoleon said: "Wars are won by marching." Imagine an army with blistered, sore, frost-bitten feet! What good would it be?

Zam-Buk applied to sore feet acts like magic. It soothes soreness, cures blisters, frost-bite, and chilblains; and if used regularly keeps the feet in first-class condition. For chapped hands, cold cracks, and sores due to chafing, blistering from trenching-gum, etc., Zam-Buk is fine. At the front everybody praises Zam-Buk. One soldier writes: "On the retreat from Mons (a 37-mile march) not one man who used Zam-Buk on his feet, fell out." Be sure to include Zam-Buk in your next parcel to "the front."

FARMERS FEAR THAW WILL BE DANGEROUS

Believe Fall Wheat Has Been Seriously Harmed

That the farmers of Peterborough county look upon the mild spell of January with grave concern was amply demonstrated to-day when an Examiner reporter interviewed a number of them on the market. Unless conditions improve a lot in February and March, they say, the fall wheat is liable to be almost a complete loss, and it is feared that the freezing and thawing in January has been sufficient to ruin a big portion of the crop already.

"DADDY-OF-THEM-ALL" IS AT THE FRONT—Can any Canadian soldier beat this? Here are the six sons of Sergt. Aldridge of the West Kent Regiment now in Flanders. The sergeant served in the Boer War, and has been in civilian life most ever since. The family lives in one of the villages in the hop-field country in the south of England.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SWEDEN IS READY TO JOIN IN WITH GERMANY

Gustav Has Army of 600,000—Pro-German Sentiment Dominates Country—Move on Russ Talked By Kaiser's Adherents.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 4.—Hostility to the Entente Allies is increasing here. The defensive alliance of the three Scandinavian nations—Sweden, Norway, and Denmark—which was formed at Malmoe at the end of 1914, trembles on the verge of destruction. Only a little more pressure from England, so it seems, and King Gustav will throw his new army of 600,000 men into the hands of the Kaiser. Pro-Germans here will tell you just what would happen then. They have a careful mapped-out campaign which they say is that of the German general staff.

Using the great ferries running between Germany and this country, the Kaiser would land an army in Southern Sweden. These men would be rushed by rail to the border of Finland, and here, with the Swedish levies, they would invade the Grand Duchy which Gustavus Adolphus and Charles XII. ruled and for which the Swedish monarchs have never ceased to yearn.

Finns Would Fight Czar.

The Finns would rise to a man, the German adherents continue, from volunteer military corps and prevent the Russians from destroying the railroads to protect Petrograd. Then would the Czar see his capital, little defended on this side, soon in the hands of the enemy.

Whether this grand sweep could be carried out, it remains certain that Sweden's entrance in the war on the side of Germany would embarrass the Allies immensely. Already, by holding up enormous shipments of freight and of parcel post packages, destined for icebound Russia, and by placing an embargo on the export of wood pulp to Great Britain, Gustav has found means to twist the British lion's tail so that it hurts.

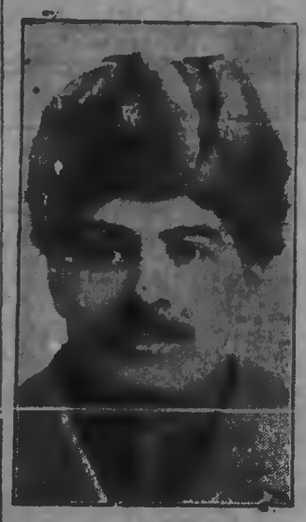
Yet, taking a neutral and judicial attitude, Great Britain might have more to gain than to lose. One avenue of supply to Russia would be shut. That is true. But Germany's greatest avenue of supply—in the Allied opinion—would be cut off, too.

U. S. Imports Increase.

Imports into Sweden from America are running tenfold as large as before the war. Some of this undoubtedly takes the place of what would normally be imported from Germany. But any one who has stood on a pier in one of the large Swedish harbors and seen the immense volume of goods of all sorts departing for Germany must conclude that Sweden alone could not produce all this. Or, what is the same thing, Sweden has to replace what she exports to Germany with imports from America.

In the centers of trade here German agents abound. They are not downcast. They are busy. They may have to bid 25 per cent. more than other purchasers, but they keep on buying. The agents of the Allies look on, helpless, indignant, scoffing at the arguments of some publicists that Sweden is not supplying Germany with New World goods at all.

The big new army which the King can place at the disposal of Germany on the outbreak of war did not grow out of this struggle at all. It originated a few months before the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia out of the belief that Russia was massing men in Finland, building new transportation lines and fortifying certain islands in the Baltic with the purposes of carrying through the dream of Peter the Great and making the Baltic a Russian lake.



Lieut. Col. A. G. Fonseca—Who has been authorized by the Minister of Militia to raise a Scandinavian battalion in Western Canada, known as the 197th, the "Vikings of Canada" from among the Danish, Norwegian and Swedish population.

BRIDES NEED NOT SAY OBEY.

Minister's Reason for Revising the Marriage Service.

For a number of years the Rev. Gilbert Sadler, an English Congregationalist, has omitted from the marriage service:

The bride's promise to obey her husband;

The query, "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?"

The words, "Until death do us part."

A few days ago to a representative of a London paper the Rev. Gilbert Sadler gave his reasons. "During the 20 years I have been in the ministry," he said, "I have never asked a bride to promise to obey her husband. I think that the modern educated woman feels, or she ought to feel, that she and her husband are co-partners, and that in some things her word must decide and in other things his word must decide.

"No sane man thinks that he can expect his wife to obey his instructions upon housekeeping or on the management of children. The husband may rule in certain important things since he finds the money. But marriage is more a comradeship of equals."

TROPHIES WORTH $10,000 STOLEN

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., Feb. 4.—Colonel Archibald Rogers' fine home at Hyde Park was robbed some time Tuesday night of about $10,000 worth of silver and gold trophy cups which had been won by Colonel Rogers when he was a yachtsman. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for their return.

Colonel Rogers was a victorious participant in practically all of the regattas of the New York Yacht Club from 1884 to 1892, when he sailed the yachts Bedouin, Wasp and Cofonia and carried off the prizes in races which are historic to older yachtsmen.

In an effort to recover the cups Colonel Rogers Wednesday sent the following advertisement to the Herald:

If the large yacht Cups and Trophies taken from my residence night of February 1 are returned I will pay $1,000 reward and no questions asked. Archibald Rogers, Hyde Park on Hudson, N.Y.

The majority of these silver and gold cups were in his den and his dining room. The burglars in the absence of the watchman gained entrance by cutting out a large glass panel of the front door.

RECRUITING HAMPERED SAYS PROF. RIETHDORF

WOODSTOCK, Feb. 4.—Professor Riethdorf, formerly of Woodstock College, who was in the city this morning, declared that while Sir Sam Hughes says that the complaint of Col. Lockhead that political and pro-German influences were hampering his work of organizing a battalion in Berlin, Ontario, was only a tempest in a teapot, it would take a very large teapot to hold the tempest. Professor Riethdorf says that the published statement of the situation in Berlin is substantially correct, as he knew from personal experience.

"Berlin is all right as a whole," he declared, "but there is no doubt that recruiting is being hampered by the influences of politicians, many of whom ought to be in the detention camps. They are free to insult soldiers on the street and they find protection for the sake of their votes.

"The politicians will not interfere in fear that some votes be lost. I have been endeavoring to carry on my propaganda in Berlin with a view to enlightening the German element there and to secure recruits. Recently, the recruiting organization there refused to lend me a vehicle to drive out into the country on recruiting business, and I had to hire one myself. Politics is at the bottom of the whole trouble in Berlin. The representatives of the people are looking after the Government's interests, and they are more concerned about controlling the Government than organizing regiments."

Prof. Riethdorf says that he has applied for a commission to don the King's uniform and offered his services to be sent anywhere to fight for the cause, but so far he has had no reply from the authorities.

"Bringing Up Father"

As a rule plays written for the purpose of making folks laugh, cannot boast of continuity of plot or story. However, in 'Bringing Up Father,' the latest Gus Hill offering, which comes to the Grand to-morrow (Saturday), matinee and night, there is no doubt there is no trouble in following a tale strictly human and engrossing from every viewpoint. The characters are flesh and blood creations and not exaggerated types one might expect to see in similar contributions. This piece in its entirety, even from a literary angle, is the best production Mr. Hill has fostered during his long career as a producing manager. The piece, which was suggested by the popular cartoons of George McManus, is in three lots. Action is ripe from curtain to curtain and interest is never permitted to lag one iota. During the development of the plot at least a dozen song hits are introduced along with a number of unique and original novelties. A competent critic has christened the production 'A Singing and Dancy Comedy,' apparently the appelation has been aptly applied.

Degrees Conferred By Oddfellows' Team

At a general meeting of the Oddfellow Lodges of this district last night, three degrees were conferred upon seven candidates, three of whom were from Pontypool and four from Peterborough. There was a large attendance of members and the evening's work proved very interesting. The Peterborough lodge conferred the first and second degrees and the third was in charge of Otonabee Lodge team. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Jas. Price of Peterborough Lodge and also by the Senior representatives of the visiting lodges.

At the conclusion of the lodge work a banquet was provided, with Hooper catering.

COWS IN CORN FIELD $26 IN DIVISION COURT

In the Division Court this morning W. E. Stewart of Smith received judgment for $26 in his suit against W. G. Howden for damage to a field of corn by 13 head of cattle belonging to the defendant.

Mr. Stewart claimed that Mr. Howden's section of a fence between their adjoining properties had not been repaired where necessary, and the cattle made their way through to the plaintiff's corn field, eating and treading upon a considerable quantity of it.

"LINCOLN WAS A BOY, TOO"

Abraham Lincoln, his hand and pen.
He will be good, but God knows when.

On a sheet copied from an old-time arithmetic these words written by the Great Emancipator in his schoolboy hand made two young Italians, visitors to the exhibition of Lincoln relics in the Chicago public library, stare with amazement. Then they glanced over to the reproduction of the statute of Lincoln which stands in Lincoln Park, created by Saint Gaudens.

"He was a boy, too," one of them said.

With the installation of the exhibit of Lincolniana, which was shown at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, nearing completion, scores of visitors came to gaze at relics that ranged from deeds and documents connected with Lincoln's life as a grocer, in 1833, in New Salem, Ill., to bits of mourning costumes worn by pallbearers at his funeral in Springfield. Booklovers found much interest in the exhibit of about a score of books telling of the life of Lincoln, in as many languages, including Hawaiian and Chinese.

but that is a thing of inestimable value. The magnificent library with its hundreds of thousands of richly bound volumes and priceless irreplacable records is fortunately intact. This circumstance is due to the persistent and heroic fight by firemen, and more particularly to the fact that the library, though adjoining, was in the rear of the main structure with a narrow corridor connecting.

Canada's Parliament in the midst of a session of great importance, is today on the streets, but arrangements are in progress for a meeting place in the Victoria Museum, or if that proves inadequate, in the Russell Theatre. The buildings cost four millions. To replace them will take more than double that amount.

To Free Your Skin of Hair or Fuzz

(Boudoir Secrets)

No toilet table is complete without a small package of delatone, for with it hair or fuzz can be quickly banished from the skin. To remove hairs you merely mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the objectionable hairs. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when it will be found free from hair or blemish. Be sure you get genuine delatone.

Roumania to Join Entente in a Month, Rome Hears

Army Being Rapidly Equipped and Main Forces on Bulgarian and Hungarian Frontiers

ROME, Feb 3.—According to the Roumanian colony in Rome, Rumenia in March will take the field on the side of the Allies.

Milan, Feb. 3.—The attitude of Rumania is declared by Vienna and Budapest papers to be giving great concern to Austro-Hungary.

The Rumanian army is being rapidly equipped with everything necessary for a severe campaign. Large consignments of horses have already arrived at Galats.

M. Reni, an influential Rumanian who has been in Rome, is proceeding to Paris and London. He declares that sentiment in favour of the Allies has greatly increased lately. A considerable change has been produced since the large grain purchases by England.

The interventionist movement, M. Reni states, has suddenly become very strong and is giving great concern to Austria and Germany.

Petrograd, Feb. 2.—In connection with the negotiations which are alleged to be proceeding between Greece and Rumania and the report that Rumania is ready to form an anti-Bulgarian alliance, it is stated here that four-fifths of the Rumanian troops are under arms and that the main Rumanian forces are concentrated on the Bulgarian and Hungarian frontiers, while the troops on the Russian frontier have not been increased.

With the purpose of exerting pressure on Rumania, Austro-Bulgarian troops are concentrating on the Danube.

WITH THE STARS

Mr. W. E. Harper, B.A., of Ottawa, to Visit Peterboro'

Mr. W. A. Harper, B.A., of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, is to lecture on the subject, "Nebulae" on Thursday evening, Feb. 10, in St. Paul's Sunday School room.

Many of the large observatories are at present devoting considerable time to the study of the filmy shreds and balls of cloudy material among the stars known as nebulae; seeking to give them the proper place in the universe.

Mr. Harper will tell in simple language what is known of the wonderful objects, with particular reference to discoveries of the past few years. A number of lantern slides of nebulae will be shown, made recently from the best photographs obtained with the 60 inch reflector at Mount Wilson.

The lecture will be given in the St. Paul's Sunday School room on Thursday, Feb. 10th. Admission free, No collection.

SNOW USED TO KILL ITALIANS

"Winter has made the war in Tyrol, Carnia and along the upper Isonzo even more terrible than it was before. The Italian troops suffer fearfully in the blizzards raging through the Karst and Dolomite mountains, but they continue their struggle heroically against heavy odds.

"The Austro-Hungarians are far less affected by the storm and cold, because on their strongly fortified mountain peaks they have comfortable quarters which cannot be reached by the shells of the enemy.

"The snow covering the mountains to a depth of ten, and even fifteen feet has furnished the Austrians with a new and awful weapon. Thousands of feet above the sea, the Tyroleans, who know every secret pass of their Alps, daily start immense avalanches and send them down upon the positions of the Italian troops in the valleys.

"The destruction caused by these avalanches is almost beyond description. They bury everything in their path and there is no escape from them. In the Flitsch (Plezzo) Valley I recently saw two Italian battalions annihilated by tens of thousands of tons of snow sent down from one of the mountains by four Tyrolean militiamen. In the Tonnele district a whole Italian camp was buried by one of these avalanches and not a man escaped."

Music & Drama

TWIN BEDS.

The hilarious comedy, "Twin Beds" by Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo was presented at the Grand Opera House last night to an audience whose appreciation was indicated by almost continuous laughter. The fun was fast and furious, especially in the last act, and the offering was pronounced one of the best of the season. Theatre-goers have heard so much about "Twin Beds" that it is unnecessary to go into details of the action. The troubles of the two married couples, Signor and Signora Monti, and Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins kept the audience thoroughly amused. Aileen Poe as Blanche Hawkins was altogether charming in the part, while Virginia Fairfax as the slangy Signora Monti (ex-cabaret singer), was responsible for much of the fun of the attraction. Hamilton Mott was excellently cast as Harry Hawkins and Adrian H. Rosley was very funny as Signor Monti. The comedy was beautifully staged and presented.

TURKS FACING FAMINE: FOOD FALLS TO CZAR

PETROGRAD, Feb. 3.—The latest Russian victories in the Caucasus bid fair to react injuriously on all subsequent Turkish operations in the Erzerum zone. Rich booty which had fallen into Russian hands formed the principal source of supply to the army occupying this area. The Turks will have to wait long before they can renew these stores.

Eighty thousand men are reported locked up in Erzerum with provisions for two weeks.

The defeated Turkish troops which have now taken shelter behind the Erzerum forts appear doomed to famine.

The battle in the triangle of Khrys Kale, Choullu and Melangert lasted several days, culminating in the rout of the Turkish regulars and of a large force of Kurdish horse.

The Turks fled in the direction of Khrys Kale, relentlessly pursued by the Russians till they were cut off from the northern routes and forced to retreat toward Mush. The retreat was carried out in such haste that they had no time to destroy their commissariat and munitions.

The Russian victory and the new dispositions have isolated the spacious district of Mush from Erzerum and deprived the Turkish army of two divisions of regulars, which were completely shattered.

Reports have been received here that the Turkish army has been ordered to evacuate Erzerum.

Death Follows Misread Message

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. — The word "guest" spoken by telephone in the McAlpin Hotel Tuesday afternoon was misunderstood to be "death." As a result representatives of the hotel management hurried to the room occupied by William Parlv Rolph, of Baltimore, who had registered earlier in the day. They found an unusually fine looking man, thirty-six years old, in his undress.

Mr. Rolph said he did not feel very fit and would like the attendance of a physician from the private hospital which the McAlpin maintains. The physician discovered only nervousness affecting Mr. Rolph, administered a sedative and so improved his patient that Mr. Rolph left the McAlpin in the evening and spent several hours with his sister, Miss Nannie Rolph and Mrs. S. B. Smith, in the Martinique, where they were staying.

The only hint of death in the whole affair was the strange misleading of the telephone message.

Lying beside his bed with throat, wrists and ankles slashed, first with a penknife, which he had broken, and then with a razor, Mr. Rolph was found dead yesterday morning. The telephone bell was ringing in his room for a message from his sisters when a maid entered his room. He had been dead for several hours.

Press of personal troubles was the only solution his relatives said they could suggest for his wishing to die. Mr. Rolph was married but had not been living with his wife. His parents, who reside at No. 2,707 Eutaw place, Baltimore, are Samuel Rolph and Elisabeth Clayland Rolph, members of well known Maryland families.

COUNTY CLERK

So many cases like this are coming to our attention that we are publishing this letter for the benefit of Peterborough people who are in Mr. Kelly's condition. Read our offer below.

Clarksville, Tenn. "I am a County Court Clerk, and became run-down, no appetite, was drowsy and felt badly most of the time. I had tried several remedies without benefit. One day I read an advertisement of Vinol and at once tried it. In a short time my appetite improved, my strength increased and I felt better in every way." S. W. Kelly.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it is an unequalled tonic-body-builder, combining native wine, the oldest and most famous tonics known to medicine.

So strong is our faith in Vinol that we offer to return the purchaser's money in every case if Vinol should fail to give satisfactory results.

Woman Missionary Hit By Zeppelin Bomb at Mission Meeting

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The following is a story of the Zeppelin raid, as witnessed by a correspondent in a certain Staffordshire town:

"The first bomb was dropped near a moving-picture theatre, which was brilliantly illuminated. For a certain period the Zeppelin circled about the town at the speed of an express train. Many people rushed to the streets, but there was no panic.

"Both explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. Some time was lost before the neighborhood was darkened. The airship appeared to have no difficulty in dropping bombs in the vicinity of the large buildings.

"In a meeting house the mission for women was proceeding. A woman missionary was standing, Bible in hand, addressing two hundred women and girls, when a bomb dropped within twenty feet of the mission room, which was of wood. There was a blinding flash and then all was darkness.

"The missionary was struck by a huge fragment of shell and killed instantly. Another lady and a young girl were also killed. Screams of the injured were heard and many were trampled in the confusion.

"A nearby church and the vicerage were partly wrecked, bomb splinters boring holes in the solid masonry.

"Some of the victims were killed as they hurried through the streets. A woman and her child lost their lives together. Both legs of another woman were blown off.

"Much loss of life and damage to property occurred in a thickly-populated industrial suburb, where about thirty bombs fell. Ten houses were blown to pieces and many others damaged.

"A man hearing the whirr of the engines, was going to his garden to watch the airships when a bomb fell at his feet. A fragment struck his head and he died immediately. His child, who was following him, was also struck. The boy ran back to the house, crying to his mother:

"'They killed my daddy. Look what they've done to me!'

"The boy's left arm was severed as with a knife.

"A woman nursing a baby was buried up to her neck in debris, only her face being visible. She was badly crushed, but alive. A heavy beam had fallen across her body, protecting her. The child was dead."

PAPEN ORGANIZED PLOT TO DESTROY WELLAND CANAL

LONDON, Feb. 4.—According to a statement made by the authorities here to-day, Bridgman Taylor, detained here on the charge of having failed to register as an alien enemy, has made a confession to the effect that Capt. Franz Von Papen, recalled German military attache at Washington, organized the plan for blowing up the Welland canal.

The authorities stated that a further examination of the check stubs taken from Capt. Von Papen when he arrived at Falmouth on his way back to Germany connects him with the Welland Canal case, showing a payment to Taylor, who is now interned after serving a term of six months in jail for travelling under a fraudulent American passport.

Taylor, whose real name is said to be Major Von Der Goltz, was arrested here in November of 1914 on arrival from Holland, whence he had gone from America. When his name was found on one of Capt. Papen's check-stubs he admitted, according to the statement made to-day, that he had served under the captain. He then is said to have given the information that Capt. Von Papen organized the plan for dynamiting the canal.

VON SANDERS IN CAUCASUS.

German Field Marshal Has Been Given Command.

DISTRESS IN POLAND.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—Great distress in Poland is reported by representatives of American relief organizations who have reached Berlin. The suffering among the population of the war-ravaged land is particularly from lack of shelter and fuel, while typhus and other diseases are prevalent. It is declared that 30 per cent. of the people are dependent upon relief.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Professor Maxim Kovalevsky, famous Russian historian and economist, who is a member of the Council of Empire and president of the Society for a Mutual Understanding between England and Russia, has contributed to the Bourse Gazette the following article on the part that England has played in the development of democratic institutions in the world:

"When Great Britain threw in her lot with entente powers in the present war she was abused much more than even in the time of Napoleon. Not only was this action of hers described as her enemies as treachery against the German race, to which her forefathers, the Anglo-Saxons, belonged, but people were told that England had never given the world anything in the way of civilization, that she had always been led by selfish interests, and that her very existence had been built up on the exploitation of other nations as well as of her own working masses.

"In this article I shall try to show what Continental Europe owes to England. Everybody's attention was first drawn to England during the Hundred Years' War. In the middle of the fifteenth century the tutor of Henry I., John Fortescue, afterward chancellor of the kingdom, published in the Latin language, which at that time was the language of scientists 'The Praise of English Laws,' the first work in which the advantages of the English laws are clearly defined Put Law Above the King.

"It was especially emphasized that in England the law is above the King and that representatives of all classes take part in the making of the laws of the country. Like Thomas Aquinas, Fortescue contends that the monarchial constitution of Great Britain contains characteristics of a republic. In the sixteenth century Thomas Smith develops the same views in the 'De Republica Anglorum,' emphasizing the fact that the King, the nobility and the common people are alike interested in preserving the constitution, which gives the people individual freedom and distributes taxes more equally than is done in France, where the people are suffering from the burden of taxation and the tyranny of the rulers. This book gained such fame that it was almost immediately translated into Dutch.

"Contrary to the accepted view, it was not Montesquieu who was the first to draw the attention of the world to the advantages of British political institutions. Ages before him Englishmen themselves emphasized this fact, reflecting in their arguments the splendid growth of the British constitution, which had ben so manifest during the reign of the Plantagenets and the Lancasters. It secured to the inhabitants of the British Islands personal freedom as well as the sanctity of private property.

"John Locke, the contemporary and participant of the second English revolution, hailed the victory of parliament over the King, which had strengthened the principles of English freedom and once more had accentuated the necessiyt of the subordination of the executive power to that of the legislative power.

"From the first quarter of the nineteenth century onward the democratization of parliament begins to make great progress. After the elections of 1832 the House of Commons, as the natural interpreter of the wishes of large masses of the people, begins to impose its will on the House of Lords. The importance of the Second Chamber grows with every reform in the electoral law. Modern political writers like Bagshot, Anson, Sidney Low, and others, no longer defend the theory of the 'balance of power' in the British constitution, but openly proclaim that the will of the House of Commons must reign supreme.

"The merit of England before the world does not merely consist in introducing and maintaining the principles of true democracy in her own country, but in the extension of these principles to her colonies.

"To be a British subject in the ment is in a majority means to enjoy the rights of citizenship in the broadest sense of the word. The British subject in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa is a free man, shapes the destinies of his new country according to his own ideals and pays only those taxes or duties which are imposed by hi representatives whom he elects in the most broad electoral system. England had ages ago established the rule, 'No taxation without representation,' and this rule is applied to he colonies as well as the mother country. Therefore it is not surprising that during the crisis through which we are passing the colonies voluntarily supply the mother country with men and battleships.

"Over the greater part of the globe the populations exclaim enthusiastically 'Rule, Britannia!' which means that those people are sure that all of them will enjoy their rights of complete citizenship under the authority of a government responsible to parliament, enjoying the public confidence and controlled by judges who cannot be forced to resign and thus are independent of any political controversies.

"From this necessarily short survey of English democracy it is evident that Russians as well as other nations on the continent of Europe can learn much from England. If we wish her to be victorious in this war it is because we realize fully that her victory means the extension of most precious rights of free citizenship to the whole of Europe. For what more splendid example could there be of a true democracy than that of the English people shaping their own destinies and preserving at the same time complete freedom for their individual development!"

FIVE STEEL COMPANIES BOOST WORKERS' PAY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Wage advances announced yesterday were confined to companies in the steel industry.

A 10 per cent. increase was announced by the Birdsboro Steel Foundry and Machine Company and the E. & G. Brooke Iron Company, of Reading, Pa. All of the 700 employees of the Birdsboro plant will receive the advance while only the sheet mill and nail department of the Brooke Company are affected.

The Pittsburgh Steel Company, of Monessen, Pa., advanced the wages of its 5,000 employees 10 per cent.

The Page Woven Wire Company—another Monessen industry, informed employees that, beginning yesterday their wages would be on the new basis established by the United States Steel Corporation for similar work.

Notices announcing a 10 per cent. increase in wages, effective February 28th, were posted at the Phoenix Iron Company's plant. Several thousand men are employed.

Teiper Sticks To His First Story of Buffalo Tragedy

Buffalo, Feb. 4.—John Edward Teiper, who spent the night in a cell at police headquarters, after attending the funeral of his mother and brother, may to-day see the third victim of the Orchard Park tragedy, his dying sister, Grace J. Teiper.

Teiper clings to his original story to the effect that the bloody work of last Sunday night was done by a strange man, and is said to have expressed a willingness to go to his sister's bedside, in the hope that his presence may draw from her, during a possible moment of consciousness, some word to confirm this story that he had told and retold to the county authorities, with but little variation as to details.

Inquiry Completed.

District Attorney Dudley said he had no objection to Teiper's visit to the hospital, but declared that the county's investigation of the case had been practically completed.

Unsatisfactory results have thus far been obtained at the bureau of identification in getting a picture of a bloody fingerprint on the handle of the revolver found near the scene of the murder and which Teiper has admitted belonged to him. The revolver was handled by several before it reached the sheriff and much of the imprint was obliterated or partly covered by other marks. The fact that the weapon did pass through the hands of a number of people made the imprints on it of little value in the identification of the murderer.

Teiper's Watch Found Near Murder Scene.

John Edward Teiper's gold watch, which, he declared, was stolen from his pocket Sunday night when he claimed highwaymen attacked and murdered his mother, Mrs. Agnes Teiper, his brother, Frederick Teiper, and probably fatally wounded his sister, Grace, in the Orchard Park Road, has been recovered. It was found by a newspaper reporter in a field about 120 feet directly off the road from the lonely spot where the murders occurred.

District Attorney Dudley, when informed that the watch had been found, said that "it practically clinches the case."

Teiper, in his cell at police headquarters, spent a restless night. He smoked cigarettes incessantly, and slept but four hours of the night.

No formal charge has been placed against Teiper. It has been planned by Edward O'Malley, Teiper's counsel, to take him to the scene of the crime to-day, but the plan was abandoned upon objection of District Attorney Dudley.

BRITISH NEED EDUCATION.

LONDON, Feb. 2. — A manifesto calling for a drastic reform in the educational system of Great Britain is published to-day over the signatures of a committee of thirty-six leading scientists, including Sir William Osler, regius professor of medicine, Oxford University; Sir William Ramsay, Sir Wm. Crookes, and Lord Rayleigh.

The manifesto declares that the British are a woefully ignorant people and are paying heavily for their ignorance. It urges a reconstruction of the school system as an immediate necessity.

"The nation's success now and in the difficult period of reconstruction after the war," says the manifesto, "depends largely on the possession by the leaders and administrators of scientific methods and habits of mind. For the past fifty years efforts have been made vainly to introduce the study of experimental science into the country's schools and colleges as an essential part of the educational programme."

SALONIKA WENT WILD.

Air Raid Caused Much Excitement—Warships Ceased Firing.

SALONIKA, Feb. 3—The Zeppelin which on Tuesday bombarded Salonika was of very large dimensions. After making a wide detour of the city it began its operations by dropping five bombs, which fell into the sea. The warships opened fire on it, but after fourteen shots were obliged to cease for fear of wounding the population, which was now filling the streets.

The raiders missed the next target, but tore a woman to pieces and wounded a small boy. Another bomb set fire to warehouses filled with fats, oils, benzine, and sugar. The building flared up like a torch and the population became wildly excited. A company of French gendarmes and a picket of Zouaves hurried up and restored a semblance of order. They brought a volunteer fire brigade with hand pumps through the mob. Meanwhile the Zeppelin continued to rain down its missiles of destruction, one of which demolshed the mosque of Yussef Pasha, killing three and injuring eleven Greek refugees from Asia Minor who were sheltered in it.

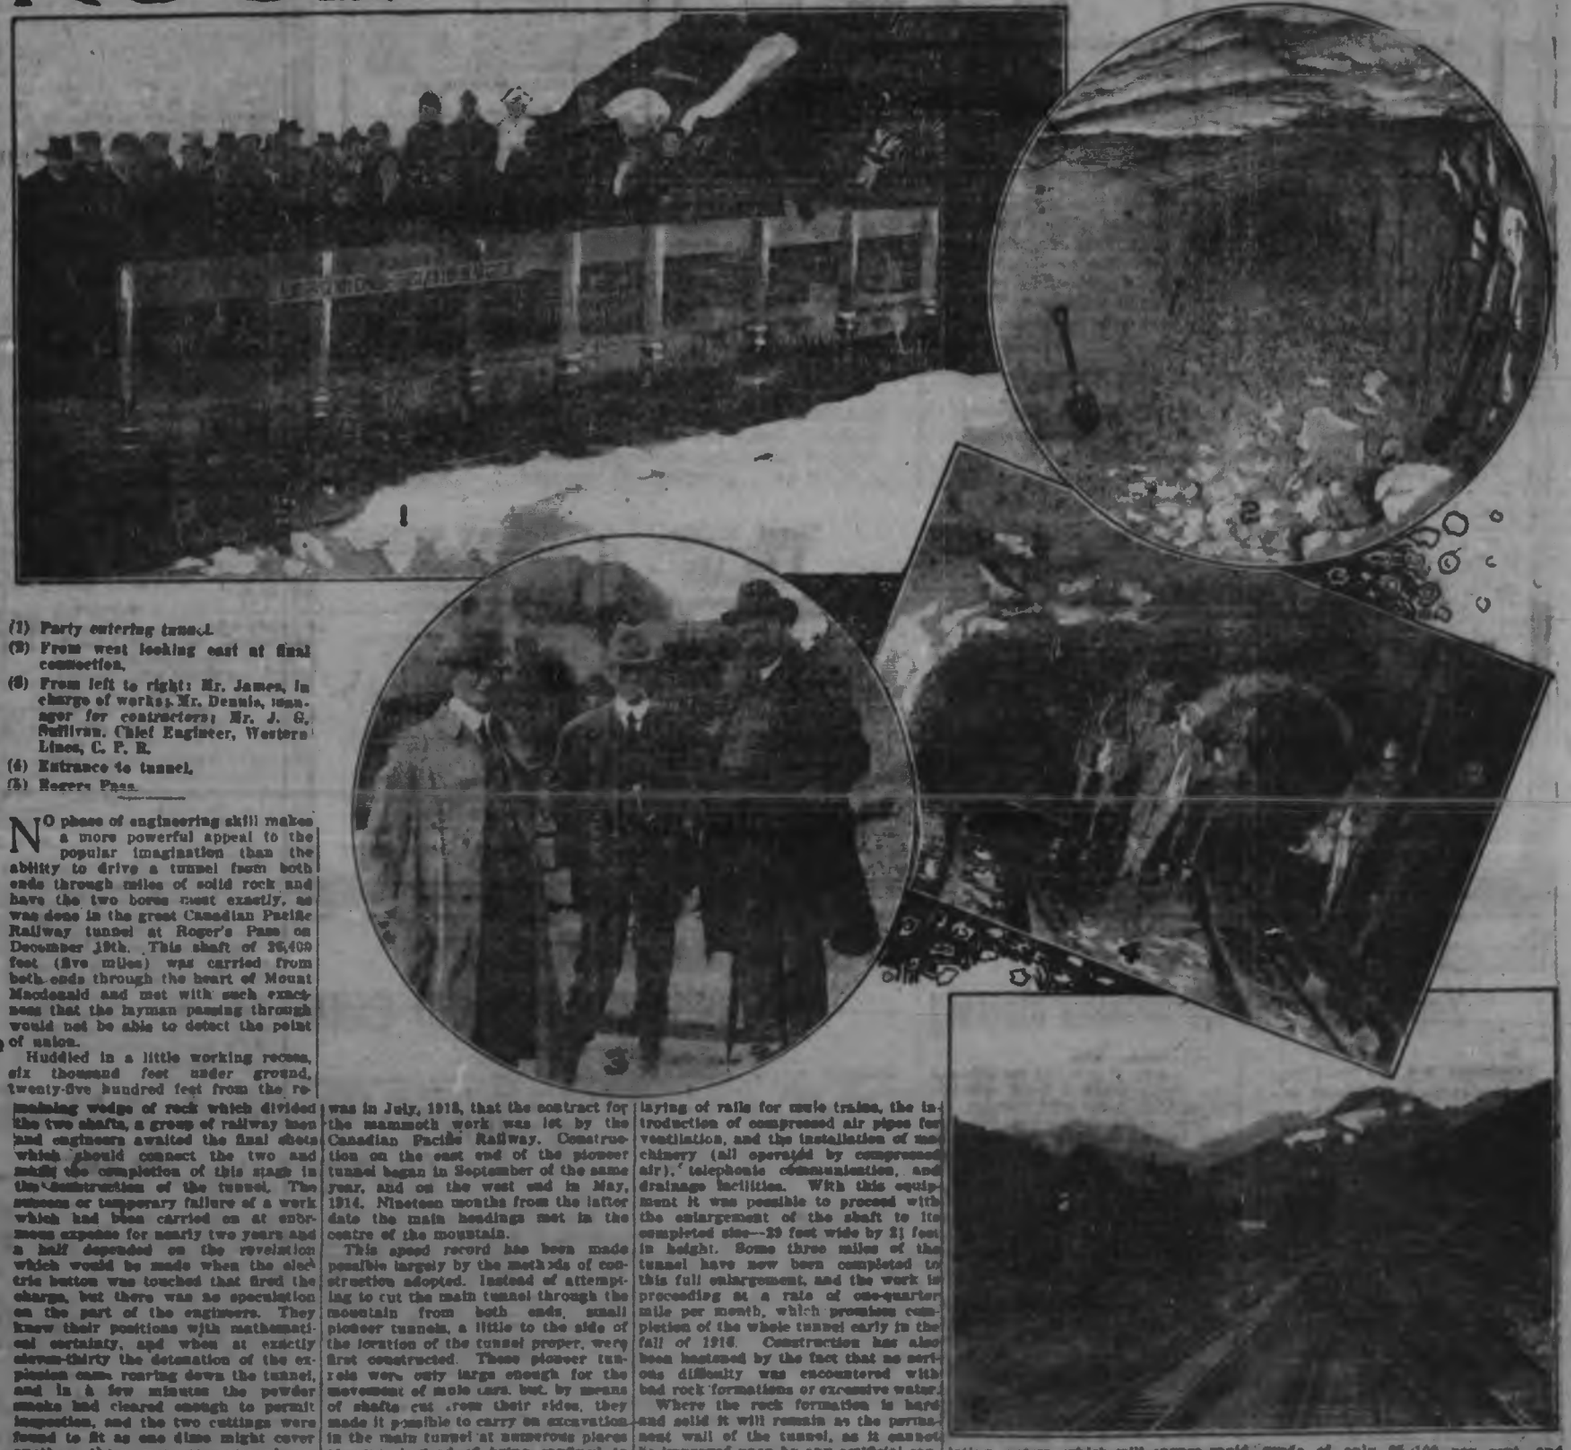
Another bomb crashed through the roof of a house and instantly killed five persons. The flames from burning warehouses lit up the whole harbour with a red glow, against which stood out the while sails of the coasting ships, fleeing under all canvas.

Fast seroplanes rose in pursuit of the Zeppelin, while British, French, Italian, and Russian sailors operated a fire boat at a wharf and poured torrents of water on the fire.

Generals Sarrail, Mahon, and Maschopoulos, with the Prefect and the Mayor, organized salvage parties, but practically nothing could be saved in the warehouses. The fire was prevented from spreading to surrounding buildings.

The bombs thrown from the Zeppelin weighed about 100 pounds, and were dropped from a height estimated at 9,000 feet.

ROGER'S PASS TUNNEL



(1) Party entering tunnel.
(3) From left to right: Mr. James, in charge of works; Mr. Dennis, manager for contractors; Mr. J. G. Sullivan, Chief Engineer, Western Lines, C. P. R.
(4) Entrance to tunnel.
(5) Rogers Pass.

NO phase of engineering skill makes a more powerful appeal to the popular imagination than the ability to drive a tunnel from both ends through miles of solid rock and have the two bores meet exactly, as was done in the great Canadian Pacific Railway tunnel at Roger's Pass on December 19th. This shaft of 26,400 feet (five miles) was carried from both ends through the heart of Mount Macdonald and met with such exactness that the layman passing through would not be able to detect the point of union.

Huddled in a little working recess, six thousand feet under ground, twenty-five hundred feet from the remaining wedge of rock which divided the two shafts, a group of railway men and engineers awaited the final shots which should connect the two and mark the completion of this stage in the construction of the tunnel. The success or temporary failure of a work which had been carried on at enormous expense for nearly two years and a half depended on the revelation which would be made when the electric button was touched that fired the charge, but there was no speculation on the part of the engineers. They knew their positions with mathematical certainty, and when at exactly eleven-thirty the detonation of the explosion came roaring down the tunnel, and in a few minutes the powder smoke had cleared enough to permit inspection, and the two cuttings were found to fit as one dime might cover another, there was no outward expression of relief, whatever may have been the inward satisfaction of those in charge of the work.

Not only has this stage of the construction work been successfully reached, but it has been accomplished in a period perhaps unprecedented in tunnel building of this magnitude. It was in July, 1913, that the contract for the mammoth work was let by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Construction on the east end of the pioneer tunnel began in September of the same year, and on the west end in May, 1914. Nineteen months from the latter date the main headings met in the centre of the mountain.

This speed record has been made possible largely by the methods of construction adopted. Instead of attempting to cut the main tunnel through the mountain from both ends, small pioneer tunnels, a little to the side of the location of the tunnel proper, were first constructed. These pioneer tunnels were only large enough for the movement of mole cars, but, by means of shafts cut from their sides, they made it possible to carry on excavation in the main tunnel at numerous places at once, instead of being confined to operations from the end. As they approached the centre of the mountain the pioneer tunnels were deflected into the route of the main tunnel, their purpose having been accomplished.

The first bore of the main tunnel was a shaft of about eight by twelve feet. As this was completed it permitted the laying of rails for mule trains, the introduction of compressed air pipes for ventilation, and the installation of machinery (all operated by compressed air), telephonic communication, and drainage facilities. With this equipment it was possible to proceed with the enlargement of the shaft to its completed size—29 feet wide by 21 feet in height. Some three miles of the tunnel have now been completed to this full enlargement, and the work is proceeding at a rate of one-quarter mile per month, which promises completion of the whole tunnel early in the fall of 1916. Construction has also been hastened by the fact that no serious difficulty was encountered with bad rock formations or excessive water.

Where the rock formation is hard and solid it will remain as the permanent wall of the tunnel, as it cannot be improved upon by any artificial construction. Where it is soft, with a tendency to crumble or slide, it is immediately framed up with an arch of steel timbers. A permanent concrete arch is then built on the inside of the timber work, which is not removed.

A feature of importance in the ventilating system, which will ensure rapid changes of air throughout the entire tunnel.

The construction of this tunnel will only reduce the length of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway 4.6 miles, but it will eliminate 4½ miles of snowsheds and reduce the track elevation 583 feet. It has a maximum grade of only 96/100 per cent. and eliminates 2,400 degrees of curvature, which is an important consideration in railway operation and maintenance. And being a double-track tunnel it will form another link in the double-track system of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the mountain region of Western Canada.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Pennants and Bachelors Were The Winners in the City League

Local Organization Got Off to a Good Start When Two Good Games of Hockey Were Provided For the Fans.

PENNANTS FAST

The City Hockey League opened its season last night when the Murray street Pennants and the Bachelors were the winners in two good games. The Pennants won from the Americans 11 to 6, while the Bachelors beat the East City team 7 to 3. The quality of hockey shown was surprisingly good and the fans found both battles enjoyable. There was a good crowd on hand when Mayor J. J. Duffus faced the puck and started the season going.

The surprise of the evening probably was the result of the first game which brought together the Pennants and Americans. The Murray street aggregation won handily by 11 goals to 6, going right away from their opponents. The Americans, with Smyth, Jackson and Richardson of last year's juniors, and Nagel Phelan of the Boston Exploits in line, were fancied winners, but the Pennants turned loose a fast bunch of youngsters, including Bartley, Kennealey and McIntyre, three of this year's junior spares and the kids had the condition and the aggressiveness necessary to carry them through. At the end of the first period it was 2-2 and the Americans were leading 4 to 3 when the team left the ice at the end of the second period. The Pennants, however, outplayed their opponents in the last period and scoring them eight goals to three and winning in handsome style. The Americans were good individually, but the gang from Murray street outshone them in combination and checking back, Bartley and Kennealey starred on the forward line for the winners and McIntyre was very effective on the defence, while O'Brien did great work in the nets.

Smyth and Jackson were the pick of the losers.

The teams lined up as follows:

Pennants.		Americans.
	Goal
O'Brien		Clarke
	Defence
Mulhern		Long
McIntyre		Phelan
	Rover
Frost		Perry
	Centre
Bartley		Jackson
	Right Wing
Soden		Smyth
	Left Wing
Kennaley		Richardson

Billy Breen handled the game well.

Bachelors Won.

The Bachelors had not much difficulty in winning from East City. They led the boys across the river by 4-1 at the end of the first period, and 5-2 at the end of the second, while the final score was 7-3. East City tried hard, but failed to play their places and bunched badly, although they showed some clever individual work and will improve. The Bachelors have a heavy, well-balanced team and no doubt will have something to say about the final disposition of the silverwear. For the winners Barnett at rover and the defence pair, Moore and Neary, were all effective. The game was clean, and the best of feeling was evidenced.

The teams were as follows:

Bachelors		East City
	Goal
Darling		Austin
	Defence
Neary		Bartley
Moore		Kennedy
	Rover
Barnett		Mein
	Centre
Bearu		[illegible]

FAMOUS ATHLETES IN SPORTSMEN'S BATTALION

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—Canada's best present-day Marathoner and long-distance runner, Jimmy Corkery, of the Irish-Canadian Athletic Club, one of the cleanest cut and and cleverest living athletes that ever drew on a running shoe and snuggled his chest down behind a jersey, joined the Sportsmen's Battalion yesterday, and to-day with 150 other young athletes and sportsmen is wearing the first Sportsmen's Battalion uniforms issued from the battalion headquarters, at the Sportsmen's Club, Richmond street west.

Corkery, who has been for years one of Canada's best distance men, is going across the water to avenge the death of his keenest rival and best friend in the active running game, the late Jimmy Duffy. Duffy showed Corkery the way home in many a hard-fought race but that did not disturb their comradeship. Corkery himself has won the Wand Marathon and Hamilton Herald races, the premier distance events in Canada, as well as a dozen distance events of lesser importance, and in 1912 had the honor under the tuteiage of Captain Edwood A. Hughes, quartermaster of the Sportsmen's Battalion, of winning the greatest distance race in the English Marathon. He was a member of the Canadian Olympic team at Stockholm the same year, favorite for the race, and in a striking position, when the excessive humidity struck him down, as it did half a dozen of the cream of the northern distance runners, and clinched the race for McArthur of South Africa, who was used to similar running conditions.

"So you've decided to keep up your programme of going to the Olympiad in Berlin in 1916?" remarked Captain Hughes yesterday. "Only you are going at the Governments' expense."

"That's the very idea," replied Corkery. Rev. "Chuck" Tyner, of Lincoln, Neb., goalkeeper of the famous old Marlboro O. H. A. team, saw the Colonel yesterday and will likely enter a non-com. class.

DEGRUCHY'S POSITION

Hal. DeGruchy, the ex-U.C.C. boy, and Captain of the T.R. and A.A. Rugby team, champions of the O.R.F.U. senior series, to-day interviewed Lieut-Col. Greer in search of a berth with the Sportsmen.

"I have applied to the Royal Aviation Corps," said DeGruchy. "If I do not get that—and I expect an answer this week—I will join the Sportsmen."

DeGruchy and Corkery are two typical specimens of the clean cut athletes who are going with Lieut-Col. Greer. The one man never quit in a race until he was out to the last ounce while the other lad's grit and courage in standing up under abuse on the rugby gridiron is proverbial. As long as there was a kick left in him he would battle for the supremacy. His determination won for him the admiration of even his bitterest rivals while his friends among the fans are legion.

LOST LESUEUR.

One more touch to the Sportsmen yesterday was the loss of Captain Percy LeSueur of the Toronto Professional Hockey Club. He enlisted with the Highlanders. LeSueur is an experienced non-com. and would have made a fine addition to the Sportsmen's list of non-commissioned officers.

A BALL PLAYER ENLISTS.

To-day Tom ("Frosty") Nichols, the best all-round ball player on the Don flats, enlisted. He was a member of the champion St. Paul's, and was for two seasons with the champion Eatonians. He is an outfielder and substitute pitcher, and the best lineman that ever poked out a line hit down by the banks of the Don.

BRICKER IN LINE.

Gordon Bricker, the famous amateur goalkeeper who "held the bridge" for the Eaton O.H.A. champion team which went to Winnipeg for the Allan Cup, and who has played on the St. Michael's and other champion teams, is one of the men recommended for an officer's course for the Sportsmen's Battalion.

TIGERS TO FORM UNIT.

Major Walters of Hamilton was in town yesterday when a deputation of Ruby footballers connected with the Tigers of Hamilton, interviewed General Logie in connection with raising a battalion. They are eager to emulate the sportsmen of Toronto. It is said that about 5,000 fans of the team have not yet been touched, and Major Roy Moody would be a suitable man to command such a unit. The matter will be placed before the Minister of Militia.

POLICE STOPPED BOUT AT WINDSOR

WINDSOR, Feb. 4.—Police interference terminated the scheduled ten round bout between Barney O'Neill of Detroit, and Tommy O'Rourke, formerly of Memphis, at the Windsor A. C. on Wednesday night, after O'Rourke had been knocked flat by a wicked punch to the jaw in the ninth.

In the first period O'Neill took enough punishment to put him out but was saved by the bell. They then batted along carefully until the ninth, when the Detroiter sent O'Rourke to the floor, and the uniformed officers jumped into the arena. The referee has no option and awarded O'Neill the decision.

A Curious Custom.—The King of Spain always enjoys himself at Christmas, and he does not fail to play the chief part in the wonderful ceremony performed for centuries on Christmas Eve at the Spanish Court, when a crib is set up, and the Sovereign, tambourine in hand, followed by his Ministers, dances round the cradle of the babe. To us it may seem a curious custom. To him, as King of Spain, it seems the most natural thing in the world, and he dances with a will.

City Made a Very Creditable Showing—Several Departments Wound Up With a Balance to the Credit—Statement of Receipts and Payments, Also Appropriations—Special Accounts.

Appended is a statement of receipts and payments, also appropriations in connection with the administration of city's finances for the year 1915. Several of the departments finished up the year with a balance, while others were less fortunate. The Fire Department returned over one thousand dollars to the civic treasury. The Manufacturers's Committee also closed up the year with a substantial balance.

JUNIOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE GAMES PLAYED

Two fast games of hockey were played on the East City rink last night.

In the first games College street won over St. John's by a score of 5-4. The game was fast and exciting though a little one-sided. Rutherford in goal and Nelson played the best games for George street while Park starred for St. John's.

The second game was between Mark street and Knox. These teams were more evenly matched and made an exciting game. The game started off at a fast clip Mark street led at half time 4-2. Immediately after the second period opened Doughty made a fine rush and scored Knox's first counter. This gave the Knox team a start and three more goals were scored in quick succession. This made the score a tie at the end of the game. Ten minutes overtime was played to break the tie. Mark street scored another goal Knox could not find the nets. The game ended with the score 5 to 4 in favor of Mark street.

Mark Street	2	0
Knox	1	1
George	1	1
St. John's	0	2

Cupid Was Up-to-date.

"Engaged to four girls at once!" exclaimed the horrified uncle. "How do you explain such shameless conduct?"

"I don't know," said the graceless nephew. "I guess Cupid must have shot me with a machine gun."

HOCKEY

Both Peterboro Intermediate teams are playing out of town to-night and the championship of the group hangs on the result. The third play at Cobourg and the Electrics at Campbellford and a loss for either will put them out of the race, provided their rivals win. Neither team will be at full strength.

The Electrics went to Campbellford minus the services of Spratt and Rover Lowes, the junior defence man, will take Spratt's place while Bartley, the junior spare, who played such good hockey for the Pennants in the City League, last night, will be at left wing. The Electrics will line up as follows:

Goal—Legros.
Defence—F. Montgomery, Rolph.
Rover—Evans.
Centre—Hamilton.
R. Wing—McMartin.
L. Wing—Bartley.

Good to Look At.

Soph—Well, what do you think of her?

Freshman—Figuratively speaking, she's there.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Ada Graham was a recent visitor to Millbrook, the guest of Mrs. Staunton.

Miss Lilian McNichol of Havelock has returned to her home after visiting friends in the city.

Miss May McKim has returned to the city after spending a short holiday with friends in Millbrook.

Mrs. (Rev.) Cruickshanks, George street, who was injured in a sleigh-drive accident near Lakefield is reported to be in a serious condition. A peculiar coincidence in connection with the matter is the fact that last year the same Sunday school class met with misfortune while on its annual mid-winter outing when Mrs. Felix Brownscombe received a broken limb. This year they were bound for Lakefield and while rounding the corner near the House of Refuge the heavily laden sleigh slid into the ditch, with disastrous results to Mrs. Cruikshanks and Mrs. Dutram who ere acting as chaperones.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

OAK HALL CLOCK GREAT ATTRACTION ON DOLLAR DAY

From early morning till closing time, Oak Hall Store was one of the busiest places in the city.

The prize bundle sure was a winner and few were left after the first two hours' sale.

"Guess when the clock stops!" was the attraction. The store was crowded all day with buyers and hundreds of guesses were deposited in the ballot box. Varied were the guesses as to the time the clock would stop. Many guessed the clock would stop evening of dollar day; others to-day forenoon, and so on; some guesses varying from dollar day as far as Tuesday of next week.

Some were very reticent over their guess, but the majority made no secret as to the time they thought the clock would stop.

On the whole it was a most enjoyable day's business. The management is highly pleased with Dollar Day, and when Dollar Day comes around again next year, will no doubt be ready with some new attraction.

At the time of going to press the clock was still running and the first one to acquaint the management that the clock has stopped will be presented with the best tie in the store.

OBITUARY

JOHN CRONIN.

The death occured this morning at his late residence, 65 Sophia street, of John Cronin, following an illness of several weeks' duration. The deceased who was 76 years of age, was well known throughout the city, having been a resident of Peterborough for 53 years. He was born in Ireland but came to this country when quite young.

He is survived by one son, Mr. Thamos Cronin, and one daughter, Miss Kate Cronin, both of this city, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence, to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

GORDON C. ELLIOTT.

The death occurred at nine o'clock this morning at the Isolation Hospital, of Gordon Eldred Elliott, the young son of Mr and Mrs. John W. Elliott, 53 Olive avenue. The child who was five years and eleven months old, died as a result of diphtheria. He is survived by his parents, two sisters and one brother. The sisters are Mrs. Jas Price of this city and Emma at home. Mr. Vincent Elliott of town is a brother.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at ten o'clock from the Isolation Hospital to the Little Lake Cemetery.

We didn't want to fight
But now we Do Do Do.
We didn't want to fight
But jingo now we'll start
To teach the German Auto-crat.
The way to toe the mark;
Old Britain's sons have rallied round
From far across the seas
To fight for King and keep our flag
Unfurled upon the breeze.
We didn't want to fight
But Kaiser Wilhelm did,
So now we'll show old Kaiser Bill
That we won't take no kid;
We'll teach the mighty Landstrum
A goose-step new to him,
For we'll keep them at the double
Till we chase them to Berlin.
Hurrah, then on to victory
To tradition we'll be true,
Both our Tommies in the trenches
And our lads in navy blue;
Hurrah, then on to Berlin
Our flag unfurl with grace
We'll tear the German eagle down,
And fly ours in its place.

Revoted Grants For Public Buildings

The budget presented in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon lists several grants for public buildings in this district. Most of them are simply revotes.

Peterborough public building, $47,000.

Campbellford public building, $16,000.

THREE EYES FOR AN EYE.

"The allies have the means for exacting, not merely an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth but three eyes for each eye and three teeth for each tooth. Such a policy or reprisals opens up a tragic perspective, but at a certain point the demand for it may be justified."—London Chronicle.

WEDDING BELLS

ACKERMAN—HEPBURN

With groom and best man wearing the King's uniform, and special details of the wedding ceremonial carried out along military lines, the marriage of Miss Hilda Bernice Hepburn, daughter of Mrs. A. W. Hepburn, Picton, to Captain Charles Hadyn Ackerman, late of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Contingent overseas forces, was solemnized in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, on Wednesday, Feb. 2nd, at high noon, Rev. F. L. Barber, Rector, officiating.

A detachment of soldiers from the 126th and 80th received the bridal party at the church, and forming an arch of crossed rifles and swords, through which the distinguished company passed up to places at the chancel rail, while the wedding march was being played by Miss Mamby, organist of the Church.

The bride accompanied by her brother, Mr. R. H. Hepburn, M.P., and attended by sisters, Miss Madge Hepburn as maid of honor, and Miss Ina and Miss Edith McQuaig, a cousin, as bridesmaids, was charmingly pretty in an exquisite gown of white satin worn over a petticoat of silver lace, and with court train of tulle and satin depending from shoulders. A veil arranged in cap effect with coronet of orange blossoms was most becoming. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley, and were the groom's present, a handsome ring of diamonds and emeralds.

The bride's attendants formed a picturesque group in pretty frocks of pink brocaded taffeta over bodice of silver lace, and wearing picture hats of black velvet with under brim of pink tulle. Shepherdesse crooks, decorated with pink and mauve sweetpeas, completed the effective costumes.

The groom was supported by Major Keith Lech, 93rd, as best man, and ushers included Captain Gladney, Captain Cox, Captain Jones and Lieut. McKenzie Walters, all brother officers.

With much greenery at the chancel front and many flags to give a patriotic touch to church decorations, the setting for the impressive event was most artistic. The many handsome costumes of the wedding guests relieved the situation of any sombreness and added the needed brightness to the happiness of the occasion.

Following the Church ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, and buffet luncheon served. A large number of guests were in attendance and had the opportunity of offering felicitations and good wishes to the newly wedded pair.

Mrs. A. W. Hepburn, mother of the bride, received in a gown of black silk moire with small black hat and carrying violets.

Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, the groom's mother, was wearing lilac taffeta, black velvet hat and carrying a bouquet of sweet peas.

Captain and Mrs. Ackerman motored to Belleville on their way west for a short honeymoon after which they may be in Ottawa until further orders.

The groom has the distinction of having been among the first of Canada's sons to go overseas, and wounds received while on active service on the front must account for his being here at this time. He is being given needed opportunity for recovering from very trying experiences on the battle line, but is at the same time serving his country in whatsoever way may seem best.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. Waddell, Mr. and Mrs. Mead and children, all of Peterboro; Mr. J. W. Johnston, M.P.P., Mrs. Johnston and Miss Dorothy Johnson, of Belleville; Mrs. Wilmot and Miss Wilmot, Belleville; Miss Helen McQuaig, Mr. and Mrs. J. deC. Hepburn, of Ottawa; Miss Vera Venning, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Plummer, Toronto; Miss Gena Hepburn, Edmonton; Lieut. McGie, Mr. and Mrs. Stamford Warrington, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. F. Wilkin, Toronto.

PEACOCK—GRANT.

On Wednesday, January 19, 1916, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Grant, townline, Eld and Arran, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their only daughter, Ida Myrtle, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Samuel Peacock, of Mount Hope. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Ockley in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

Promptly at five o'clock to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding chorus played by the groom's sister, Miss Vina, the bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father and took her place beside the groom, beneath an arch of evergreens and flags. The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of cream lace over ivory satin trimmed with pearls and wore a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and maidenhair fern. Little Mable Lipsett, cousin of the bride, acted as ring bearer, and wore a dainty gown of pale pink voile. The groom's gift to the bride was a cameo necklace set with pearls; to the pianist a sunburst of pearls, and to the ring bearer a gold [illegible] chain.

Congratulations having been extended the bride led the way to the dining room where a dainty wedding dinner was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with carnations, roses and smilax. The remainder of the evening was spent in a varied programme of speeches, singing, piano selections, etc. Guests were present from Regina, Toronto, Peterboro, Paisley, Chesley, Pinkerton and Tara, and surrounding country.

Among the numerous and costly gifts received were a mahogany music cabinet, and a pedestal table from Ebenezer church, where the bride had been the organist for some time.

MORENCY—HERR.

St. Paul's church, Norwood, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Feb. 2nd, when Rev. Father Casey united in marriage Miss Mary C. Herr, daughter of Mr. Michael Herr, to Mr. George H. Morency, son of Joseph Morency, of this city. The bride was assisted by Miss Margaret Morency, sister of the groom, while Mr. John Herr of Saskatoon, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Morency will reside at 196 Lansdowne St., city.

$5,000 IF HE GETS DIVORCE.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 4.—Mary May H. Burrows of this city, who left a large estate, bequeathed $5,000 to her son-in-law, Capt. Charles Kendall Bush of the British army. If he will obtain a divorce from his wife, Marguerite, daughter of Mrs. Burrows. In case he accepts the bequest he must surrender all rights to the property which his wife will inherit. Mrs. Burrows left most of her estate to her grand-daughter, Marguerite Kendall Bush, in the charge of an executive of $5,000.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 10—A RISK or SURE THING—Which?

Here are two cases, very appropriate at the present time, as many householders know. A total stranger, probably a German or other foreigner, calls at your house, and offers eyeglasses for sale. He makes them sound cheap perhaps, and you risk injury to your eyes by buying and wearing glasses that are not correctly fitted to your requirements.

The other way is, when you notice the least eye trouble, you go to Dr. Fowler and have a proper scientific test made of the eyes. He supplies what he knows is a correct lens for just the weakness you may have in your vision, and you wear what, you are taking no risk in connection with whatever.

In this case you have an absolute guarantee from the oldest continuous optical business in Peterboro, and can see Dr. Fowler at any time. Can you afford to risk of the Pakiru' hap-hazard service? It will be Fowler's eventually, better come there first.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The steamer Koenig Albert, flying the Italian flag and with 300 Serbian refugees on board, has been captured by Austrian warcraft in the Adriatic, it was announced yesterday by the Overseas News Agency.

The agency's correspondent says: "An Austro-Hungarian submarine stopped the former North German Lloyd steamer Koenig Albert in the Adriatic. The steamer had been captured by the British at the beginning of the war and afterwards put at the disposal of the Italians.

"The steamer, which flew the Italian flag, carried 300 Serbian refugees. The submarine, after stopping the steamer, called a destroyer which towed the prize to Bocche di Cattaro, Albania.

The Koenig Albert, which before the war was in the North German Lloyd service between New York and Mediterranean ports, is a vessel of 10,484 tons, 499 feet long, built at Stettin in 1899.

POTATOES NOW $2.25 A BAG REPORTED SCARCE AT THAT

Supply Light Around Peterborough and Cavan Farmers Are Buying Seed From Manvers Neighbours

Potatoes were reported worth $2.25 this morning according to a report from several grocers and the limited supply is causing considerable concern to those whose stocks are light. The farmers in the vicinity are said to have practically exhausted their stores and Cavan farmers are buying potatoes for seed from their neighbors in Manvers. The latter however are not eager to sell but are rather holding what they have for future advances between now and early summer. All in all the "spud" situation is not an encouraging one for those who live "from hand to mouth," and in not a few instances it is reported that householders have begun to conserve their supplies against an advancing market. When potatoes pass $2 a bag they temporarily cease to be a staple food and in price at least may be classed among the luxuries.

JUDGE HUYCKE'S REMARK ON THE DESTRUCTION OF PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

At the opening of the Division Court this morning His Honour Judge Huycke said:

It is only right that as Judge of the County I should say a few words with regard to the terrible catastrophe which as occurred in this Dominion. I refer to the burning of our beautiful buildings at Ottawa.

It may be only surmise, but it must have occurred to anybody that these buildings, of which we have been so proud, in which from the time of Confederation great men have fought their battles in the interests of the country as a whole, that this the pride of Canada, has fallen as a result of the machinations of the enemies of the Empire. Quite apart altogether from the loss of life the treasures in literary, in art, and in many other things cannot be replaced. However, this calamity is one of the prices we must pay for standing shoulder to shoulder with the Mother Country in her hour of peril, and I say it is better to suffer ten thousand such losses than to do other than we have done. This catastrophe will bring home to the minds of many people of this county that perhaps we have been living in a fool's paradise. It has come to us like a thief in the night. It is time that the people of the Dominion should awake to the seriousness of the situation. Many people in Peterborough and throughout Canada have been asleep. This is one of the things that should wake us up.

The teacher asked the class to write down eleven Antarctic animals, Jimmy Jones quickly wrote down his answer, and took up his slate to the teacher's desk. This was what she read: "6 seals, 4 polar bears and one walrus."

Russia Completes New Railway To White Sea Port

PETROGRAD, via London, Feb. 5.—The short line railway from Petrograd to Soroka, on the White Sea, a distance of 650 miles, has just been completed, giving another outlet to the north besides that of Archangel and thus tending to relieve the congestion at the latter port.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Bay and Montreal, Can.

ANOTHER MYSTERIOUS FIRE IN OTTAWA LAST NIGHT

Grant-Holden Plant Engaged in Manufacturing Clothing For the Army Completely Destroyed---Fire Chief Says He Heard Five Explosions During Fire.

INVESTIGATION ORDERED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The Department of Justice has ordered a searching investigation to determine if incendiaries suspected of firing the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa came from the American side.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Important conference called by Sir Edward Grey at the Foreign Office this afternoon to determine England's action regarding the Appam.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—With Germany and the United States on the edge of a diplomatic break, there was a short conference between Bernstorff and Lansing late yesterday afternoon. Both officials said later that the situation was unchanged.

TO DETERMINE THE FUTURE POLICY OF U. S. TO GERMANY

President Wilson Scheduled to Meet Secretary Lansing in an All-Important Conference—Refusal to Disavow the Lusitania Sinking Has Created a Situation of Utmost Gravity

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—President Wilson was scheduled to meet Secretary Lansing to-day in the first of a series of all-important conferences that will determine this country's future policy towards Germany. Germany's refusal to disavow the Lusitania sinking has created a situation of utmost gravity, but for to-day at least no decisive step is planned. By Tuesday the President may be ready to lay his decision before the Cabinet. The President had before him the confidential report from Col. House. it is understood, cabled that German public opinion strongly opposes any admissions that the torpedoing of the Lusitania was illegal, that the hands of the German foreign office are tied against such a course. All administration affairs to-day were submerged under the cloud of the Lusitania negotiations. Practically all the White House engagements were cancelled. The point has been reached where there must be a "show down."

PREPARING FOR A NEW DRIVE ON CALAIS

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The London newspapers express the conviction that the Germans are preparing for a new offensive on a large scale against the left wing of the Allies. It is expected that they will attempt to cut a way to Calais and Dunkirk by the use of strong bodies of infantry supported by enormous masses of artillery.

British Find Out They Can 'Hustle' On Work For War

LONDON, Feb. 5. — Mr. David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, addressing the workers in a new shell factory, congratulated them on the [illegible] in which they had redeemed their pledge, "to deliver the goods."

"This," said the Minister, "is a fight not merely between the British army and the army of the Kaiser. It is a fight between British workmen and the workshops of Germany, and the British workmen are now supplying the material which is going to enable us to destroy the despotism of Prussian militarism and inaugurate a reign of freedom in Europe.

'In the old days a hustler was regarded as an alien enemy come over to this country to steal the trade of the easy-going Britons. But now we have discovered that we can hustle ourselves. We used to think that none but Americans and Germans could run up workshops in no time, fill them with machinery and turn out great shells; but now we are doing it ourselves."

Mrs. Winston Spencer Churchill at the same meeting read a letter from her husband, now a major in Flanders, in which he said the results of Mr. Lloyd George's labours and the workmen responding to his call already were obvious at the front."

"Our infantry in the trenches," wrote Major Churchill, "cheer when they see that the British guns are able to reply, sometimes threefold, to every German shell, and always replying with interest. During the campaign of 1916, if the noble exertions now being made in the workshops of Great Britain are maintained without flagging, we ought, for the first time in the conflict, to meet the enemy on equal terms, and even that is an advantage which will steadily increase."

Liquor and the Law

Suggested by IRVIN S. COBB, Author of "Back Home" And "Judge Priest Stories"

DUDLEY LARNIGAN, district attorney of New York, was a man who would never be suspected of hysterical fear. His word was good. When he said a thing it was taken for granted that he knew exactly what he was talking about and that he had the facts to back up his statements. And yet he was at this time almost the laughingstock of the city that had swept him into office at the last election by an unprecedented majority. The newspapers, while they did not actually attack him, made fun of him. His own friends looked at him askance. Even his own son, Bruce Larnigan, an unpaid and volunteer assistant in the district attorney's office, shared the prevailing opinion, at least to a certain extent. Father and son were talking.

"I've no doubt that there's a good deal of graft. We all know there is, in fact," said Bruce. "It's not so very long since I was admitted to the bar, and, of course, I haven't been in this office long, but I've seen a few things. Sniff, to say that there is a syndicate made up of respectable men, big business men, that practically makes a business of crime—I think you went pretty far, dad."

Dudley Larnigan sighed. He wasn't at all angry. He looked at his son patiently and a little wearily.

"You think I went pretty far," he said. "Half the city thinks I'm insane, I believe. And yet I shall prove, if I live, every charge I have made. I shall prove that the most powerful organization this country has ever seen has its center right here in New York—an organization founded on the determination to secure unfair advantages—graft—for its members. I shall prove that this organization will not stop and has not stopped at murder!"

"Can't you tell me more, then?" he asked. "Why, there must be men in this organization that I know—men who are supposed to be respectable!"

"Supposed to be respectable!" said his father bitterly. "Why, they're the leading men of the city—of the whole country. They are business men who are the leaders of our greatest industries. They control the business of the country as it is, but they want to get everything into their own hands. They want to stifle all competition. They are not content with the fair, legitimate profits. They want to get graft in every line and so double their profits. If they are not checked they will get a strangle hold on the nation. They will control elections everywhere; they will name one of themselves as president, and this country will cease to be a republic."

Bruce hesitated to answer. He saw the wild light in his father's eyes. He knew his father better than the men outside who laughed at him, who had jeered the speech that had started all the trouble. Never had Dudley Larnigan since his son could remember failed to make good any statement, any promise. Yet this—to believe what he heard now—called for more faith than Bruce could muster. He was about to say something of the sort when there was an interruption. There was a knock at the door, and an office boy appeared, bearing a parcel, which he handed to the district attorney.

"This came by special messenger, sir," he said. "The boy said there was no answer, and he wouldn't say where it came from."

Bruce took the package and took out his pocketknife, making to cut the string, but his father checked him.

"Let me see that a moment," he said. He studied the writing of the address carefully, and then, with a gesture of dislike and distrust, he savagely was shameless. "I thought so," he said. "It's from them."

"What do you mean, dad?" he asked. "Are you afraid they're sending you a bomb?"

"No; I don't think so," said Larnigan quite seriously and heedless of his son's jesting tone. "I don't believe the time has come for that yet. Open it, Bruce. We might as well see what's in it."

Bruce cut the strings, tore off the papers, and then, as the contents of the package were revealed, he started back, filled for the moment with horror. It was a yellow, grinning skull that he revealed, and on its forehead some words were written.

"Let the liquor trust alone," Bruce read. "We will phone for your answer."

Dudley Larnigan looked at him.

"You see, Bruce," he said, "there are some who take this business more seriously than you do."

"But—why—this is a joke—a silly, senseless, practical joke!" exclaimed Bruce. "Surely they wouldn't try seriously to frighten you with a stagy old trick like this?"

"Whether they tried seriously or not, they succeeded," said his father, "for I am certainly frightened, Bruce."

"You are frightened—by this?" said Bruce, looking from his father to the grinning skull. "Dad, you need a rest. Your nerves are upset. You've been overworking. You'd better take a vacation and get back into shape."

"I shall take no vacation until I have beaten the grafters or until they have beaten me," he said. "I have been waiting for the time to come, Bruce, when I could take you into my confidence regarding this. I see that nothing I can say will convince you that this is a real and deadly danger that I face. But the proof will come soon enough. It will be unmistakable when it does come. I know that I can count on you, my boy—that if they succeed in getting me out of the way they will still have to reckon with you."

In spite of himself Bruce was beginning to be affected. His father was so serious, was so evidently in deadly fear, that Bruce could not help being moved. It was impossible for him to believe when he tried to think things out that there was any basis for his father's fear, but it was equally impossible for him to believe that a man like Dudley Larnigan would give way to panic without the very gravest reasons.

"You needn't wait, Bruce," said his father finally. "I have a good deal of work to do, and I shan't need you."

Bruce got up and moved hesitatingly toward the door. Just then the telephone on his father's desk rang out sharply. Dudley Larnigan before he answered pointed to another instrument, and Bruce, understanding, lifted its receiver to listen to the conversation.

"Hello! Hello! Is this District Attorney Larnigan?"

"Yes."

"Larnigan, you know who is speaking. If you are in doubt look at the skull we sent you."

"I am looking at it."

"We warned in time. That skull is the symbol of the uncertainty of life. We admire you—we admire any strong and brave enemy. But do not mistake fearlessness for bravery. You can never beat us, and you will sacrifice yourself if you try. We do not offer you money. Leave us alone—or you will suffer."

"I shall do my duty. You have had before the only answer I shall ever give you. I am sworn to uphold and enforce the law. I shall do so at whatever risk to myself."

"Remember, this is the last chance you will have to save yourself. We bear you no ill will; we do not want to be obliged to move against you, but if you do not yield your blood be on your own head."

"I shall enforce the law. Either or later you will pay the penalty for all your crimes."

And on the word Dudley Larnigan, his forehead beaded with heavy drops of perspiration, slammed the receiver into the hook. He rose and faced at Bruce.

"How do you believe?" he said. "You heard what I said. I think I have one chance in a million to escape them. I am a marked man. It is impossible for me to guard myself effectively. Yet I shall go on."

"You said you were afraid," said Bruce.

"And so I am. I live in deadly fear. But, no matter how much I fear them, I fear my own conscience more. They can never punish me, no matter what they do, as would my own conscience if I betrayed my trust."

For the moment Bruce managed to shake off the depression that his father's mood and all the other circumstances had fastened.

"They're trying to frighten you," he said. "Good Lord, this is the twentieth century! They're trying to frighten you with old tricks. They'd never dare actually to use violence."

"We shall see," said his father. "At least I shall do my duty, no matter what the outcome may be, as long as I am spared. And I have faith enough in you, my son, to believe that if the men who are opposed to me give the best proof of the truth of my words you will take up that duty and make it your own."

Bruce shook his head sadly as he went out. It seemed to him that he had hit upon the truth—that his father was breaking down from overwork and that he was taking seriously a melodramatic and absurd campaign of blackmail.

"No doubt attempts are being made to dissuade him from doing his duty," said Bruce to himself, "but he is allowing himself to be upset by threats that would only have amused him a few years ago. Poor old dad!"

Bruce himself had a pleasant errand. His steps took him to the home of Roger Maxwell, whose vast interests in the field of insurance had caused him to be known commonly as the head of what was called the insurance trust. But it was not the great financier that Bruce went to see. He seemed to be well known at the house. The servant who answered his ring smiled as she took his hat and stick.

"Miss Dorothy's in the library, sir," she said. "She is expecting you, sir, I'm sure."

Dorothy Maxwell as Bruce entered the room was standing near a window. As she heard his step she turned, with a glad little cry, and came straight to him.

"Bruce," she said, "I'm so glad! You weren't sure that you could come."

"I usually manage to come, though, don't I?" he said, with a laugh. "Still, it did look doubtful. Dad, you know"—

He stopped, and she frowned a little.

"Whatever is the matter with your father, Bruce, dear?" she said. "Father says he must have gone suddenly mad to make such a speech; that he's antagonized all the solid business men in New York by the wild statements he made. I think—I'm afraid he isn't quite as pleased as he was at the idea of our—of our engagement"—

"It's got nothing to do with us!" declared Bruce angrily. "I'm not responsible for my father's actions. I think myself he's wrong about this; that he's been excited by things that have happened. But I can't let your father criticise him to me"—

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA

(NEARLY LOST HIM.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "Get Rid of It."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

"Of course not. She can't soothingly. "And he won't, I'm sure. And, anyhow, Bruce, dear, we're not going to quarrel, you and I, even if it turns out that our fathers do."

Bruce was about to reply when he looked over Dorothy's shoulder and saw two men in the next room. One was her father, Roger Maxwell; the other was Stanford Stone. And Stone, who did not know that Bruce could see him, was regarding them with such a malevolent expression in his usually inscrutable eyes that Bruce was startled. Stone at this time was reckoned the most powerful man in the great financial world of New York. He was concerned in a hundred great enterprises. Even the Sunday newspapers did not pretend to estimate the size of his vast fortune.

But while Bruce, wondering, was on the very point of saying something to Dorothy, Stone broke into a smile. He took Roger Maxwell's arm, and the two older men came into the library. Both greeted Bruce in the most friendly fashion, while Stone shook Dorothy's hand, his eyes devouring her.

"I hear I'm to congratulate you, young man," said Stone, and Dorothy blushed becomingly. "By the way, your father's given his friends—and I want you to remember that I'm one of the best of them—a good deal of anxiety lately. Can't you persuade him to take a rest? He ought to go somewhere and play golf for a week or two—get entirely rid of the strain and worry of his office."

"I suggested something of that sort to him today, sir," said Bruce. "But it's always been very hard for my mother and myself to persuade him to spare himself in any way. He works as hard as if he hadn't a cent in the world, and, as a matter of fact, he's a fairly rich man."

"That's always the way—always the way," said Stone. "Well, do the best you can to persuade him, my boy. He needs the rest."

"I think so, too," said Maxwell. "Dorothy, suppose you take Bruce somewhere else. Stone and I have some business to talk over, and we'll need the papers I have in my desk here in our talk."

Bruce and Dorothy were not at all loath to go. They smiled at each other as they went, and neither turned to see the look that Stanford Stone sent after them, a look that might well have aroused Bruce's fear and wonder had he seen it, knowing what he did of Stone's power.

Meanwhile District Attorney Larnigan had stayed at his office long enough to finish some important work and then had taken his place in his automobile.

"Drive me around the long way home, Jack," he said to his chauffeur. "The air is so beautiful today that I think it will rest me just to ride around. Go up into the country along the river and don't turn back until it's time to get me home for dinner."

"Yes, sir," said the chauffeur.

Bruce got home long before his father's return. In spite of his feeling concerning his father's fears, Bruce was worried. As for his mother, she had always opposed her husband's entry into public life, and she was worried every time he was a few minutes late in getting home. Bruce tried to calm her increasing nervousness, but he himself was worried, and as it grew dark he stood in the hall, looking for the rays from the headlights of the car that would herald his father's coming. At last he saw them, far down the drive that led to the house. His heart leaped happily, and he went back to call his mother.

"Here he comes, mother. It's all right, of course!" he cried. "You were silly to be worried."

She was in the conservatory at the back of the house, cutting flowers for the dinner table, and he had to go well away from the front door to find her. Then he slipped an arm around her waist, and they walked through the great hall together. They heard the car stop outside and heard Dudley Larnigan's voice giving some order. The car started again, and then outside there was a muffled cry. Mrs. Larnigan screamed. Bruce leaped forward. The door burst open, and his father staggered in, clutching convulsively at his side, and fell. Bruce took one look. He saw the blood that stained the floor, and then, as his mother, transformed by the need of action and gaining control of herself, went to work to stanch the flow of blood, Bruce raced for the telephone. He gave a number and waited impatiently for the answer.

"Hello, hello!" he cried at last. "Dr. Morgan? Hurry over here, doctor. Bruce Larnigan talking. My father's been badly hurt. It's very serious, I'm afraid. Yes, bring your instruments."

Then he helped his mother to do what little there was to be done before the doctor's arrival. Together they got the wounded man on a couch and made him as comfortable as they could. He had fainted and was no longer conscious. His breathing was heavy, and a growing, spreading grayness in his cheeks told Bruce, little as he was used to such scenes, that there was little hope, if any.

Then Bruce telephoned to the police. But he could give no clew—he had not taken the time to try to find the assassin. But then, as he heard the doctor's car chugging up outside, Bruce went to the door and flung it open. Pinned to the doorsill was a note written on rough paper in an unformed hand.

"Compliments of the fifteen!"

That was all. But it was enough. Bruce shuddered with terror and remorse as he realized that his father had been right—that he had been marked for death by an implacable organization, which had struck him down at last on his own doorstep. Then the doctor came. At the sight of Larnigan he looked grave. Gently he examined the wound.

"I'm sorry," he said, his voice showing his emotion. "There is nothing I can do—except perhaps to bring him to before—before he—he goes."

Bruce, speechless, nodded, and the doctor bent down and used a hypodermic needle. In a few moments its effect was manifest. Dudley Larnigan's eyes opened, and he reached out a hand gropingly. Bruce took it and bent down to listen.

"You will believe—now"— he said painfully and with a mighty effort. "It is the work of the fifteen—of the graft syndicate. Hunt them down—free this land of this mighty graft trust. Finish my work—run for district attorney"—

His voice died away; then, with a tremendous effort, he spoke again, one word. "Mary!" he said feebly.

With tears streaming down his cheeks Bruce turned to his mother. She leaned over, and it was in her arms that Dudley Larnigan died. And, standing over his body, Bruce swore that he would be true to the trust his father had imposed upon him—that he would avenge his death and bring his murderers to justice.

The murder of Dudley Larnigan had thrown the reform elements of the city into a panic. This terrible and sinister proof of the powers of the forces of graft had caused a revulsion of sentiment. Men who had assailed the dead district attorney as a fanatic and a hysterical demagogue for his great speech attacking graft had to admit that there had been some basis for his sensational accusations. But these same men were afraid to move. So it had been easy for Bruce to secure the reform nomination for district attorney. No one else wanted it. The graft syndicate had made it too plain that guilt as well as honor went with the office.

Bruce was making a splendid campaign, too, against the forces of graft. All the lower, vicious elements of the city were arrayed against him. From the dives, the gambling houses, the haunts of the drug sellers and the men and women who lived on vice and depravity, on crime and ignorance, the forces of evil sent out their cohorts against him. But Bruce, dwelling always on his father's martyrdom, on his own determination not only to avenge the dead man, but at whatever risk to himself to continue to fight against all the forces that were exploiting the poor and the ignorant, made a great impression and increased his own popularity tremendously.

He developed into an effective speaker, and his bitter, ringing speeches made many converts to his cause. Dorothy Maxwell had opposed his entrance into the campaign since she feared for his safety. Dorothy was beginning to be haunted by frightful suspicions, suspicions she had not dared as yet to communicate even to Bruce.

But once he was in the fight she stood by him. Ungrudgingly she consented to the postponement of their marriage that was made inevitable since it was impossible for him to take the time for his wedding during the campaign. And Dorothy, herself an ardent advocate of woman suffrage, did all she could to array the women of the city on his side.

"Women can't vote," she said in a speech she made to a suffrage organization, "but they can influence the men who can. Let every woman here go to the polls with some man and see that he votes right—for Larnigan and decency, against graft and corruption."

Thousands of women took up that cry, and the graft organization, which had expected a walkover when it had eliminated Dudley Larnigan, began to be worried and to see that it had removed one only to raise up another in his place whose youth made him even more formidable and dangerous.

And meanwhile Dorothy grew more and more suspicious. She learned that her father was bitterly opposed to Bruce's election.

"I won't have you taking part in this campaign," he said. "You make me look ridiculous."

He said this in the presence of Stanford Stone, but Dorothy was not afraid to speak her mind.

"I have a right to live my own life!" she flashed. "Why are you so opposed to Bruce?"

"Because he's a demagogue, a dangerous man," said Maxwell. "He, a rich man, is siding with the poor—the Socialists and the anarchists. He is a traitor to his own class."

"Now, Maxwell, Miss Dorothy is entitled to her own view," said Stone soothingly. But Dorothy had begun to distrust Stone. She refused to accept him as an ally. Bruce had told her of a discovery he had made. Stone, while pretending to be friendly, had secretly contributed heavily to the campaign fund of the opposition.

Election day came. Bruce, in his office, waited, knowing he had done his best. The result was with the voters. Would they trust him? Would they give him the power he required to do his work? He was waiting for Dorothy. She came at last.

"You're going to win, Bruce," she said as he took her in his arms. "I know it! I feel it!"

And then came Stone.

"Well," he said, "how does it look?"

"Bad for you," said Bruce uncompromisingly.

Stone laughed, with an excellent assumption of amusement.

"My dear boy," he said, "why do you mistrust me? I'm your friend."

Bruce looked at him. And just then there was a scuffle at the door. A rough looking man burst in and made for Bruce, waving a knife. Stone with a quick leap grappled with him, seized his hand and bent the wrist back till the knife dropped. Then quite calmly he pushed him out.

"Just an election rowdy," he said, with a smile. He handed Bruce the knife. "Perhaps you'll believe I'm your friend now. Well, I'll leave you."

"I'm grateful, Mr. Stone," said Bruce. But he was puzzled as he looked at Dorothy. Then his eyes fell on a bit of paper the thug had dropped. He picked it up and cried out in surprise and delight. "Look!" he said.

He gave it to Dorothy, and together they looked at it. It was a typewritten slip and read:

Come alone. For safety we will admit but one man. Will outline plans regarding Larnigan should he be elected. Number is 33 Hester street. Rap one, then two, then one. THE FIFTEEN.

"It's my chance," cried Bruce, with glowing eyes—"my chance to get on the trail of this secret enemy at last! I'll go!"

"Bruce, there'll be danger!" said Dorothy.

"Then I must face it!" he cried. "My dear, you know I must!"

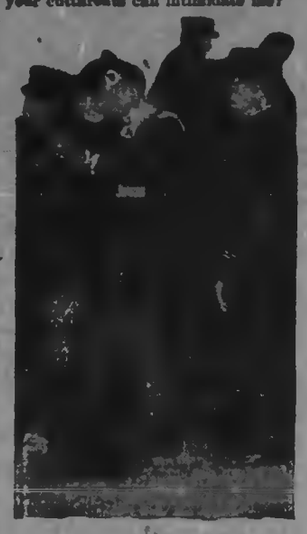
"Then I'll go with you!" cried Dorothy.

That evening before the count was finished Bruce gave the signal and was admitted to a dive that looked like a fit meeting place for conspirators. Dorothy attempted to accompany him, but was thrust back.

"We thought you'd come," said a man. "Mr. Larnigan, you walked into a trap. Now, you have one chance. Sign this paper agreeing to obey the commands of the fifteen or your political career is at an end; even your life is at stake."

Bruce stared at him then laughed.

"Do you think," he said, "you and your cutthroats can intimidate me?"



"Mr. Larnigan!" he said.

He made for the door.

"Stop him, Bradford!" cried some one near the door. The man who had accosted him struggled with Bruce.

Outside came a pounding on the door. Dorothy in terror called for the police. As the door burst open a shot rang out. The police snatched Bruce from his assailants.

"Mr. Larnigan!" the sergeant said.

"Yes, Larnigan!" said he.

He looked toward Dorothy, smiled and then said: "I wonder who will be the next to pay the penalty? Thank God, I have rid the community of one of the fifteen!"

KENTUCKY Turns Down PROHIBITION

A BILL submitting an amendment to the Constitution of Kentucky providing for state-wide Prohibition was defeated, 20 to 14, on January 25th, in the Upper House of the General Assembly of the State, where it originated. Which goes to show that old Kentucky has not failed to learn the lessons taught her by her sister states of the South, which lessons are certainly sufficiently plain, backed up, as they are, by a mass of incontrovertible facts and figures.

Takes Warning From Sister States

For example, owing to the Yost Prohibitory Law, by which the State lost $600,000 of revenue, West Virginia was literally "broken" financially. In Tennessee there was, owing to the introduction of Prohibition, an increase in the cost of criminal prosecution, that is, of crime, of 100%; while as to the financial situation, The State Manufacturers' Association said: "There is a tendency throughout the State to increase taxes on an already overburdened people, both by constant increase of the assessment as well as the rate." In North Carolina 57.5% of all the boys and 34.1% of all the girls were employed in gainful occupations and thus deprived of all educational opportunities.

The following tables are also illuminating:

DRY		WET
Tennessee	71.8	Florida	27.5
North Carolina	63.	Louisiana	11.3
Homicides per 100,000.
Memphis, Tenn.	68	New Orleans, La.	24.8
Savannah, Ga.	48.3	Louisville, Ky.	15.2
Nashville, Tenn.	39.4	Buffalo, N. Y.	4.9
Atlanta, Ga.	33.3	Brooklyn, N. Y.	4.8
Charleston, S. C.	30	Milwaukee, Wis.	3.4

The following illicit stills, by the way, were seized and destroyed by United States Revenue Officers in 1914:

Alabama	308
Georgia	802
North Carolina	535
Tennessee	249
South Carolina	253

And so on we might go through the whole gamut. Prohibition is a failure, not only economically, but morally and in every other way. And Kentucky knows it.

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation

REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE THIRTY-FOURTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

The Thirty-fourth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation was held in the Board Room of the Corporation's Head Office, corner of Bay and Melinda streets, Toronto, on Wednesday, the 2nd of February, 1916.

The President, the Hon. Featherston Osler, took the chair, and Mr. W. G. Watson, Assistant General Manager, acted as Secretary of the meeting.

Mr. A. D. Langmuir, General Manager, submitted and commented upon the financial statements showing the operations of the Corporation for the year ended 31st December, 1915.

The report to the Shareholders was then read, as follows:—

To the Shareholders:—

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting herewith the Thirty-fourth Annual Report of the Corporation, together with the Statements of Assets and Liabilities and Profit and Loss for the year ended the 31st of December, 1915.

The net profits for the year, after payment of all expenses, fees, taxes, etc., at the Head Office and Branches of the Corporation, and making ample provision for all ascertained or anticipated losses, amount to $345,456.05. To these net profits must be added $86,487.05 carried forward from 1914, making a total of $431,943.10, which amount has been dealt with by your Board as follows:—

To payment of four quarterly dividends at the rate of 10% per annum	$150,000.00
To amount of cost of extra equipment in the Corporation's Safe Deposit and Storage Vaults written off	$ 5,630.50
To amount written off Head Office building	25,000.00
	30,630.50
To amount subscribed and paid to the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John	2,500.00
To amount transferred to Reserve Fund (thereby increasing the Reserve to $1,750,000)	150,000.00
To balance carried forward to credit of Profit and Loss	98,812.60

The Assets and Liabilities Statement shows that the total assets in the hands of the Corporation amount to $71,869,470.10, being an increase over the preceding year of $4,448,879.11.

The Board of Directors have, on your behalf, in addition to the payment of the subscriptions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the Canadian Red Cross Society, which were provided for out of the profits of 1914, subscribed and paid $2,500 to the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, which contribution you will be asked to confirm at the Annual Meeting.

The Board of Directors have arranged for the opening of a branch of the Corporation at Vancouver, and suitable offices have been secured in the Bank of Ottawa Building, at the corner of Hastings and Seymour streets.

Your Directors exceedingly regret to report the death, which occurred during the year, of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the founder of the Corporation, its General Manager from the date of its organization in 1882 until his retirement at the last Annual General Meeting, and at the date of his death one of the Vice-Presidents of the Corporation.

Your Directors also regret to report the death of Captain J. L. Murphy, who for a number of years was Vice-Chairman and an esteemed member of our Advisory Board at Ottawa.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. D. LANGMUIR, General Manager. FEATHERSTON OSLER, President.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

We, the undersigned, beg to report that we have made a full examination of the books, accounts and vouchers of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation to the 31st December, 1915, and find same to be correct and properly set forth in the above statements of Profit and Loss and Assets and Liabilities. We have examined, and find in order, all the mortgages, debentures, bonds and scrip of the Corporation, as well as those negotiated for the Supreme Court of Ontario, and Trusts, Estates and Agencies in the Corporation's hands, and we have checked same with the mortgage and debenture ledgers and registers. The Banker's balances, after deducting outstanding cheques, agree with the books of the Corporation.

We have also examined the reports of the auditors of the Winnipeg, Ottawa and Saskatoon Branches, and find that they agree with the Head Office books.

R. F. SPENCE, F.C.A., "Can." } Auditors.
GEO. MACBETH, }

Toronto, January 18th, 1916.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., in moving the adoption of the Report, which was seconded by Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., M.P.P., made the following remarks:—

In moving the adoption of the Report which has just been read I will venture to say that the first thought in the mind of every one present this morning was of the familiar figure of the first General Manager, the late Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the founder of the Corporation, to whose energetic and careful administration for the long period during which he guided its affairs it owes, in large measure, the high position it occupies among the monetary institutions of the country.

Mr. Langmuir was, I believe, present at every Annual Meeting of the Corporation, and his suggestive and admirable address was always listened to with interest. As you are aware, Mr. Langmuir, after thirty-three years of active service, resigned his position as General Manager at the last Annual Meeting, remaining on the Board as Vice-President. It was hoped that some years of rest and usefulness were in store for him, but his health rapidly failed, and to the deep regret of his friends he passed away on the 12th of the following month of May, possessed "of all that should accompany old age" and full of years and honor.

With your permission I will presently ask the Secretary to read the Resolutions passed by the Board on the occasions of Mr. Langmuir's resignation and death, in order that these may form a part of the record of our present proceedings.

The Report of the past year's operations is now before you, and is submitted with some confidence for your approval. It discloses a substantial increase in the net profits over those of the previous year. The usual dividend has been maintained, a large addition made to the Reserve, and a sum of nearly $100,000 has been carried over to the next year's account. The statements which have been laid before you show that the business of the Corporation has been satisfactory and remunerative, growing in all legitimate directions, and manifesting by its growth the continued confidence of the public in its management and usefulness. It gives me pleasure to congratulate the new management on being able to show this result at the conclusion of their first year in office.

Mr. J. W. Langmuir's position as Vice-President was filled by the appointment to that office of Mr. Hamilton Cassels, K.C., who has been a member of the Board for some years, and Mr. Wellington Francis, K.C., of Toronto, was elected by the Board to fill the vacancy in the Directorate. His name and the names of the other Directors will be submitted to you for re-election.

We have passed through a year of what I may call unexpected prosperity, notwithstanding the continuance of a war unexampled in world history for the unsettlement of financial conditions and, the destruction of human life and of property.

Upon the conditions of daily life and existence in this country its effect can hardly be said to be as yet seriously felt, although it inevitably must be so as time goes on, whether the war were to come to an end to-morrow or should be prolonged, contrary to all expectations, for years. Economy, therefore, in all directions, and restricted expenditure, except in supporting our just cause, in which Canada has taken so noble a part, should be the watchword, not only of individuals but of every Municipal and business Corporation.

Of the staff of the Corporation at its different offices many have answered to their country's call, and some of them have already given their lives for its cause. As regards all of these the Board has felt that it would be the desire of the Shareholders that they should be generously dealt with. Their names have also been inscribed upon a Roll of Honor which has been placed in the Board Room of the Corporation.

Without attempting to anticipate anything which the General Manager may deal with in the course of his address, I may briefly refer to one or two matters of interest to the general body of Shareholders.

In particular I desire again to draw your attention to the value of the work of the Inspection Committee. This Committee's report to the Board quarterly and a consolidation of these reports is always laid before you. It describes fully the nature of their work, and its perusal will indicate the assurance which it gives that the orders of the Board have been carried out and that all securities which should be in the possession of the Corporation have been obtained and are in order. In view of the wreck and ruin involved in the recent failure of a western trust company where no such precaution appears to have been observed the value of an independent check of this kind, in addition to the usual audit, is apparent.

In all of our Provinces legislation, more or less drastic, in relief of debtors has been passed in the nature of a Moratorium, as it is popularly called, and sometimes also a War Relief Act, in addition, which makes special provision for persons on active service. The tendency of such legislation, to a certain extent, hampers investment, since it enables debtors, under some circumstances, to delay payment. In this Province its effect has not been marked, and in others it has not been taken advantage of to the extent which might have been expected. The Homestead Act of the Province of Saskatchewan and the Government Seed Grain Lien Acts, as well as other legislation referred to, have made it imperative to scrutinize more closely than ever the value of real estate offered as security.

In conclusion, I would remind the Shareholders that the main object of our existence is the administration of Trusts of all kinds, and the management of Estates as Executors, Administrators or otherwise, and that by influence or example it is always in the power of the Shareholders to extend the business of their Corporation in these directions.

The President then called upon Mr. Langmuir, the General Manager, to address the Shareholders.

In addressing you to-day for the first time since my appointment as General Manager, in succession to the late Mr. Langmuir, I do so feeling how greatly the Shareholders of this Corporation, who have been accustomed for so many years to follow his remarks on occasions of this kind, will miss him here to-day.

His broad grasp of the affairs of this country and the comprehensive manner in which he expressed his views and explained the operations of the Corporation were at all times listened to with respect and appreciation.

With regard to my appointment as General Manager of the Corporation, I appreciate the confidence which your Directors have reposed in me, and it will always be my endeavour to conduct the business of the Corporation on the lines of those well-considered principles which have obtained in the past, and which have placed the Corporation in the proud position which it occupies to-day.

The Report of the Directors, which is in your hands together with the Assets and Liabilities and Profit and Loss Statements, taken with the statements which I have just submitted to you, sets forth clearly the operations of and the profits earned by the Corporation during the past year, and I feel sure that the Shareholders, clients and friends of the Corporation will be gratified at the continued progress and success which have attended the affairs of the Corporation during the past year.

The Profit and Loss Statement shows that the net profits of the Corporation for the year amount to the sum of $345,456.05, or 19.52% upon the Corporation's paid-up Capital and Reserve. This sum added to the balance of $86,487.05 brought forward from 1914 made a total of $431,943.10 at credit of Profit and Loss.

These profits have been dealt with by the Board of Directors in the following manner:—In payment of four quarterly dividends on the Capital Stock of the Corporation, at the rate of 10% per annum, amounting to $150,000.00; in writing off $30,630.50 from the Corporation's Real Estate and Safe Deposit Vaults; in payment of a subscription of $2,500.00 to the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, and in the transfer of $150,000.00 to Reserve Fund, leaving a balance at credit of Profit and Loss of $98,812.60, as compared with the balance brought forward in 1914 of $86,487.05.

Turning to the Assets and Liabilities Statement, it is gratifying to observe that the total assets in the hands of the Corporation have been increased during the year by $4,448,879.11, making the total volume of business in the hands of the Corporation, as at the 31st of December last, $71,869,470.10, or a net increase for the year of 6.60%.

The growth of the Corporation's business during the past five years, as shown by the following figures, will no doubt be of interest to you all, showing, as it does, the increasing demand for Trust Company service in the matter of acting as Executor, Trustee or Agent, for the management of property or investment of funds. The figures are as follows:—

		1915	$71,869,470.10

The new business assumed by the Corporation during the past year, apart altogether from appointments as Trustee of Bond issues and work of a similar character, as you have learned from the Inspection Committee's Report, amounted to $7,795,477.93, or an increase over 1914 of $517,492.76.

The Corporation's office premises at Toronto and Ottawa, including the Safe Deposit Vaults at both places, appear in the accounts as at the end of the year, after the writing off of $30,630.50, at the sum of $800,000.00. On this amount the net return from these premises for the year in the way of office and vault rents, including a reasonable rental for the space occupied by the Corporation, and after payment of salaries, wages for caretaking, taxes and expenses of all kinds, amounted to $49,574.09, or 6.20% on the present book value of the properties.

You will also observe from the Assets and Liabilities statement that, notwithstanding the fact that the Canadian market has been practically closed to the Old Country investor, the amount of funds entrusted to the Corporation by Companies, religious and charitable institutions and by individuals for investment in our Guaranteed mortgages has slightly increased, the total amount of Guaranteed funds held for investment by the Corporation as at the 31st of December last being $9,715,345.72, as compared with the sum of $9,529,312.50 in 1914. This attractive form of investment offered by the Corporation has, by reason of recent Provincial legislation, become a Trustee investment, which enactment has considerably extended the scope of our operations in this department of work. All mortgages or municipal debentures in which these guaranteed funds are invested are earmarked in the books of the Corporation as the property of the particular investor for whom they are taken, so that, in addition to the guarantee of the Corporation, the investor has the actual Trustee security in which his funds are invested, which fact helps to make our Guarantee Investment Receipt a very desirable form of investment.

While the demand for high-class mortgage loans on city and farm properties has fallen off considerably during the past year, advantage has been taken of the very favorable prices which have obtained for Government and Municipal debentures to increase our investments in this class of security, and I am pleased to report that we have been able to keep our funds fully invested during the year and at very satisfactory rates of interest.

Our new investments in mortgages for all accounts amounted during the year to $3,795,993.94, and in Government and Municipal Debentures to $852,727.18. At the close of the year the Corporation had under investment in mortgages in the Province of Ontario of its own negotiation $14,769,501.80, bearing an average rate of interest of 6.17%, and in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta $7,882,799.21, bearing an average rate of 7.71%.

Our interest collections in respect to this large volume of mortgage investments have been most satisfactorily maintained. The percentages of interest collections made during the year strikingly evidence the high class of the securities held for these investments, as also the efficiency and diligence shown by the Head Office and Branches of the Corporation in their attention to this work. Referring to our Ontario mortgage loans, you will be pleased to know that 98.37% of all the interest charged during 1915, including arrears brought forward from 1914, has been received, and in respect of our Western mortgages 78% has been collected.

Referring to the lower percentage of collections shown in regard to Western as compared with Ontario mortgages, two facts should be borne in mind in explanation. In the first place, in respect of Western farm mortgages, the interest is almost invariably payable yearly, instead of half-yearly as in the East, and as a rule matures in the latter part of the year, and in the second place, difficulty and delay were experienced by many in the threshing and marketing of their grain this year, owing to the unfavorable weather conditions and the lack of adequate transportation facilities for the movement of the unusually heavy crop, so that at least 40% of the crop at the present time has not been realized upon, and indeed I am informed that the last of the phenomenal grain crop of 1915 will not be shipped from the West much before the beginning of harvesting operations for 1916.

With regard to the Provincial and Municipal Debentures purchased by the Corporation for Trust Capital and Guaranteed Accounts, and amounting as at the end of the year to $5,466,091.63, I wish to say that as these Debentures represent purchases made as far back as 1894, and no less than one hundred and seventy-five municipalities scattered, through five of the Provinces of the Dominion, it will no doubt be of interest to you at this time to know that not one of these securities is in default for principal or interest, which is a very good indication of the high-class character of the Canadian Municipal Debenture.

Speaking generally, I am glad on this occasion to be able to state that, notwithstanding the most unusual situation in which we find ourselves in Canada, owing to the war which we are, in common with other parts of the Empire, engaged, business conditions have during the year improved, interest maturing on mortgages on improved properties has on the whole been satisfactorily met, and an unlooked for amount repaid on account of the principal of mortgages. The manner in which the Dominion of Canada War Loan was subscribed to double the amount of the issue originally offered by the Government indicates the confidence of the public generally in the financial affairs of the Dominion. The unprecedented value of the farm products for 1915, together with the very large output of factories working on munitions of war of one kind and another, has suddenly brought us into a position financially which we had scarcely hoped would be ours as a nation for many years to come. Notwithstanding this, however, and the fact that not a few industries whose output cannot in any way be classed among war munitions or supplies have largely increased their business during the last year, it is nevertheless incumbent upon us as a nation and as individuals to practise economy in the conduct of our affairs as far as possible during the period of the war. Great and necessary as far as possible during the period of the war. Great and necessary obligations are being incurred by us in the matter of war expenditure, to which we should now have regard, so that our financial position may be secure when the war has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion, as we believe it will be, to the end that we may be in a position to proceed with whatever readjustments may be necessary in connection with our national and industrial affairs.

You have observed, no doubt, from the Directors' Report that a Branch Office of the Corporation has been opened in Vancouver, British Columbia. We obtained authority to do business in this Province in 1905, and, although this authorization has met our requirements in the administration of estates this authorization has met our requirements in the administration of estates having assets in that Province up to the present time, we now feel that the business of the Corporation can be further advanced by the establishment of a Branch Office. Mr. Frank M. Pratt, who was in the service of the Corporation at its Head Office for a number of years, has been appointed Manager, and very suitable offices have been rented at 407 Seymour street, in the Bank of Ottawa Building, situate on the corner of Hastings and Seymour streets. An Advisory Board will be appointed such as we have at our Winnipeg and Ottawa Branches, comprised of men of the highest standing in the community, and it is intended that the same close relationship shall be maintained with this new Branch as has all along existed between the other Branches and the Head Office, so that anyone who entrusts his affairs to the Branch at Vancouver will obtain the full benefit of the experience of the Corporation acquired during the last thirty-four years.

The Corporation is now chartered and equipped to do business in the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

In common with other financial institutions and business houses, the staff of the Corporation is doing its duty in the matter of enlistment for overseas. Over 25% of the staff—young and old—have taken up arms for active service, the Corporation allowing them half-pay. I deeply regret to have to advise you that already two of our staff have made the supreme sacrifice in giving up their lives in the service of their country.

In closing my remarks I desire to express my appreciation of the work done by the officers and staff of the Corporation at its Head Office and Branches during the past twelve months, and for the loyal and efficient manner in which they have discharged their duties.

The Report was unanimously adopted.

The Report of the Inspection Committee, as signed by Mr. Hamilton Cassels, K.C., LL.D., Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G., and J. Bruce Macdonald, was also adopted.

The following Shareholders were elected Directors for the current year:—W. R. Brock, Hamilton Cassels, K.C., LL.D., Sir William Mortimer Clark, K.C., LL.D., Hon. Senator W. C. Edwards, Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., M.P.P., A. Wellington Francis, Col. Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G., LL.D., Arthur C. Hardy, John Hoskin, K.C., LL.D., R. W. Leonard, Thomas Long, J. Bruce Macdonald, Sir Daniel H. McMillan, K.C.M.G., W. D. Matthews, Hon. Peter McLaren, Lieut.-Col. John F. Michie, Sir Edmund Osler, M.P., Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., J. G. Scott, K.C., Sir Edmund Walker, C.V.O., LL.D., and E. C. Whitney.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors Hon. Featherston Osler, K.C., D.C.L., was re-elected President, and Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., M.P.P., and Hamilton Cassels, K.C., LL.D., Vice-Presidents.

The Inspection Committee was re-elected, namely, Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., Chairman; Hamilton Cassels, K.C., and Hon. Sir John M. Gibson, K.C.M.G.

The following members were elected to the Advisory Boards at Ottawa and Winnipeg:—

Winnipeg—Hon. Sir Daniel H. McMillan, K.C.M.G., Chairman; H. H. Smith, W. H. Cross, A. L. Cromie, Hon. Sir D. C. Cameron, K.C.M.G., and Frederick T. Griffin.

SUEZ CANAL IS VITAL TO EGYPT AND INDIA

Beaconsfield's Great Stock-buying Coup Has Great Effect on Present War—Why Egypt is Loyal

Apart from its fascinating contrasts of ancient and modern, Sphinx and motor truck, Soudanese and Lee donner, Mohammedan and Christian and everything else, Egypt rivets in ceasingly the attention of every military man in the world and of every British patriot. For Egypt is the base of operations for the defence of the Suez Canal, as well as the base of recuperation for the other Mediterranean and Oriental campaigns. The canal is the vital thing in the Anglo-Indian empire. Writers call it the jugular vein of this empire. Without control of the canal England and India are separated, the head from the body. As the body needs the head, so Hind needs the British Isles.

Since Beaconsfield made the greatest stock market, and at the same time political, coup ever made by a statesman in purchasing a controlling interest the foreign policy of Britain and the domestic policy of the India Office has been centred around the Suez ditch. It may not carry as much traffic as the Sault Ste. Marie canals or be as gigantic an undertaking as the Panama, but, strategically speaking, it counts more for the Empire, both in war and peace, than its engineering achievement or carrying records would indicate.

Prestige Counts

The fact that Egypt is a part of the Mohammedan world is also of the greatest importance to Britain and Germany. With Mohammedan Egypt loyal the loyalty of Mohammedan India is much surer than otherwise. What happens in Cairo is soon carried to Calcutta and prestige is not to be despised in dealing with the half-civilized Moslems. In Egypt is found the greatest example of a Mohammedan country raised to prosperity by a Christian country. This has impressed Islam. But should the invasions from Palestine succeed in wresting permanently the canal from British hands and in shaking Egyptian loyalty then indeed would the security of British prestige be gone.

It is small wonder that the Germans have sent emissaries to all the countries around Egypt as well as to the land of the Pharaohs. Huns have tried continually to stir up the wild fanatical tribes in all the hinterlands of Egypt. The Holy War has been proclaimed from Constantinople, but that is rather a worn-out and dulled weapon. Where it fails German gold and boasting succeed better and the watchful British eyes that look out from Egypt have a busy time. To the west in the desert behind Italian Tripolitana the Senussi, half tribal fanatics, half terrible secret society, have been stirred up. In the Soudan the big Mohammedan empire who fought so recklessly against Kitchener a score of years ago were easily made restless. In the hinterland of the French colonies in Algeria and Morocco the wild tribes have been remarkably active since the Hun took to turning every available and gullible race against the forces of civilization.

Britain's Strong Hold

But not all the advantages are with the attackers. The reason for this is Egypt. Egypt is near and wealthy. It furnishes great supplies of food, being a great grain growing country. The British officials have control of the administration, of all the resources of the land, its railways, and public buildings and harbors and roads. It has a great native army at hand. It has a population which depends upon the wizardry of the English engineer, Willcocks, for its life-giving supply of water. The Sphinx has fascinated the Hun and lures him on. But the Hun must arouse the fellaheen, the farmer of the Nile valley, from his contentment, from his satisfaction over the regulation of the Nile by the Assuan dam, from his lack of religious enthusiasm for the cause of Kultur and Constantinople, if he is to disturb British control of Egypt, of the Suez canal, of India.

COMING OF THE KAISER

Chief Hun's Visit to Damascus and Ancient East

Thirteen years before the war when we entered Damascus, writes an Englishman, we found the old city turning in its sleep after an imperial visit. We saw painted on all the facades of the houses what I should have recognized, if I had been wise, as "the writing on the wall," the mark of the beast, the beginning of all this evil the finger pointing to Bagdad. Horizontal stripes of red, black and white, the brand of the Hohenzollerns. William, the friend of Abdul, had visited the oldest city in the world. The Sultan was—literally perhaps, figuratively certainly—to be clasped in a tight and, as after events may prove, suffocating embrace. Not a sacred dwelling was spared, not even the house of Ananias or the house where St. Paul was let down in the basket; and the little mountain train that takes one on to Lebanon and the sea wore on every carriage the same livery. And, last profanity of all, even at Baalbec on the temples of Jupiter and the Sun was inscribed the legend, "Imperator Germanorum visit avit."

More Danger Out of War

After being severely wounded in three battles, Walter Baer, a German soldier, returned to his native town and on the same day was run over and killed by an auto truck.

Mr. John Wray, the Australian millionaire, who gave $2,500 to the first Australian V.C., started life as a salesman in a boot shop.

GREAT DECREASE IN CRIME SHOWN IN ENGLISH COURTS

LONDON, Jan. 18.—One of the endless results of the world war has been a gentle boom in the trade in white kid gloves in England.

"White kids" are presented to police court and other magistrates over here when there are no cases to be tried by the tribunals over which they preside, and since the fighting started the observance of this custom has been so frequent throughout the country that the newspapers have ceased to chronicle it.

Crime in Britain has diminished in an extraordinary way since Armageddon burst forth, the explanation being that most of the erstwhile crooks and criminals have joined the army.

In some quarters it is evidently not thought quite patriotic to admit this. The editor of a certain penny weekly, for example, on being questioned bluntly by a correspondent as to whether the diminution in crime was due to a large number of criminals having donned khaki, replied that this was certainly not the case, adding the astonishing explanation that the falling off in wrongdoing was owing to the fact that most of the rogues were Germans who are now safely interned!

War Better Than Old Game.

Detectives and other representatives of the law, however, tell a different story, and are constantly relating tales of how they met this or that renowned porch climber or crib cracker wearing his majesty's uniform, and heard from him stories of war adventures that, in his own words, "beat the old game hollow."

In consequence of all this the Central Criminal Court, the 'Old Bailey' of other days has just finished its shortest session on record. The "Christmas calendar," almost invariably a budget of rich things in evil doing, was this year a mere shadow of its old self, with only fifty cases all told, and most of them pleasingly trivial.

For instance, the larceny cases numbered ten, those of fraud and receiving stolen property five each, and there were an equal number of embezzlement cases. There were three cases of forgery, one of "trading with the enemy" and only one of murder.

Within living memory never has there been a shorter list. In the police courts the story is the same; prosecutions for burglary, forgery, coining, receiving, all have lessened to a minimum.

Other Reasons for Decrease.

"There are other reasons besides enlistment for the decrease in crime, however," said the Scotland Yard man. "With the increased demand for labor of all kinds, petty thieves find it easier to make an honest than a dishonest living. There are also fewer temptations. Drinking has been cut down by the restriction of hours and the no treating order. Thus two of the chief sources of crime in usual times have been cut off.

"Yet, while ordinary crimes are few the war has brought about many fresh and ingenious tricks, which the police have to be vigilantly on the watch for. Bogus street collections have been promptly stamped out, but more difficult are the frauds on army and navy allowances.

"In one case a soldier's wife, whose baby died, borrowed another, in order that she might continue drawing 7 shillings a week. Another woman committed bigamy with two soldiers and drew separation allowances from two different districts.

Hordes of Adventurers.

"Hordes of adventurers and impostors have taken advantage of the war. Several of those who fought that all the talent of the detective service was engaged on war work are now rueing their optimism behind locked doors. One of these is Serge Miniovitch, a Russian, who is one of the cleverest cosmopolitan rogues living.

"As a Russian secret service agent, engaged on a special mission in this country, he ingratiated himself with numbers of well known people and tradesmen, to whom he boasted of his intimacy with Lord Kitchener, Sir Edward Grey, the Russian ambassador, and Mr. Asquith. As a result many of his dupes parted with large sums of money."

Will Lift Cattle Embargo.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—The embargo on the shipment of dairy cattle into Massachusetts from New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island will be lifted on February 7th, under an order issued to-day by the State Commissioner of Animal Industry. The embargo was imposed in November, 1914, on account of an outbreak of the foot and mouth disease.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JOE BAKER'S GIRL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by Associated Literary Press.

That was the way she was referred to in a general way—"Joe Baker's girl"—and there were plenty of soldiers, teamsters and others who did not know that her name was Mary.

A girl of about eighteen when I knew her—slight, blue eyes, short, curly hair, a strong face, dressed for climbing, riding and walking, and one who commanded both admiration and respect the moment you laid eyes on her. She had a handshake for officer and private alike, and to us and all others who came that way she was a border queen.

For weeks the Indians of Idaho had been sulky and sullen and threatening. We had not seen the girl for a month when a sergeant's guard was dispatched to East Butte to cut and haul telegraph poles for the line which was to connect the fort with the outside world.

Two miles east of the cabin we made our camp and began work, but the Indians were ready sooner than we had planned for. On the second night of our stay we were fired into at midnight and routed out of camp with the loss of two men killed. We were falling back in the direction of Baker's cabin when we were joined by Mary. The Indians pressed us every foot of the way, and but for the darkness of the night and the girl's familiarity with the lay of the ground not one of us would have escaped. We were no sooner sheltered by the cabin than it was clear that we must stand a siege before the door could be opened again.

"Well," said Joe Baker's gal when we had canvassed our situation and its chances, "we must put up with things as they are and do our best. The Indians have encircled the cabin and will be on the watch the rest of the night, but they will make no move till daylight comes. Let us sleep if we can."

She went to her room, and the four of us lay down on the floor and napped until daylight came.

In the larder there were about five pounds of bacon, nothing else. There was no telling how long we should be cooped up to live on those scant rations, and by common consent we went without breakfast. The Indians cooked their morning meal in a leisurely manner, and it was some time after sunrise before they made their first move. It was a band with Chief Charlie in command, and he knew Baker and the gal even better than we did. Baker had hunted with him and on one occasion had saved his life, and he called at the cabin on various occasions and had been hospitably received. He was therefore probably in earnest when he advanced alone and unarmed to within a few feet of the cabin and said to Mary:

"We are on the warpath against the whites, and we mean to kill, kill, kill until all are dead or driven away. Your father saved my life, and an Indian never forgets. I do not want harm to come to you, and you shall take your horses and ride away to the fort in safety."

"But what about the soldiers?" she asked from one of the loopholes.

"They cannot go," he replied. "The soldiers are here to make war on us—to shoot us down, to make us obey orders we do not like. We have only hatred for them. I know how many there are in there—four. They have their guns and will fight, but we shall kill every one. Come out, and we will send you safely away."

"I shall remain here and help the soldiers to fight you!" answered the girl.

"Then you will be killed with them!"

The chief turned away and went back to his warriors, and ten minutes later there was a circle of fire all about the cabin. It was not long before two of the soldiers were dead.

MADE IN CANADA.

With only three of us left to guard the cabin, another attack must overcome us. It was hours before we heard from the Indians again, and we were almost certain that they had drawn off, when, an hour before sunset and without the slightest warning, they rushed for us as before. The demons were on the roof and battering at the door and firing in upon us from some of the loopholes, when suddenly things turned dark with me.

There was no more fighting that night. Consumed by thirst and racked with pain, I remember nothing except that Mary spoke hopeful and sympathetic words now and then, and that she had the guns distributed around so as to cover as many loopholes as possible in case of an attack. When morning came the Indians asked for a parley and offered to send her to the fort. I did not know it, being out of my head with fever. She scorned the offer, and for three hours the cabin was under a heavy fire. A rush would have followed the fusillade, but as they were gathering for it a half troop of cavalry from the fort, headed by Joe Baker, came galloping to the rescue, and the Indians were routed. It was ten days before I knew all about it.

A great Indian war was upon the land, the girl had been sent hundreds of miles away for safety, and when peace came again she did not return. It is like a dream to me—three dead men, one grievously wounded, a white faced girl moving about and making ready to fire a last shot, the crack of rifles and the fierce warwhoops—but I know that it was all real, and a humble private soldier whispers:

"God bless Joe Baker's gal wherever she may be!"

He is often accused of reading the postcards that pass through his hands, but this he strongly denies. A lady called at the shop and ordered, among other goods, a ham and a cheese. Two days later the lady called again and asked why these two articles had not been sent with the other goods. "Oh," replied the merchant calmly, "I saw by the postcard yo' got yestiday that yo' friends wasn't comin', so I nachally thought yo' wouldn't need them things."—Argonaut.

In Holland the tulip became about the middle of the seventeenth century the object of a trade unparalleled in the history of commercial speculations. From 1634 to 1637 all classes in all the great cities of Holland became infected with tulipomania. A single root of a particular species called the "viceroy" was exchanged in the true Dutch taste for the following articles: Two lasts of wheat, four of rye, four fat oxen, three fat swine, twelve fat sheep, two hogsheads of wine, four tuns of beer, two tuns of butter, 1,000 pounds of cheese, a complete bed, a suit of clothes and a silver beaker, the whole being worth 2,500 florins.

ARMENIA'S FUTURE IS HANGING IN BALANCE

Refugees in Russian Territory Die Like Flies After Heroic Defence and Fearful Marches

If this war has displayed few dramatic developments on the European battlefields it has undoubtedly shown several tragical turns on the remote Transcaucasian front—tragical at least for the Armenian people, whose existence was shattered from the beginning of this war. Speedy marches of the Russo-Armenian forces into Turkish Armenia, a heroic battle for self-defence followed by a victory of the Armenians of Van and the expulsion of the Turks from that city, a disastrous retreat of the Armenians into Transcaucasia for safety and other events of a similar character have succeeded each other with dramatic rapidity. After over a year of such vicissitudes, about 140,000 refugees, the last remnant of the Armenian element in Turkish Armenia, were quartered within the borders of Russian territory, and some 30,000 Armenians, Nesterians and others now quartered in Persia. The greater part of these Armenian refugees have come from the city and province of Van; the remainder constitute the aggregate of what used to be the Armenian element in the various Armenian provinces of Turkey.

When Russians Retired

At the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish War the speedy advance of the Russian army into the Euphrates Valley saved almost the whole Armenian population of the district. Then Armenians of Van and of the province fought a heroic war of self-defence, captured the town from the Turks, and thus saved themselves from the general massacres which the Turks carried out in Armenia and Asia Minor. Though they bravely defended themselves against great odds the Armenians of Van had to retreat in the rear of the Russian army when the latter retired. This withdrawal of the whole Armenian element of Van was effected under the most adverse circumstances. Only twenty-four hours was given them to quit their homes, and there were very scarty means of transport. Some 250,000 people, already sorely tried during the previous hard months, had to walk a distance of more than 100 miles into Transcaucasia. They had no provisions whatever, and, exhausted by hunger and thirst, walking in dust and under the scorching sun, they suffered horribly on their journey. Those who lagged behind were attacked by Kurds; many women threw themselves into the River Bendimahu in order to save themselves from Kurdish brutality; others dropped their children and continued the frightful march, which lasted some twelve days.

Epidemics and Orphans

Terribly strained and fatigued, these unfortunate Armenians reached Etchmiadzin (where the Catholicos, the head of the Armenian Church, resided), Erivan and other Armenian centres in Transcaucasia, to find few measures taken for their reception. Typhus, spotted fever, dysentery, and, later on, cholera and other epidemics, broke out in virulent form and literally decimated these homeless and foodless refugees. Some thirty thousand of these refugees died after the journey, despite hurried aid from Russia. Some 20,000 orphans, whose parents have fallen, have already been taken care of in various orphanages and convents. Yet the mass of the remnant of the Armenian population are crowded into camps under the most unhealthy conditions, deprived of all elementary comforts of daily life, trying to live on less than eight cents a day per head, which they get as relief from the various distributive organizations. The existence of one of the oldest Christian nations in the East, the larger portion of which already massacred by the Turks, is hanging in the balance.

THE ARMENIAN SPIRIT

Hatred of Turk Expressed in National Songs

A British traveller writes: "I remember evenings spent in Bagdad in the house of an Armenian, K—— Effendi—it is not safe to give his name—when with shutters barred and doors closely guarded a servant would stand by the glowing brazier and sing national songs. The Turk is not loved by subject races. The Jews and Armenians in the city, if they escaped with their lives, would welcome the sound of the British guns. Yet in all social relations the traveller will find the well-bred Turk of the old school what the German eminently is not—a gentleman. Like the Bedou, he has a code. There are things which are done and things which are not done, and expediency does not juggle with the rules. But the code has its limitations as the massacres show."

The inhabitants of the United Kingdom receive, on an average, about seventy-five letters each a year.

WHERE ISLAM RUINED HUNS OF ORIENT

And Now the Artillery Fire of Turk and Briton Further Mutilates Wonderful Palaces

The Constantinople press referred to the reverse of the British at Ctesiphon, near Bagdad, as an omen that British rule in the East was endangered. Ctesiphon, which is several hundred miles up the Tigris from the Persian Gulf, where the British expedition began operations, is famous for the number of decisive battles that have been fought there. It had been Mohammed's intention to take the "White Palace" of Ctesiphon, but he did not live long enough to lead his Arab hordes against this Persian stronghold. The undertaking was left to the second caliph, Omar, whose commander-in-chief, Saad, defeated the Persians under Rustem at Seleucia, on the right bank of the Tigris River, so decisively that a few months later Emperor Jezdegerds, last of the Sassanide kings of Persia, also lost Ctesiphon, the twin-city across the raging and wide stream. Thus fell "Madein," as the Arabs fitly called Seleucia and Ctesiphon—the "Twin City."

Miracle Foretold

Saad, as he stood on the place where a few hours before had been the throne of the Sassanids, turned his face in the direction of Mecca and cited a verse from the Koran which for many centuries was not without meaning to Seleucia and Ctesiphon:

"How many gardens have they left,
And springs and crops;
How many a place of pleasure
Serving their delight?
I (God) gave them to another people
And neither Earth nor Heaven wept."

The booty which the Moslem conquerors of the twin cities took was one of the greatest of all antiquity. About 60,000 Arab warriors took part in the assault upon Ctesiphon. The share of each in currency, precious metals and jewels was worth 12,000 silver drachms, after a fifth of the loot had been set aside for the caliph and his treasury, and another fifth for the widows and orphans of the soldiers who had fallen in the campaign.

Artillery and Arabs

Before the Arabs left Ctesiphon they set the "White Palace" afire, after removing every object of value, among them the largest Persian silk carpet on record. The carpet was about 300 yards long, 100 yards wide, made entirely by hand, and it pictured a garden. The birds woven into the carpet had been fashioned of precious stones, as were also the flowers. During the fights between the Ottoman troops and the British, the remains of the "White Palace," splendid even in their ruined state, were further devastated by the Turkish and British artillery fire.

TRIES TO END LIFE BY FIRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—Gustave Gern, 55 years old, a laborer, of No. 426 West Twentythird street, attempted suicide by lashing himself to the cellar stairway at his home and then setting fire to his clothing. His clothing was in flames when George E. Perlin, an employee of the Consolidated Gas Company, entered the cellar. Perlin summoned help and had beaten out the flames before firemen arrived.

Gern was taken to Bellevue Hospital in a critical condition.

TREES AND MAN.

"As far as possible, all of us demand trees about our dwellings for their shade, we say, or their charm, their protection, their architectural value. But at bottom, I believe, all our reasons are the same; we demand trees about our dwellings because deep within us—deep, perhaps, as the primal instincts of the race — is a great and truthful affection humorously akin to the dog's trust in the table beneath which he lies, whether to escape the heat of summer or the Fourth of July fire-crackers. For all the centuries of upward development, for all our tall cities and snug dwellings, we are close to the ancient mother still. Go out some day into the wild places; let night come on or a storm, and see how you turn like a homing bird to the shelter of the hemlock thicket! Even on my own little place of a few acres there is a grove of pine near the house, murmurous like the sea, and beside it three gnarled old apple trees, which put a green roof over that bit of the lawn; and to them I return a dozen times a day out of the sunshine or the moonlight on the garden, as a man returns to the welcome of his roof and hearth."—Century.

ODDS AND ENDS AFTER THE MODE

Hats and Hat Trimmings

OSTRICH BANDING ON FROCKS

NEW YORK, February 5.—The "dress-up" notion seems to have taken a strong hold on us, one and all. Our shop windows present wonderful changes each day, and our Avenue has become a veritable kaleidoscope of attractively gowned and hatted women. Perhaps it is the opening of the new season with its suggestion of coming spring, although the frost and snap of old winter still lingers, which causes us to look with more appreciative eyes than usual on the new offerings in frocks, suits and hats. But, leaving aside these flattering elements, there is really more of beauty and smartness in this season's styles than we have had for many a year.

Ostrich Trimming on Frocks.

Fur is still the smart trimming for all garments, and it promises to remain in favor well into the spring. There is already a hint here and there, however, that designers and manufacturers are tentatively reaching out for an attractive successor. In one of the smart shops the other morning, a most attractive afternoon dress was displayed; it was made in Russian effect, was very simple, and sparingly ornamented, the only trimming, in fact, being bands of ostrich in the same shade of blue as the dress, edging the high, standing collar, the cuffs and the lower edge of the blouse peplum. The effect was pleasing and perfectly appropriate for the warmer weather.

Trimmings for Spring Hats.

Whether ostrich as trimming for hats will be favored to any great degree, is still a question; that it will be used considerably, as in the past season or two, for fancies, old little stick-ups, balls, rosettes, and similar effects, on the chic small hats which are being introduced as first models for spring, has already been confirmed. Many handmade hats are being shown this season. The new braids are mostly shiny; glace effects will predominate, although one sees some effective dull-finished hemps and tagals. A new glace braid from Paris resembles nothing so much as the scales of a fish, and it is appropriately named "fish-scale" straw. Some flowers will be used on the new hats, and quantities of ribbon. The new colors in millinery are, generally speaking, black, which is quite as strong as ever, geranium-pink, absinthe, polished-gold, mintgreen, and baby chick; the last a charmingly suggestive title.

Among the attractive millinery notions being displayed in the shops,

Drop-Shoulder Frock—Band-Trimmed Skirt

5,000 GUN STOCKS DAILY.

The woodman is not sparing the walnut tree these days. East, west, north or south of Kansas City, there are cars loaded with walnut logs on the sidings and more logs piled along the tracks. The timber is coming into Kansas City to be sawed into gun stocks, says a despatch from that city.

Three hundred cars of logs are coming into Kansas City a month, and close to 5,000 gun stocks are being turned out each day. Two plants have the business, the Pearce Walnut and Veneer Company in Sheffield and the Frank Purcell Company in Armourdale.

Each is surrounded by high barbed wire fences, locked gates, and warning signs. But the nervousness of war contract holders is coming up.

Of course, you can buy cheaper teas, but

is undoubtedly the most economical and what appears to be 'cheap' in price will prove to be extravagant in use. The fresh young leaves of "Salada" will yield you generous value for your money. B115

RUSSIANS HATE GERMANS.

Dr. F. W. Eastman Says They Are Thoroughly Roused Now.

Fred W. Eastman, one of the American surgeons who went to Europe on the steamer Red Cross, returned to New York on the Anchor liner California after making a final tour of inspection through Russia and Germany.

"The Russians are beginning to wake up now," Dr. Eastman said, "and show a warlike hostility for their greatest enemy. It is difficult to explain how the Germans have stopped the Russians from hating them so long, but they have. Before the war the commercial interests of Germany were very strong in Petrograd and Moscow, and this fact helped to restrain bad feeling against the Germans.

"The stories of the ill-treatment of Russian prisoners in German prisons have aroused a feeling of hatred among the people of Russia. I was at Kiev, where there were a great number of Austrian and German prisoners, and they were all treated well.

"There are about 1,000,000 Russian soldiers in training around Kiev, and they have all the ammunition and equipment that they need."

IF SUBJECT TO COLDS HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Don't load your stomach with cough syrups. Send healing medication through the nostrils—send it into the passages that are subject to colds and Catarrh. Easy to do this with Catarrhozone, which cures a cold in ten minutes. Even to the lungs goes the healing vapor of Catarrhozone—all through the bronchial tubes, nostrils and air passages—everywhere a trace of disease remains will Catarrhozone follow. You'll not have colds, nor will you suffer from sniffles, bronchitis or throat trouble if Catarrhozone is used. Get it to-day but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size, two months treatment, costs $1.00, small size 50c; sample size 25c

A POSSIBLE RISE IN PRICES OF SUGAR

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer:

Sugar men are talking of a possible advance. They have nothing definite to say, but hazard the opinion that it is not unlikely. New York is up fifteen cents on refined and there is heavy buying. Export business is also large, and altogether New York is firmer than for some little time. Stocks in the hands of Canadian retailers are not large, and a big demand at this time might advance prices, it is claimed.

There has been another advance in sal. soda, and therefore sooner or later all washing powders and the like will be advanced. The advances in this chemical have already been heavy, but it is firmer and higher almost every week, an increase in three months of practically sixty-five per cent. being registered. As has been stated in these columns before, this is due to the use of sal. soda for munitions purposes.

Flour Is Firm.

Tea market is worth consideration at this juncture. To begin with, the Budget is still in the future, and a tax may—who knows suddenly descend upon tea. Also from circulars recently to hand, one may see that the surplus crop in 1915 over the year before was 109 million pounds. If only freights were adjusted it looks as if this might cause a break in the market, for though there has been a vastly increased consumption this last year, still after allowing for that, there is still a lot of tea—roughly fifty million pounds increase in crop. Of course these teas are away in the East and the freight situation gets worse instead of better. If it does not alter favourably, there can be no chance of a substantial drop.

Flour is firm at present and both export and domestic demands are heavy. Export is more than can be taken care of with existing freight conditions.

PETERBOROUGH PATRIOTIC CHORUS.

Through the kindness of Mr. J. M. Greene, the rehearsal this week will be held in the J. M. Greene Music Store to-night at 8.15 sharp. Every member is requested to be present, as the concert at the presentation of band instruments to the 93rd Batt. Band will take place on Friday, 11th February.

Will the committee on the banquet please report?

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged, and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

MONTREAL, P.Q., Feb. 5.—In a leading article the St. John "Globe" pays a striking tribute to W. B. Howard, the new District Passenger Agent of the C.P.R. at Toronto, who was entertained at a dinner in St. John, on February 1st, by a large gathering of prominent citizens, including the Mayor, Honorable Justice McKeown and others. The gathering at the Union Club on Monday evening to say farewell to Mr. W. B. Howard was expressive of the general good will entertained for a capable and popular official, who is leaving St. John to take up work in a larger and broader field. The rewards that have come to Mr. Howard in his 25 years of service with the C.P.R. are rewards for work well done. Promotion marks the Company's appreciation, but Monday night's banquet was a personal triumph, an appreciation any man would be proud to win from his fellow men. Mr. Howard will carry with him to Toronto and wherever the fates shall decree that his lot be cast, kindly thoughts of all, not in St. John alone, but throughout this territory who have been brought into touch with him, either as an official of the C.P.R., or as a man among men. He is another added to the already long and constantly growing list of men the Canadian Pacific has called from St. John to more responsible positions. Those characteristics which won him success in St. John would win for him still greater honours in the years to come.

"AMERICAN CAN" WAR ORDERS ENORMOUS.

Profits of $34,000,000. Compares Are Withheld for 1915 Statement.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The American Can company yesterday made public its earnings for 1915. War orders, taken by the corporation, however, did not appear in the statement. These, put at $34,000,000 by F. S. Wheeler, president, will be reflected in earnings for this year.

Last year the surplus of $5,020,273 was equal to 5 1-5 per cent. on the common stock, after the 7 per cent. on the preferred, compared with 2 2-5 per cent. in 1914.

Mr. Wheeler says prospects for 1916 are bright. He adds: "The general improvement in business throughout the country is manifesting itself in good demand for your company's products, and preparations are now making for an active year.

"The year 1915 was more prosperous for your company than conditions early in the year indicated. Net earnings increased $736,004 over 1914, notwithstanding a decline of about 4 per cent. in the volume of business. This decrease in volume was caused by a shortage of some of the staple canning crops, due to continued wet weather at a critical part of the season.

"There has been expended for new construction and new equipment $193,629, chiefly at Chicago, San Francisco, Kansas City, Ogden, Utah; Lubec, Me., and Hawaii.

RUSSIA'S SHORT LINE RAILWAY.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 3.—The short line railway from Petrograd to Soroka on the White Sea, a distance of 453 miles, has just been completed, giving another outlet to the north besides that of Archangel, and thus tending to relieve the congestion at the latter point.

HER DREAMS CAME TRUE

MELLE. G. GAUDREAU

Rochon P.Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I became thin and miserable. I had frequent dizzy spells and became so run down that I never thought I would get well again.

A neighbor advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve and he advised me to go on with 'Fruit-a-tives'. I continued this medicine and all my Indigestion and Constipation was relieved. I consider that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches, try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Give this lovely fruit medicine a fair chance and you will get well the same as I did".

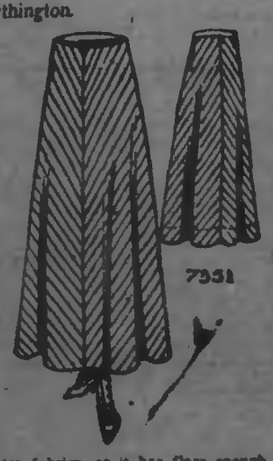
EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.



7931

The simple skirt is always the one which promises the greatest degree of utility. Of the many novelties one of the best is the two piece circular skirt, because it cuts so well from the wide materials which are shown in the shops and entails but little labor in the making. The usual complaint that it sags at the sides is hardly worth considering, for nothing is easier if this does happen, and it may not, than to straighten the lower edge.

The skirt which is shown in our illustration is of the best of these two piece circular designs. It has a seam down the centre of front and back and a waistline which may be made either raised a trifle or to regulation height. The lower edge is not too wide, measuring but 2¾ yards in the medium size. These dimensions promise a skirt which will not be too wide.

Much velvet, velveteen and corduroy are being worn this season and there is a sort of plush made expressly for dresses which requires a plain design in the skirt. Fur cloths also require a plain outline and for all of these the skirt shown is ideal. It is easy to add trimmings in the way of buttons and braid and these may be of contrasting color. This is also a good model for an underskirt for sheer outer fabrics, as it has flare enough to hold them in shape.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,931, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires of plain material 2¾ yards of 54 inch width.

This pattern can be obtained by sending coupon to the office of this paper.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

450 RECRUITS STILL NEEDED BY THE BATTALION

Inquiry Will Be Made Into Cause of the Ottawa Fire

People of Ottawa Are Convinced That Germans Are Responsible for the Conflagration---Body of Deputy Clerk of the Commons Has Been Found--Rideau Hall and Other Public Buildings in Ottawa Are Closely Guarded.

AN ATTEMPT TO WRECK RAILWAY BRIDGE

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—It is officially announced this morning that the Government will appoint a committee to make a full enquiry into the origin of the fire that destroyed the Parliament Buildings. Sir Robert Borden has asked Sir Wilfrid Laurier to name one of the members.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The body of J. R. B. Laplante, the deputy clerk in the House of Commons, who perished in the fire which destroyed the Parliament Buildings on Thursday night, was found this morning in the room occupied by the Deputy Speaker.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—Despite the fact that Col. Sherwood, head of the Dominion Police, scoffs at the theory on incendiarism in the House of Commons fire, extraordinary precautions are being taken by the authorities to prevent any other outrages. Several strangers arriving here this morning had their baggage searched, and several detained by the Dominion and local police till their identity was established.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY BRIDGE.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—What is believed to have been an attempt to wreck the Victoria Bridge was frustrated by the men of the composite battalion on guard shortly before five o'clock this morning. Several shots were fired when a figure of a man was seen creeping over the ice toward the bridge. The searchlight on the city side picked him out some distance from the stone piers, and as it was evident he had no right to be in such a place at such an hour, one of the guards opened fire. In a twinkling the other guards were turned out. Several more shots were fired, but the man escaped. Officers would make no statement pending investigation. The man was first seen stealing over the ice toward the bridge about midnight. On being challenged by a guard he ran away. The Victoria Bridge is one of the largest on the continent. It spans the St. Lawrence from Montreal to the south shore, and is used for railway, street railway and general traffic.

THE OTTAWA FIRE.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—Despite the calm assurances of Colonel Sherwood, the head of the Dominion Police, and the gruff pooh, poohs, of Sir Sam Hughes, Ottawa believes absolutely and the conviction grows with each hour that German hands set fire to and destroyed the official heart of Canada.

This is the Rheims of Canada, says Ottawa. It is the supreme, the smashing challenge of Germany given in pathetically, vainly cruel, and viciously senseless manner of the Germans. Of this Ottawa is certain. Of exactly the opposite Sir Sam Hughes and Colonel Sherwood and others responsible for the safety of the Capitol are equally sure. In all that blackened pit of wreck and ruin it will be impossible no doubt to find any proof that will satisfy suspicion. There has been much excited evidence given in Ottawa. Colonel Sherwood has been collecting it and sorting it carefully. Rideau Hall, where the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and their daughter, the brilliant "Princess Pat," has a cordon of detectives drawn outside of it. Others are hidden below stairs, in the kitchens and servants' quarters. All public buildings are strongly guarded by soldiers everywhere. The gold bullion, under charge of the Finance Department, is guarded by a special force with loaded rifles.

From the stories of men who attempted to stay the fire in the reading room, chemists and other experts say it is quite possible that the extinguishers used were loaded with chemicals which fanned and increased the blaze rather than extinguish it. The suggestion is that these extinguishers had been tampered with.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5.—The Belgian frontier has been completely closed to all travellers, it was announced here to-day. This action is believed to indicate important German troop concentration against the Anglo-French lines preparatory to a heavy offensive.

ROUMANIAN ARMY MOBILIZED.

ROME, Feb. 5.—The Roumanian army is nine-tenths mobilized by the decree issued Thursday, calling to the colours the class of 1896, in advance of their regular schedule. More than half a million troops are now massed along the Bulgarian and Hungarian frontiers. Private advices received here to-day report that Roumania is ready to intervene on the side of the Allies at the first opportune moment.

STRONY WAS RELEASED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Feb. 5.—Local authorities were to-day instructed by Colonel Sherwood, Chief of the Dominion Police, to continue to hold pending further developments, Charles Strony, 28, arrested yesterday in connection with the Parliament Buildings fire. A picture of the Buildings was found among his effects. It is not known what other evidence the police have in connection with him. (Later) Strony was released this morning on orders from Colonel Sherwood.

It was found that Strony was acting as a pianist for Mme. Edvina, a Boston singer, in a concert in the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, before the Duke of Connaught and his staff, at the time the fire started, and that he did not leave the theatre until 11 p.m.

Strony who was formerly the official accompanist of the Queen of Belgium, who is an accomplished violinist, declared this afternoon that he would communicate immediately with the Belgian Consul in Ottawa with a view to bringing suit against Colonel Sherwood and the Canadian Government for false imprisonment. He has gone on to Chicago.

PARIS, Feb. 5—A riot, assuming the proportions of a revolution, broke out in Lisbon last night and is continuing to-day. Crowds are attacking the Republican Guards in the Portugese capital and pillaging stores.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The Lusitania situation drove stocks down during the opening hour in some cases as much as two or three points. Recoveries around 11 o'clock brought many stocks up their opening prices. Again nearly a quarter of a million shares were traded in the first hour. The market closed firm.

GERMANS DROWNED.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5.—Four hundred and fifty Germans attacking Dvinsk across the frozen Dwina were drowned when the ice was smashed by heavy Russian fire, according to despatches received here to-day.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—In the weekly eye witness story Sir Max Aitken tells of the heroic exploits of several bombing parties from Canadian Western battalions, who stormed and surprised the Germans in several advanced trenches, doing considerable damage, returning with several prisoners and very valuable information for the British commanders. Lieut. Owen, of Alberta, died of wounds, and there were several casualties among the other Canadian officers and men, who were sent out to fix the enemy's wire entanglements. Two parties were sent out by Brigadier-General Ketchen. One party, commanded by Lieut. Wilmot killed two German sentries patrolling

GERMANS ARE HOPELESSLY BEATEN ON THE WEST

Interesting Letter From Nephew of Local Man Who Has Been at the Front Since The Commencement of the War

CONDITIONS HAVE IMPROVED

Mr. William Thomson, 218 King Street, has received a very interesting letter from his nephew, Bandsman John Thomson. The latter is a stretcher bearer in "B" Company, 1st Cameronians, British Expeditionary Force. He has been at the front since the outbreak of war, a fact which adds interest to his letters. The letter, in part, reads as follows:

"I hope you are all in excellent health and spirits, as it leaves me the same. I can't contract anything worse than an enormous appetite. We are all confident of victory, and on this front the enemy is hopelessly beaten. Although we have not made a move yet we are only waiting until operations commence and we will clear them out of France and Belgium. I could give a more detailed account of what I have already written, but that is the shortest way of putting it. The Germans have not made a serious attack for over a year now. They cannot make any offensive now. They haven't enough men. They used to be the superior force, but now they are weakening. Although we don't make any move we are killing them daily. Our artillery shell them day and night, and they only reply feebly and with very little effect. We are gradually drawing nearer our victorious goal. We have had a very mild winter. In fact we have had no snow here and we are not seeking any.

Our winters differ greatly from your's. They have had snow at home but none in this part of France. Things are not nearly so bad this winter as they were last winter. The Germans started the New Year by giving us a severe shelling which had very little effect and only drew disaster on themselves by our artillery.

IT IS A FACT

That if you are suffering from eye trouble or headache, Dr. Lacey will relieve you. Call and see him. Take your broken lenses and mounts, to let him repair, and make new. See him and see better. — 419 George street.

ANOTHER RECRUITING RALLY AT ARMOURIES

There will be another big recruiting rally in the Armouries to-morrow, Sunday evening, at 8:30 o'clock. The speakers will include the well known "Trooper" Molloy, of Kingston; Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., who tried to enlist as a private a few days ago, and Major R. P. Watt, of the 93rd. Lt.-Col. Johnston, O.C. the Peterborough Battalion, will act as chairman of the gathering. Miss Dorothy Allan has consented to sing, and Master Percy Luther will recite. There will undoubtedly be a large attendance.

RECRUITING HERE COMPARED WITH DIVISIONAL FIGURES

93rd Battalion Added 105 to Its Strength From January 16th to 31st and Followed Up With 56 More Men During the Past Week---Sergt. Theobald is Promoted ---To-day's Military News.

The 93rd Battalion made a good showing in recruiting during the period from Jan. 16 to 31, according to the semi-monthly returns from headquarters. Of the twenty different units taking on recruits in the 3rd Division, the 93rd stood fifth with a total of 105 added to the strength during the period. The strength of the 93rd on Jan. 31 was 647. Since then up to noon to-day, 56 men have been added to the battalion, giving a parade state to-day of 703 men, with a record of 161 men added in the last three weeks.

Following is a list of the number of men recruited by the different infantry battalions in this division from Jan. 16 to 31, with the strength of each battalion on that date:

	New Men.	Total.
59th Battalion	30	1119
77th (Ottawa)	18	1114
80th (Belleville)	40	1097
93rd (Peterborough)	105	647
109th (Lindsay)	82	698
130th (Perth)	64	512
136th (Port Hope) ..	63	318
139th (Cobourg)	151	481
146th (Kingston) ...	200	546
154th (Cornwall)	206	349
156th (Belleville) ...	185	511
158th (Brockville) ...	80	325

The 93rd has kept up the same clip during the past week, and has boosted its strength over the 700 mark.

It is interesting to note that during the two weeks from Jan. 16 to 31, 1,675 men joined the colours in the 3rd Division.

Among the soldiers who left Kingston for England last Thursday was Edward J. Ketchum, son of the late Judge Ketchum, of Cobourg, who resigned a responsible position with the Canadian Northern Railway to enlist as a private, and has since been promoted to the rank of Corporal. Another nephew of Major Davidson, B. F. Gossage, teller in the Dominion Bank, Toronto, also joined as private, and has been for some months fighting in France.

The letter dealing with civil prisoners of war in Ruhleben, to which we referred recently, was an acknowledgment of the receipt of $90 collected in Peterborough through Mrs. G. A. Smith, and was written by Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley, of London, England. The news of Davidson Ketchum came to her from a returned prisoner just arrived from Ruhleben, who described him as "the life and soul of the camp, helping Church work and assisting to brighten it up generally." The money sent from Peterborough is being distributed weekly through Mr. Ketchum.

A Board of Officers will assemble on Monday the 7th inst., to inquire into and report upon the illegal absence and shortage of kit of No. 198439 Pte. A. Adams who has been continually absent from his quarters from 16th January, 1916.

The Board will meet at a time and place to be named by the President and will be composed as follows:

President—Capt. Widdifield.
Members — Lieut. G. Matthews, Lieut. R. Stevenson.

J. E. R. Munro, Captain,
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Sergt. Wm. Theobald, who has been drilling the Apsley platoon of the 93rd Battalion, was the "victim" of two presentations at the armouries yesterday. In the first place he received a very handsome gold headed cane from No. 7 platoon, of which he was sergeant before leaving for Apsley, and immediately after he was presented with a similar gift from the men of the Apsley platoon, a number of whom were here yesterday securing their outfits.

Lance Corp. Ernest Abraham has been transferred from the 59th Battalion to the 93rd. He is a son of Pay Sergeant Abraham and a brother of Bugler Reg. Abraham of the 93rd.

Letters acknowledging the receipt of Christmas gifts have been received by the ladies of the Park street church from Sergt. F. A. Thomas of the 21st Battalion, Sergt. Fred Edwards of the 39th Battalion and Pte. Harry Young who left with the 8th C.M.R.

Sergt. Geo. Hetherington of the 25th Battery writes thanking the congregation of Knox church for Christmas cheer, and the pupils of the South Central school for the gift of handkerchiefs.

Berlin Admits the Loss of Zeppelin Airship L-19—Crew Begged to Be Taken Aboard of British Trawler, King Stephen.

AFRAID TO TAKE THEM

LONDON, Feb. 5.—An official communication issued to-day by Berlin admits that Zeppelin L-19 has not returned from a reconnoitring flight and that enquiries concerning the airship have been without result.

The statement by British naval officers of lack of success in the search made for her by British craft and the German admission establishes that the Zeppelin has sunk with all on board, since it seems impossible that she could be still afloat and not covered after the long search.

Captain Martin of the trawler King Stephen, who, according to his official report yesterday, refused to rescue the Zeppelin's crew for fear they would later overpower him and his men, tells the following story to-day:

"We left Grimsby on Jan. 29 for ten days' fishing cruise. I had on board a crew of nine men, and the trawler carried 20 tons of ice to preserve our fish. At dawn on Feb. 2, we had 60 or 80 boxes of fish and our nets down.

"It was a beautiful morning. We were sailing at the rate of 15 miles an hour. There was no wind, and the sea was table smooth. Suddenly we saw what looked like a white cloud a way off. We knew it could not be a cloud in such weather.

"We hauled our gear and put on full steam to see whether the thing might be a wreckage worth towing into port. As we got nearer we saw it was a Zeppelin. I could not mistake her. I had seen too many Zeppelins to have any doubt. Only about 15 feet of the airship's forepart was showing about 40 feet above the water.

Offered Five Pounds for a Boat.

"We could see about 15 men on top of the hamper. Some on hands and knees were slithering about. Anyhow, there were others in the rigging with their heads sticking through the companion way and arms clinging by the side of it. They looked as if they had come from the North Pole. They wore fur jackets and queer hats.

"I shouted: 'What is the matter? 'Send us a boat and I'll give you five pounds,' came the answer from one of the men on the Zeppelin. Saying so he took off his coat and showed his brass buttons.

"I knew at once he was a naval officer, the captain of the airship. He looked like our own naval officers. He was a youngish fellow, perhaps 30 years old, with a thinnish and weather-ed face, and a way of ordering men about.

"When one or two of his crew, who spoke English, tried to butt in he shut them up pretty smart. He was a gentleman, and behaved as one. He was polite and spoke good English. I could hear hammering in the Zeppelin. By and by other heads cropped up, until there were about thirty altogether.

"I thought a bit, and then said: 'Well, if there was not so many of you I would take you off, but there's too many.'

"The officer straightened himself and said: 'There is nothing in that.' I thought again and said: 'But supposing we take you and you sling us overboard and navigate the trawler to Germany? That would be another decoration for you, but it won't be much for us.'

THE IRISH ARE DOING WELL IN THE RECRUITING

Lord Wimborne's Report of the Enlistment in the Emerald Isle Was the Outstanding Event of the Week

CONFIDENCE EVERYWHERE

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The outstanding event of the week for Irishmen is Lord Wimborne's report that the Irish are recruiting in numbers that exceed all expectations. This has produced a profound sensation, especially in Ireland.

Since the beginning of the war to January 9, 80,736 men and 11,000 have joined since the beginning of the new campaign. At present there is an average of 1,000 recruits weekly. With the Irish soldiers and reservists already in the army this gives a grand total of 145,000 for the two services. To this total we may add several other Irish factors, which have been avowedly admitted. Most important of these items is that 100,000 joined from the Irish of Great Britain.

There are also omitted innumerable Irishmen who have joined English and Scottish regiments and many Irishmen in the Canadian troops. Probably a third of the Australian troops are Irish by birth. These figures are sufficient to answer the honest cranks or bought advocates of Germany. Nobody here undertakes to underrate them except a few rabid Orangemen, whose views no longer carry weight in British affairs.

It may confidently be said that these numbers and the unparalleled bravery of the Irish in many sanguinary fights have removed the Irish question to a position of security wherefrom it will never be dislodged.

Regarding the Irish in Great Britain a good story is related by an English member of Parliament which illustrates their spirit. While the conscription debate was proceeding the member sought counsel from his constituents, including the leader of the Irish, who form a large vote. The English member was astounded to hear that all the Irish there violently favored conscription. The Irish leader said: "Every Irishman available in the place has gone. We have just lost the last one in the steward of our Irish club, which accordingly, is shut. So we will all be glad to see the British slackers compelled to do what the Irishmen have done voluntarily.

Indication of Irish feeling in Australia is given by a cable from the Irish association of Queensland this week, expressing undiminished confidence in the Irish leader. It continues: "We heartily applaud your splendidly successful services to the Empire and towards the overthrow of the German despot."

WHY WE FEEL SURE.

While we, as St. Paul says, "stand in jeopardy every hour," while outrage and destruction come home to us in every mere incident in the wide spread of this murderous war, we are not to be discouraged and ask, when will the war end and how will it end? We can't forecast when it will end, but we can be certain as to how it will end—in the triumph of the Entente allies. The victory may be long in coming and the pathway to it strewn with destructions and horrors, but it will come. Our enemies are getting weaker and we are getting stronger. If Germany could not win in 1914 and 1915, when her strength of all kinds—with forty years of military preparation and with ourselves and our allies caught entirely unprepared, how could she win in 1916? At the beginning Germany and Austria had big preponderance in men and munitions; now the thing is reversed, and both Britain and France outgo her in munitions and men and resources.

We might feel discouraged if the plight of the Entente allies were the plight of Germany. While her enemies are growing in strength, she is bleeding at every pore. Her armies are weaker than when she set out for her triumphal tramp over the territory and liberties of Europe, and she has not won one decisive victory on any front. Her financial resources are becoming exhausted, her food supplies are growing less. We might feel discouraged if the British people were put on short rations and forbidden "to eat cake," if all the woollen and other textiles of the country were seized by the government to clothe soldiers. These things are done in Germany, and their doing shows the straits the Germans are brought to.

We might feel discouraged if British and French and Italian commerce were swept from the seas and our navy reduced to powerlessness; and with good reason, for that would be the end. Britain's great navy has been the backbone of the entente allies, and the fact that that navy is more powerful than ever, more unsleepingly watchful, is still another reason why victory is sure, leading to the only conceivable peace possible—the peace founded upon the declaration of Premier Asquith in these words:

"We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed."

NECESSITY OF VIGILANCE.

Chief of Police Thompson deserves great credit for his prompt action in arresting a suspect yesterday and investigating his standing. A man inquired of a policeman on the street the whereabouts of the Electric Works. Asked if he was seeking work, he replied, "not particularly." Coming on the heels of the Ottawa incendiarism, suspicion was aroused. On intimation from the chief, a young lady in the office of the Electric Works detained the man who had come to the works, till the arrival of the police. He was a German Canadian, who said he was an engineer. Examination of his papers and effects revealed nothing suspicious and he was allowed to go. The arrest was fully justified. The man, who was seeking the Works, without seeking work, might easily have been devising some outrage, and it was "safety first" to make sure. We know that agents of the Germans and Austrians are infesting this country and the United States plotting outrage and destruction.

Opinion is divided as to the cause of the great Ottawa fire. If it was due to accident, there was deplorable carelessness on somebody's part. If it was incendiary, there was still more deplorable, there was criminal, carelessness in failure to exercise due vigilance. It is naturally the cue of officialdom to declare for accident, but till investigation discloses, if possible, the cause of the fire that destroyed the parliament buildings, it is wise to act as if the fire were of incendiary origin. What lends colour to this theory is the fact that the Graham-Holden factory, Ottawa, erected and equipped to make military clothing, was last night destroyed by fire, no doubt by incendiary action. Five distinct explosions were heard before the fire broke out.

In any event, we stand in danger of the depredation of enemy plotters and we must exercise the utmost watchfulness, take nothing for granted, but take all the necessary precautions that common prudence and common sense dictate. Of course, guarding factories might mean unnecessary expense, but it is not wasted if it insures safety. It may work hardship at times to arrest suspected persons who may be afterwards found innocent, but it would be a far greater hardship to have a factory employing hundred of hands blown up, with the loss of many lives and large destruction of property.

We must keep our eeys open, be every moment, in some form or other, on the alert day and night. We know we have enemies who will stop at nothing and w must watch for them.

A LITTLE TRANSPARENT.

In another place on this page is printed a beautiful and touching article taken from the Mail and Empire of yesterday, under the heading "Present Deeds, not Past Words." A reading of it will show that the soft stop of the organ is pulled out to the limit. In honeyed words, soft as butter made from doves' milk, we are urged to forget the past and welcome back to the fold the enemies who have sinned against loyalty and imperial interests. We must not judge men by what they have said in the past, no matter how disloyal and treasonable. It is wrong for "the small nest of copperheads—contextually the Nationalists—to

"hiss out accusations that other men belonging to one or other of the great parties at some time spoke or voted in a way indicating that their sympathies were not with Britain."

The Mail and Empire wants all to be forgiven and forgotten. This shows an admirable Christian spirit per se. But there is reason to fear that the organ is speaking one word for the country and unity of action, and two for itself or the party it represents. There is only one thing worse, the Mail and Empire remarks, than "harking back"—in an embarassing way—and that is "the practice of animadverting upon the slowness of recruiting in Quebec." This lets the cat out of the bag; shows where the shoe pinches. The Mail and Empire tries to slide over this rough spot by fulsomely, in its new-born admiration, lauding "the gallant young French Canadians who are offering themselves for overseas service . . . the nine young fellows in uniform . . . pictured in the pages of La Press and La Patrie."

All honour to them! But why are there not thousands upon thousands more of them? It is because "Nationalism, operating with its malignant force upon the populace of Quebec, instilling its venom of hostility to British interests, and to participating in the war for the safety of the Empire, has poisoned the minds of the impressionable young men of Quebec and cheated the battle lines in France and Flanders of tens of thousands of French Canadian recruits. How long has this hostile influence to recruiting been operating in Quebec? Since the bye-election in Athabaska, when the first Nationalist candidate was elected, with the moral approval and sympathy of the Conservative party as a means to "kill Laurier"; when the victorious Nationalist was congratulated by prominent Conservatives, one of whom is now a knightly member of the government. This was the time when Nationalism advanced from the academic stage to concrete form. This was the seed that brought fruit twenty fold.

In the general elections of 1911, twenty members now chiefly constituting the Government majority from Quebec, running, as frank, confessed Nationalists, preaching the doctrines of Bourassa and Lavergne, were elected as Conservative supporters, their campaigns financed from the Conservative party fund, thus contributing to the triumph of the dangerous and disloyal sentiments of Nationalism. This statement was made on the floor of the House a few days ago, and has not been contradicted—evidence that it is true.

In pursuance of this alliance, and with admirable good faith, Nationalism—the principles of Bourassa and Lavergne—received full official party approval and recognition when Sir Robert Borden, in forming his Cabinet, included three of the disciples of Bourassa in its membership.

Can we wonder that recruiting in Quebec is slow; and can we wonder, when we remember the cause of it, that the Mail and Empire begs that bygones be bygones? One can overlook abstract party inconsistency, but one can't overlook the buttressing of party interests by means that have antagonized the interests of the Empire in its hour of need, and robbed the ranks of the Allies of thousands of gallant French Canadian soldiers. We might forgive the government cobquetting with the Nationalists if by taking them to its arms it had made their abjure their treason. But every Nationalist government supporter of them is still true to his colours—still unrepentent. The only Nationalist of mark who has brought forth fruits meet for repentance, is Major Oliver Asselin, the founder of the Nationalist League, who—all honour to him—is recruiting the 105th regiment at Montreal, now nearly completed. Let the Mail and Empire bring forth from the ranks of the Government's twenty Nationalist supporters from Quebec, twenty Oliver Asselins, and then it can reasonably talk of forgiving and forgetting.

A STRONG INSURANCE COMPANY.

The Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, which has turned its 29th year, is shown by a summary of the annual report which appears on page 10 of this issue, to have all the essential features of a sound and strong insurance institution. With $85,746,172 of insurance in force it has assets of $20,744,878, a reserve for policy holders of $17,337,011, and had, or set aside for, policy holders, the sum of $3,275,826. It is therefore no surprise that a company so strongly appealing to the confidence of the insuring public, should have had a prosperous year, with interest earnings at the rate of 6 per cent.; a low mortality, 40 per cent.; below expectation; and an unprecedented surplus for the year. The general agent of the company is Mr. Thos. Mark, 374 1-2 Water street.

PRESENT DEEDS, NOT PAST WORDS.

This is no time to be raking the records for votes or speeches, this or that politician of to-day may have made in the past. Recalling utterances that might be taken to identify any given public man's former views with those of the Nationalists, or harping on the fact that some other public man or body of public men took a stand that might be represented as adverse to British connection is inopportune. It is not by what he professed years ago that the quality of any Canadian's loyalty to the Empire is now to be tried. Is he staunch for the Empire in this time of its supreme crisis? That is the question. If he is, then away with all old scores left by vaporings and attitudes of other kinds in other times. This is not magnanimity; it is patriotism.

To-day our political parties are not supposed to be pitted against each other in a struggle for office, but are supposed to be united by the gravity of the Empire's plight in the closest co-operation for the overthrow of the enemy. For expressions or courses of an anti-British tenor that may have been resorted to in times gone by as no more than temporary expedients to prevent political opponents from scoring a signal success there can now be no excuse. Whoever may heretofore have played on popular feeling in any part of Canada by suggesting anti-British policy must be deeply anti-British at heart, if he can do so now. This war is the test that separates the froth of stump-speaking from the real opinions of the speaker. We are glad to say that with negligible exceptions the war finds the people of Canada united for the defence of the Empire. That there are some persons of Canadian birth who are in earnest in the antagonism they so virulently express against Canada's participation in the war is to be deplored. The rancorous Nationalists, led by Bourassa, Lavergne and apparently some others, make up the handful that do not belong to the war party of United Canadians. The more these gentry approximate to the side of the enemy the worse it will be for themselves. This small nest of copperheads cannot make itself less insignificant by hissing out accusations that other men belonging to one or other of the great parties at some time spoke or voted in a way indicating that their sympathies were not with Britain. The all-important thing is that the men thus reflected upon are now giving the strongest proofs of their loyalty to the Empire.

Not less out of place than the barking back to Nationalist expressions of men who are now showing true Imperialist spirit is the practice of animadverting upon the slowness of recruiting in Quebec. What everybody in other parts of Canada ought to be taking note of is the grand example that is being shown by the gallant young French-Canadians who are offering themselves for service overseas. Anybody who looks over the pages of La Presse, La Patrie and other Canadian newspapers printed in the French language must be proud of the fine young fellows in uniform pictured there. These young men do honour to their country and to the French names they bear. Their example will help to fill up many battalions.—Mail and Empire.

Has Honesty Ceased To Be An Essential?

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, [illegible]—Who will be the nominee of the Conservative Convention for Parkdale to-day? Is it possible that Mr. Fallis really will be nominated again, and if such an almost unthinkable event occurs will it be that the Government allows it, and accepts him as a Government candidate once more?

What the Conservative Press, reflecting the rank and file of the party's opinion in the province, thought about Fallis at the time of the exposure, was plain enough as will be seen, for example, from the following comment in the Toronto News:

"Horse trading in time of war, which robs the country is an offence which even with all the traditions in its favour cannot be overlooked. Moreover, when a representative of the people fills his pockets by dishonest methods he proves himself unworthy of public confidence and unfit for public position."

There are also the precedents set by Premier Borden and Mr. Rowell in somewhat similar circumstances. The former read Garland and Foster out of the party; the latter read Evanturel out and has kept him out ever since. Mr. Fallis, however, in his statement says that Premier Hearst, although thinking his member's action indiscreet, had not asked him for his resignation. He says he took the step of his own accord.

It is also disquieting for the good of the province and for his own public reputation, to see Mr. Hanan, Acting Premier, reported as saying: "I would say no one has altered the high opinion previously held of Mr. Fallis."

People inevitably will ask "Does Mr. Hanna's own record with Government Contractors, as shown in the Taylor investigation, help to explain his leniency towards Fallis?"

It is hoped even yet that for the sake of Ontario's political good name, the Conservative party will not run Fallis again in Peel. If he is the Candidate the Government will have to take the responsibility. The element which makes one rather fear that Fallis is to be whitewashed are, in addition to Mr. Hanna, two other ministers, Messrs. McGarry and Ferguson, considered by many at present the controlling factors in the Cabinet. Their own well known history as blockers of investigation will not likely lead them to be very severe on party friends who have been "indiscreet."

A Red Cross Comfort That Greatly Counts

Although the primary purpose of the Red Cross is the medical relief of the wounded, many subsidiary forms of comfort also come legitimately within the scope of its activity. One of the simplest and least expensive of these additional comforts is the sending of budgets of home news. These have been found to be a great aid to the spirits of men in the hospitals. As soon as a soldier is well on the road to convalescence his thoughts turn naturally to his home, and in these circumstances, home news has a distinctly curative value.

This department of Red Cross work has been taken up very enthusiastically by the Hamilton Red Cross under the direction of Mrs. H. S. Strathy, who under the auspices of the league of the Empire is in charge of the "News from Home" organization in Toronto.

In Toronto each public school supplies one book a week, and each room in each school takes its turn in supplying this book. The budgets are made of six or more sheets of strong manilla paper, 11 inches wide when folded and 15 inches long.

The real object of this budget is to provide, not general reading material—the soldier can secure plenty of that—but genuine news from home such as can be sent from nowhere but Canada. The budget should be clipped, in each locality from local papers social and personal items, births, marriage and death notices, roll of honour and casualty lists. No war news should be included. Jokes and humourous verse are excellent things with which to fill up odd spaces. Last and not the least important items about sports are most acceptable. In short, anything of the nature of home news that is intimate news of Canada and Canadian activities, cannot fail to be gratifying to the home sick Canadian soldier abroad.

Many of such budgets have already been sent from Canada, but the demand for them is far from being supplied and it is hoped that other Red Cross societies will follow the excellent example of Hamilton.

NORTH-END MOVING PICTURES

Bosum Sanitas Expenso Presents M. Garbo Collecto and His Famous Dusty Troop in That Touching Little Melo-drama

"WHO'S BOSS?"

BY GEE BURN-BARD O'SHAW

Characters:
Bosum Sanitas Expenso—Very effectional.
M. Garbo Collecto—Very dusty.
Fatso Asho—Very fat and good natured.
North Endo—Very indignant.
Alder La Ford—Very dignified.
Newman Mairdu!—Very anxious to please.
City Enginо—Very retiring.
Main Works Bordo—Very powerful.
Scene—Up by the river side.
Stage setting—Goose Bank, by the barn.
Time—Tuesday, after sun-up.

Act 1.

Asho: By heck! Won't this be a cinch, if Sanitas Expenso lets us dump in here—the boss won't lose nothin' now, by jinks—guess he would if he had to haul all the way to Bonicordova—only a few minutes' draw here—only a few minutes' draw here—Boss pretty slick chap—knows how to work 'em, by heck!—W—who's this (——?

(Enter North Endo.)

Endo: Hey there, drive on, don't you know you can't empty ashes there?

Asho: Go to thunder—I'm not working for you.

Endo: I'll show you.

Asho: Whoa, you brutes!

Endo: (Repeats performance but horses don't move.)

Endo: (Picks up largest piece and tests its strength over back of Asho.) Take that! Take that!!

(Curtain.)

Act 2.

Time: After dinner.

(Enter Asho with Garbo Collecto on load.)

Collecto: Let him come, I'll make mince meato of—(Enter Endo).

Endo: Hey, drive on there.

Collecto: No I won't. My name's Collecto—if you come over here I'll throw you over the bank.

Endo: You're not big enough.

Collecto: Come over here and I'll shew you.

Endo: Sanita Expenso is at the same old game he has been putting up for two or three years with those ashes.

La Ford: New Garbo Collecto got 'round him, I guess—too busy just now, but I'll see about it.

Endo: They're puttin geshes in there again; I thought you gave orders to have it stopped.

Evanrude: So I did. I'm on my way up there now, and I'll stop it mighty quick.

(Endo meets Sanitas Expenso.)

Endo: I thought you got instructions last year to put no more ashes in Goose Bank.

Expenso: Dare your hide, if you interfere any more with my men I'll have you arrested.

Endo: Thank you! I'll see that you're not running this town.

Endo: Two or three years ago all the property owners by Goose Bank petitioned the Council to have the dumping of stinking garbage and ashes stopped—they granted the request—Every six months or so Sanitas Expenso gives Garbo Collecto orders to go ahead and dump—Very annoying—ashes sift through windows—covers carpets and furniture with white dust—ruins them.

Is he running this town? Just now he threatened to have me arrested, because I told the ash man to move on.

Mairduff: Did he actually do that? (Endo repeats the threat).

Mairduff: Leave that to Me

* * * * * * *

Original setting. (Enter Expenso.)

Collecto: Well, did you meet the old geezlor?

Expenso: You bet I did—I've settled his hash—You'll not hear from him again for a while.

Expenso: He was eh? Well, you'll not quit until I tell you—Mr. Evanrude to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Collecto: What'll we say to him if he comes up here giving us any more of his lip?

Expenso: Ah, now you're talking. Glory be to the scrapper, and to you, son, and to the whole show; as it was in the beginning—(I was boss)—is now—(I am boss)— and forever more shall be (I will be boss) world without end, eight-men-and-a-nigger.

Act 3.

Scene: Main Works Bordo, in Centre Sanctum.

Time: Week later.

Mairduff: Re ashes for Bonicordova, is Garbo Collecto depositing them there as instructed?

Cito Enginо: No, he's putting them into river at Goose Bank.

Mairduff: Who gave him instructions?

Cito Engine: He says the Sanitas Expenso did.

Mairduff: See that it is stopped forthwith, sir.

City Enginо: I shall, your worship.

SPENT COUNTLESS NIGHTS UNABLE TO REST OR SLEEP

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition—By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularly

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from many thousands of women. It is the story of exhausted nerves, of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches and loss of energy and vigour.

But there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was so bad I thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. But if you are willing to feed back your exhausted nerves to health and strength you can depend absolutely on this great food cure to produce the desired results. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

1915—A Record Year

IN every particular the business of the London Life Insurance Company reached high-water mark in 1915. In new business written, in gain in business in force, in gain in income, in gain in assets, and in surplus earnings the year's operations show the most favorable results yet attained.

The following comparative statement speaks for itself:

Insurance in Force	$14,189,813	$20,237,804	$27,118,578	$34,889,191
Insurance Issued	5,611,227	7,269,183	8,638,189	11,069,511
Total Assets	2,027,066	2,880,797	4,043,006	6,075,323
Policy Reserves	2,007,813	3,278,816	4,226,152	5,480,342
Premium and Interest Income	784,267	999,186	1,206,849	1,606,122
Rate of Interest Earned	6.57%	6.69%	6.81%	7.00%

Notwithstanding the strain of the war conditions, of which this Company has borne its full share, the favorable results experienced in recent years has made it possible to introduce a still further increase in the scale of profits apportionable to Participating Policies. The new scale comes into effect in 1916.

LITERARY RAMBLES

The amount of varied reading that the ordinary man gets through in the course of even one short week is surprising. If the every-day business man, who, as a rule, has no time for a perusal of anything beyond the daily paper, took the trouble to sum up the different topics that have engaged his attention from Monday to Monday he would doubtless be astonished at the amount of information he had imbibed during the period. Taking such a person as the one who is least able to spare time for reading and placing him in juxtaposition with another who has many hours wherein to indulge in the luxury, one can at once realize how enormous a field it is within the province of the latter to explore. It is perhaps a good thing that the powers of assimilation accorded to mankind are unevenly distributed. Were it otherwise and the memory of man at all commensurate with his powers of acquisitiveness the world might be inconveniently filled with prodigies of erudition. These thoughts were borne in on me when engaged in looking through a bundle of clippings a few days ago. Some of these related to literature, others to art, science or travel, with a slight intermingling of notices of present-day or departed celebrities. Some of them seemed to strike the fancy as particularly serviceable for library needs and they were on the point of being consigned to the waste basket when, almost at the bottom of the bundle there came to light a reference to Benjamin Franklin. But it was not so much the name of Benjamin Franklin as the name of a certain insignificant London street mentioned in the article that lit the torch of recollection, bringing into relief items and incidents that had long remained in the limbs of oblivion.

In 1757 Franklin paid a visit to England and for part of the time lived in London, lodging at the house of a Doctor Fothergill in Craven street. Judged from an historical standpoint this street is not particularly noteworthy. Perhaps its chief claim to fame is that as already stated it once harboured Benjamin Franklin and in later years, James Smith, one of the authors of "Rejected Addresses". It was James Smith however, who really immortalized the street by his celebrated quatrain:—

And three big coal barges are moored at its base;
Fly, honesty, fly, seek some safer retreat,
For there's craft in the river and craft in the street.

To this, a writer, whose name for the time being escapes the memory, replied as follows:—

Why should honesty fly to some safer retreat,
From attorneys and barges? 'od rot 'em;
For the lawyers are just at the top of the street

Passing from a consideration of Craven street to Benjamin Franklin memory again runs riot. By the world at large, Franklin is and doubtless always will be, held up as an example of a great and good man. Yet, it does not seem more than a few years ago that a certain historian in Boston, of the name of James Henry Stark set the American agog by boldly asserting that he was nothing better than a common thief. He brought proof to show that when Franklin was 67 years old he was dismissed from the position of Postmaster at Boston because he rifled the mail boxes, and told in detail how he was tried in England and turned out in disgrace from the service. The same historian, by the bye, submitted proof that Patrick Henry was unreliable, that Samuel Adams was a defaulter and John Hancock a smuggler. So far as known Stark's statement have never been denied but have been suffered to quietly fade from public notice. Perhaps too many heroes of the revolutionary period were involved to make them a matter of public discussion.

For those who believe in throwing a mantle of Christian charity over the shortcomings of others such statements as those made by Stark must savour of needless cruelty and malice. We all remember how much Froude was maligned for painting Carlyle in an unenviable light and showing him as a snarling old curmudgeon rather than in the counterfeit presentment of a placid sage. The idealism of Christianity is one thing and the idealism of a thing a perishable clay altogether another. If Pontius Pilate had lived in these days and had propounded that famous query "What is truth"? he would have had as hard a job to find it as in the times in which he lived. He would have found an amazing lack of it on our tombstones and almost as amazing a lack in our literature and in our lives. Seeing that it is so rare, is it not as well to honour truth where we find it, and also those who are not afraid to give utterance to it?—F. M. D.

Judge: "Why did you commit a second theft after you had been acquitted of the first one?" Prisoner: "I had to pay my lawyer, your Honour."

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

OFFERINGS WERE LARGE

The year just closed has been one of great activity and unanimity. The Minister, Captain Rollins, has had the heartiest approval of the entire congregation in joining His Majesty's Forces. Some weeks ago Captain Rollins was given leave of absence until the end of the war, and on Dec. 25, Rev. Dr. Farquharson took charge of the pulpit and pastoral work. His services both in the pulpit and in the homes has been so satisfactory that a hearty expression of appreciation was tendered him last evening, and arrangements were made for a reception on Monday evening, Feb. 21st, to Rev. Thomas H. Mitchell, B.D., who will preach his first sermon in St. Andrew's, on Sunday, Feb. 20th. The membership now stands at 541, being an increase over last year. One member, Wm. F. Gibson, gave his life for the Empire, and two others were wounded—Harry King and Jas. Robinson.

The Sunday offering for current account were $977 in advance of the year before, and the highest in the history of the congregation, meeting all expenses for 1915, and leaving a balance of $96.00.

The total receipts in all departments, less balance on hand, amount to $8,720.00, of which $4,049 were for current expenses; $2,430 for missions, and $871.00 for Red Cross purposes through the St. Andrew's Patriotic Society.

The Sunday School report, as submitted by the Superintendent, Mr. G. W. Gilman, was full of interest and replete with suggestion. The following paragraph will give some idea of the point of view of the whole report

"We need organized social work, organized manual and physical training, and organized sports for our Sunday School boys and girls; and we intend to have them if you will be a boy or girl again, and do your bit. We are not soliciting money; we are asking from you, ten minutes of you each day and an hour on Sunday. We want you to study, we want you to listen, we want you to help. We want you, as individuals, or in groups, to give a sleigh ride, a party, a skate, a slide, a sewing bee, a baking lesson, a lesson in carpentry, a lesson in making flour, a lesson in electricity, a lesson in forming a good time, an inspiring spiritual moment; in fact anything you can do to help the boys and girls in your way. Contributions of this nature will greatly assist in keeping up the attendance, loyalty and zeal of both our teachers and Sunday School scholars."

It was decided to separate the Trustee Board from the Managers and for the year 1916 the Trustee Board will be—Mr. Andrew McFarlane, Mr. E. Bruce Fowler, Mr. W. A. Richardson, Mr. W. Harstone, Ald. Jas. Saunders, Ald. Wm. Langford, Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.

The Board of Managers are as follows—Mr. Andrew McFarlane, Mr Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Mr. G. Walter Green, Mr. S. Cotton, Mr. W. Henry, Ald. Jos. Saunders, Ald Wm. Langford, Mr. J. John, Mr. Wm. Harstone, Mr. W. S. Campbell, Mr. W. A. Richardson, Sec.; Mr. E. Bruce Fowler, Treasurer.

Mrs. M. Waddell was elected to represent the congregation on the Board of the Protestant Old People's Home. Mr. W. J. Chisholm on the Hall Trust, and Mr. John McClelland on the Nicholls Hospital Trust.

The Elders and Managers were appointed a committee and given power to add to their numbers in order to conduct at an early date an every-member canvass on behalf of Missions and Current Account. It is realized that we are living at a time when all our institutions are being subjected to a fiery test and that the Church, in the interests of civilization, must be made more vital than ever. This can be done only through the increase of consecrated personalities. A hearty vote of thanks was conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. John McClelland for their long and valued services in connection with financial and secretarial work.

The thanks of the meeting were also extended to Mr. E. Bruce Fowler, Mr. W. A. Richardson, and Ald. Wm. Langford, for special services rendered during 1915.

WINTER HARD ON BABY

The winter season is a hard one on the baby. He is more or less confined to stuffy, badly ventilated rooms. It is so often stormy that the mother does not get him out in the fresh air as often as she should. He catches colds which racks his little system; his stomach and bowels get out of order and he becomes peevish and cross. To guard against this the mother should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. They regulate the stomach and bowels and break up colds. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ANNIVERSARY OF GEORGE ST. CHURCH

The Rev. E. B. Lansley, who will conduct the anniversary services in George Street Methodist Church tomorrow, is a well-known speaker. The work of George Street Church throughout the past year shows a substantial increase in all departments. The present Church was completed in 1872-3. It is expected that large congregations will attend both services to-morrow; also the illustrated lecture to be given on Monday evening by the Rev. George Smith.

NO INDIGESTION, GAS, OR STOMACH MISERY IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapepsin" for Sour, Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Dyspepsia

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless.

Millions of men and women now eat their favourite foods without fear — they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

Expenses In Connection With Recent Investigation Concerning School Board

Couple of Accounts Will Be Turned Over to City Solicitor Gordon---Unpaid Taxes Must Be Collected—Committe Will Sell Patriotic Fund Debentures

At a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council, held yesterday afternoon, a statement was read from His Honour Judge Huycke, respecting the costs in connection with the investigation ordered by the Council into certain matters relating to the Board of Education. Judge Huycke's fees amounted to $180.80, and those of W. F. Johnston, stenographer, $41.40.

It was moved by Ald. McIntyre, and seconded by Ald. Weir, that the account be paid.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Evans moved, in amendment, that the statement be referred to City Solicitor Gordon.

Unpaid Taxes.

The Committee instructed Tax Collector W. J. Green to collect all unpaid taxes and return the 1915 roll to the City Treasurer.

The demand for the Board of Education will be paid in regular monthly instalments; also for the Public Library Board.

An account from St. Joseph's Hospital for minor operations on recruits for the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, will be referred to City Solicitor Gordon for advice.

EGYPT READY TO FIGHT INVADERS

LONDON, Feb. 4.—For many weeks defensive preparations in Egypt have been hurried forward with the utmost speed. It may now be said the land of the Pharaohs is ready to give the Germans a warm reception.

Practically all the tourists, among whom were undoubtedly several German spies, have been forced to leave the magnificient hotels in spite of the protests of several Americans, who had hoped to be permitted to see a glimpse of the great war. Cook's palatial steamships on the Nile are lying idle for the first time in many years, in so far as they have not been placed at the disposal of the military athorities.

The whole country now looks like an immense army camp. Great contingents of Australian and New Zealand troops have been arriving steadily. The huge army, which is eagerly waiting for the first signs of German-Turkish activity, is well supplied with artillery of all kinds, from heavy field guns to camel guns and Maxims. The flying corps and the splendid cavalry arouse the unbounded wonder and admiration of the natives, who never before have seen such convincing proofs of the power of Great Britain. The Senussi chiefs are said to be renewing their assurances of friendship.

The roadbed of the railroad from Zagaziz to Ismalia, which is of the greatest military importance, has been widened and two tracks built along its whole length. This railroad connects the line along the Suez Canal with the rest of Egypt. The latter line probably will form a British battle front should the German-Turkish forces ever succeed in advancing that far. For the last two months 10,000 men have been working on the railroads day and night, and the work practically is finished.

Cavell Betrayer In German Pay

THE HAGUE, via LONDON, Feb. 4.—An official of the Belgian government who escaped from Brussels, and arrived at The Hague to-day, gave an explanation of the circumstances in which the city of Brussels was fined 500,000 marks ($125,000) last month by General von Bissing, the Governor General of Belgium. He denied the correctness of the first report to the effect that Gels Derode was slain by shots from an unlicensed revolver. The offence charged, he said, was a violation of German jurisdiction by a Belgian coroner's court, which seized Derode's papers, examined them and received the police report before the German authorities had opportunity to take charge of the case. Derode was the spy whose testimony convicted Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse shot by the Germans at Brussels.

General von Bissing, the Belgian official said, held that Derode was in the service of Germany as a secret agent and therefore came under German jurisdiction. The Belgian police who searched the body took possession of papers, which included passports permitting Derode to enter Germany, passes through the German lines, and receipts showing payments to him by the German authorities for services rendered. These papers were turned over to the regular coroner's court at Brussels, and the fine was imposed because this court declined to turn over the evidence to a German tribunal.

Immediately after the fine was levied the newspaper, Free Belgium, which is circulated in some mysterious way, stated that Derode's death cost only one franc and that the Belgians had many more francs for similar work.

Two citizens of Brussels, a barber and an electrician, have been arrested and accused of the murder of Derode.

The Belgian official asserted the report that Miss Cavell was shot by a German officer was untrue. He said that the death sentence was carried out in the regular order by the customary firing squad.

A few English women who still are left in Belgium, according to the official, are showing great concern over the increasing activities of a Belgian secret organization which in its operations greatly resembles the Ku Klux Klan, which came into existence in the United States after the civil war.

MONEY TROUBLES FOR AUSTRIA

AMSTERDAM, via London, Feb. 5.—Reports from Vienna say that Dr. Karl Helfferich, Secretary of the Imperial German Treasury, intends to prolong his stay in Austria, owing to unforseen difficulties in arranging a financial agreement with Dr. Ritter von Leth, Austrian Minister of Finance.

Dr. Helfferich is also expected to go to Sofia and Constantinople on a similar financial mission, and especially regarding an arrangement for new loans for Bulgaria and Turkey.

A Prosperous Year

Shareholders of The Toronto General Trust Corp. Receive Favorable Financial Statement.

Considering the commercial and financial circumstances of the past year, the report which was handed in by the management of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation to the shareholders at their annual meeting, held Wednesday, February Second, was a most satisfactory one. The net profits for the past year were $345,450.05. Out of this, there was paid, besides other sums, four quarterly dividends amounting to $150,000; a transfer to the Reserve Fund of $150,000, thereby increasing the Reserve to $1,750,000, and subscriptions to the British Red Cross Society and Order of St. John amounting to $2,500, and a balance was carried forward to credit of profit and loss of $98,812.60. Assets and liabilities were shown to be $71,969,470.10. A new branch has been opened in the city of Vancouver, the corporation already having branches

Suitable reference was made to the loss felt by the management and shareholders in the death of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, who was the founder of the corporation and its general manager from the day of its organization in 1882 until his retirement at the last annual meeting and who was at the date of his death one of the vice-presidents. The quite unusual success of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation is largely due to the conservative and careful policies laid down by Mr. Langmuir and so ably carried out by his successors, who have been for many years trained to the highest ideals in trusts management.

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation's activities not only include the management of estates left in their hands as executors, but also the management of property for private individuals and as administrators, agents and trustees. The reliability of this oldest of trusts corporations is well attested by the fact that even in these times $4,484,879.11 in additional trusts, have been placed in their hands for administration, during the past year.

The last year's Board of Directors was unanimously re-elected, the Hon. Mr. Featherston Osler retaining the presidency, and Messrs. the Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., and Hamilton Cassels, K.C., L.L.D., the vice-presidencies, and Mr. A. D. Langmuir, the general managership. Mr. W. G. Watson continues as assistant general manager and Mr. T. J. Maguire as secretary.

are so often subject to headache—are languid, pale and nervous—because their blood is thin or insufficient. They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. They do not need drugs—but do need the tonic and nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that makes richer blood, fills hollow cheeks, suppresses nervousness and establishes strength. Nourishment alone makes blood and Scott's Emulsion is the essence of concentrated nourishment, free from wines or opiates.

If mother or daughter is frail, pale or nervous, give her Scott's for one month and see the betterment. It has a wholesome, "nutty" flavor. Avoid substitutes. At any drug store.

Trust And Gurantee Company, Limited

The report presented to the shareholders of The Trusts and Guarantee Company, Limited, at their annual meeting held at its Head Office in Toronto on January 20th, shows a continued and steady growth in the Company's business.

The total assets of the Company increased during the year almost one million dollars and the total now exceeds $14,000,000.00. These figures are significant of the increased and increasing demand for Trust Company stewardship in preference to that of the private party, affording as it does a reliable and economical means of caring for the financial affairs of a man of means during his lifetime and efficiently administering his estate after his decease.

A further important gain is that reported in the total of the guaranteed Trust Fund which are funds invested by private parties and fraternal and other societies through the agency of the company. These funds now amount to about four and a quarter million dollars, being a substantial increase over the total of one year ago, and most favorably reflects the confidence of the investing public in this form of security issued by The Trusts and Guarantee Company.

The net profits for the year were, like those of all other financial institutions, slightly below the figures of 1914. The usual dividend of 6 per cent. per annum was paid and the balance of the earnings was carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss or Reserve Account, making the total of that account now $888,-641.98.

Mr. James J. Warren, the President, in moving the adoption of the report called the attention of the shareholders to the fact that the company's Guarantees Investment Certificates are, by Act of Parliament, a Trustee Security, and as such are now legally one of the high class securities in which executors and trustees are authorized by law to invest funds of estates and trusts.

In the course of his remark among other things the President said "The proceeds of the large Western crop and of the munition orders for the British Government are coming into circulation. General business is improving in all lines, and promises even greater activity. The feeling of apprehension that prevailed in the early months of the war seems to have passed, and the Canadian people are going about the business of developing their country in a serious way, and are exercising a very necessary economy."

The adoption of the report was seconded by Mr. C. E. Ritchie, vice-President, who commented on the adverse effects the war had had on financial transact . "We must hope," he said, "for a speedy (and at the same time satisfactory) termination of the war, when it would be reasonable to expect a gradual return of normal conditions with a resultant favorable improvement in the general conditions of business and financial affairs throughout Canada."

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the Officers and Staff of the company. The same Board of Directors was re-elected, and at a subsequent meeting of the Board the following officers were appointed: James J. Warren, President; D. W. Karn and C. E. Ritchie, vice-President, and E. B. Stockdale, General Manager.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use feed the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure healthy tissues.

MILITARY CARNIVAL TO BE HELD IN KINGSTON

KINGSTON, Feb. 5.—What promises to be the biggest and most attractive winter carnival and military bazaar ever held in Canada is to be given in the Armouries next week, under the auspices of the 146th Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., from Monday afternoon, February 7th, to Saturday night, February 12th. This stellar event is to be under the patronage of Colonel T. D. R. Hemming, Officer Commanding the Third Divisional Area and the headquarters staff, and should be made the occasion for Kingston old boys in other cities to visit their old home. All of the railroads are offering an excursion rate of one first class fare and one third for the round trip tickets, good to return up till midnight, February 14.

A feature of the carnival and bazaar is that all the attractions will be free to all comers. It is not to be a money-making scheme. The expense is being borne by Lieut.-Col. Chas. A. Low, Officer Commanding the 146th Battalion, with money voluntary subscribed by the patriotic people of Kingston. The fundamental object of the event is to stimulate patriotism and an interest in the 146th and the Canadian army generally.

The programme, which has already been drafted, is to be an elaborate and varied one: It will include sports and athletic events, the honours and prizes for these to be contested by teams from the various military units in the Third Division; military parades, fancy skating contests for adults and children, exhibition and demonstration of several kinds of the modern "dogs of war," such as machine guns, artillery guns, field telegraph, field telephone, signalling apparatus, band concerts by the crack Band of the R.C.H.A., and the 146th Battalion, grand march of the Allies and tattoo, etc.

The interior of the armouries will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. Some of the booths for exhibiting and demonstrating the "dogs of war" are to be arranged and bedecked in a novel way. Co-operating with Col. Law and other leading military officials to make the week a success are committees of most of the prominent men and women of Kingston, patriotic organizations, the Board of Trade, etc. There is to be a tea room and other booths in charge of popular young ladies.

All the troops in the Kingston garrison are going to take part in the carnival. Every afternoon and evening there will be a band concert. There is to be a hum from the opening to the c[illegible]ng hour every day.

Rounding Up The Aliens

Authorities Are Beginning to Realize That Canada Is at War With a Real, Live Enemy

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The greatest round up of aliens since the beginning of the war was ordered by the Canadian authorities to-day. The Dominion Police have been ordered to apprehend all foreigners who left Ottawa Thursday night when the five-million dollar Parliament buildings were burned.

Saturday Market Features

The market this morning was fairly well attended. Beef and Pork predominated at their usual prices of 10 and 12 cents for the former, and 14 and 16 cents for the latter.

Very little lamb was offered. One dealer had a sample which he sold at 18 and 22 cents.

Live roosters brought $1.00 each

Apples were scarce, and were quoted as follows: No. 2 Spies $5.00 per barrel, No. 3 Spies $2.75; Russets $1.25 a bag, and York Imperials $2.75 a barrel.

Vegetables were more numerous than usual at this time of the year, due to the mild weather.

Potatoes still commanded $2.00 a bag, with a promise of still higher prices.

Basket Section.

Butter was sold at 32 cents a pound, though a few dealers were asking 33 cents.

Eggs were offered in larger quantities than last Saturday at prices a little easier, ranging all the way from 32 to 35 cents, the majority asking 33 and 34 cents.

Two turkeys were offered, one bringing $2.50, the other weighing 14 lb., brought $2.80.

Chickens sold at 70 to 90 cents each, the smaller ones realizing $1.35 to $1.50 a pair.

One farmer's wife had a few cakes of very nice looking head cheese which she was selling at 10 cents a cake, each weighing 1 1-2 lbs.

Oranges sold for 30 and 40 cents a dozen, while lemons went at 25 cents a dozen.

Prices in England.

Mrs. R. J. Devey received a memo last week from her mother, who lives in the city of Northampton in one of the Midland counties of England, giving some of the prices which they have to pay over there, the quotations being for the 31st of January:

Pork, 25 cents a pound, beef, 20 cents, liver 12c., mutton, 20c., sugar, 6c., herrings, 4c. each, bread, 5c. for a two pound loaf.

How to Shed a Rough, Chapped or Blotchy Skin

This is what you should do to shed a bad complexion: Spread evenly over the face, covering every inch of skin, a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax. Let this stay on over night, washing it off next morning. Repeat daily until your complexion is as clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. This result is inevitable, no matter how soiled or withered the complexion. The wax literally absorbs the slimy surface skin, exposing the lovely young skin beneath. The process is entirely harmless, as little of the old skin coming off at a time. Mercolized wax is obtainable at any druggists; one ounce usually suffices. It's a veritable wonder-worker for rough, chapped, reddened, blotchy, pimpled, freckled or sallow skin.

Pure powdered saxolite is excellent for a wrinkled skin. An ounce of it dissolved in a half pint of witch hazel makes a refreshing wash lotion. This renders the skin quite firm and smooth. Indeed the very first application erases the finer lines, the deeper ones soon follow.

Decision is in Favour of City

Arbitrators Must Certify as to Principle on Which Peterboro' Light and Power Company's Award Was Made

The arbitrators responsible for the award in the arbitration between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company will have to certify as to the principle on which they proceeded, and as to the mode they calculated the amount allowed. In the meantime judgment was deferred. This represents the ruling of the appellate division of the High Court in the appeal by the city from the judgment of Mr. Justice Britton, of October 27th, 1915. In the latter instance, the arbitrators furnished Mr. Justice Britton with a written statement, whereas the city demanded that they reveal the principle upon which the award of $154,000 was made. Mr. Justice Britton declined to accede to the city's request, with the result that the case was taken to the appellate division. The decision of the latter was made known yesterday in Osgoode Hall. It means a distinct win for the city, and may lead to a reduction in the original award of $154,000 made in favour of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

A Distinct Win.

The case marks another step in the fight to obtain a reduction of the award, which, as it stands at present, constitutes the price the city must pay for the distributing plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., of Toronto and City Solicitor G. N. Gordon acted for the city, while Mr. W. N. Tilley, K.C., of Toronto, appeared for the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and Mr. S. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto, for the bondholders.

A NOTABLE EVENT IN STAGE WORLD

Visit of Mrs. Patrick Campbell Gives Playgoers An Unique Chance

In the appearance of Mrs. Patrick Campbell in Bernard Shaw's famous play, "Pygmalion" on Monday night at the Grand, theatre-goers will have the unique opportunity of seeing one of the most distinguished English actresses in a play by one of England's most celebrated playwrights. The coming of Mrs. Campbell to Peterborough is a notable event in local theatre circles, and a crowded house should greet her in the clever vehicle in which she is touring this continent. Only three cities in Canada are being given a chance to see "Pygmalion," and local theatre-goers should not miss the opportunity.

USE "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS WHEN CONSTIPATED

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, a bad cold, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out. Are you keeping you bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts cathartic pills or castor oils?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

Men's Bible Class Banquet

On the invitation of the Men's Bible Class of Knox church a company of about seventy men of the congregation last night sat down to a tastily arranged banquet in the Lecture Hall. The chairman for the evening was President Ralph Hillier, and supporting him were Rev. Jas. A. McKenzie, Messrs. A. McKee, M. Clarke and Dr. McCulloch.

A programme of toasts of a very interesting nature was submitted to the company, and much enjoyed. The toasts and replies were in the nature of surprises as regards the participants. Altogether a valuable and educational evening was spent.

The King.

Session — Messrs. Denoon, J. W. Smith and W. J. Byers.

The Board—Messrs. J. M. Waldie, and H. McCannon.

Sunday School—Messrs. J. W. Buyers and M. Clarke.

Organized Classes—Messrs. Carpenter, Taurber and McCannon.

The Guild —Messrs. A. McKenzie and K. Kenyon.

Solo—Rev. J. A. McKenzie.

The Ladies— Messrs. J. Anderson, Taylor and Morrison.

The Caretaker—Rev. McKenzie and Beavis.

93rd Battalion Band At Brock Street Rink

Another Good Programme Arranged For This Evening

Saturday evening is always very popular for skaters at Brock Street Rink, and to-night will be no exception. The popular band from the 93rd Battalion will be on hand and play a fine programme. Skating will be from 7.30 to 10.30 o'clock, and the ice will be cleaned at half-time.

Belgian Relief Committee To Have a Canvass

An enthusiastic meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Belgian Relief Committee was held last evening in the Bank of Commerce Chambers.

After receiving the views of the citizens present, it was determined to adopt a system of canvass and collection similar to that used by the Red Cross Society. Committees were struck to organize the work and instructed to report to the general meeting which will be held on Wednesday evening.

The attention of the public is drawn to the fact that this general meeting, which was to have been held in the Council Chamber, will be held in the T.A.S. Rooms, opposite the City Hall, as the Council Chamber will be in use on that evening.

It is hoped that this meeting will be attended by all those who are interested in this worthy cause.

New Officers of the Health Association

At a meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Health Association the following officers were elected:

President—Rev. Father Phelan.
1st Vice Pres.—Dr. F. C. Neal.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Geo. Powell.
3rd Vice Pres.—Mr. E. F. Mason.
Secretary—Dr. Cameron.
Treasurer—Mr. W. K. Dunsford.

Six Months In The Mercer

Local Woman Convicted of Shoplifting—Husband Was Discharged

Mrs. Julia Keegan, who one week ago pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of goods from a number of local stores, was this morning sentenced to six months in the Mercer Reformatory, by Magistrate Dumble.

Dennis Keegan, husband of the woman, accused of receiving stolen goods, was discharged. Keegan was represented in Court by Mr. H. R. Armstrong, of the legal firm of Gordon and Widdifield. Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for the prosecution.

GRAFT—NEW STORY IN TO-DAY'S EXAMINER

Serial Will Run Each Saturday in The Examiner

The new serial story "Graft," the opening chapter of which appears in to-day Examiner, and which was written by eighteen of America's most famous authors, is one of the strongest stories of the day.

The Empire Theatre has arranged to run the photo-play pictures of the story on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, following the appearance of the story in the Examiner.

The Need of the Hour

All who believe that the present conditions in our own land and throughout the world call for special prayer and humiliation before God will be welcomed to the special service in the Murray Street Church on Sunday evening. This church has done magnificently in its gifts of men and money for the defence of the empire and the protection of the needy, and the Sunday evening service is suggested by those who feel that the special need of the present hour is that we should "Wait on the Lord and be of good courage."

Large numbers will be glad to join this loyal congregation in their appeal to the source of all Strength.

Woman's Council Will Undertake No Special Work

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women was held yesterday afternoon in the Teachers' Room of the Public Library, when there was a good attendance. The President, Mrs F. C. Neal, was in the chair. Reports of the various committees were received. In the report of the Playgrounds Committee reference was made to the splendid results attending the first organized playgrounds in this city during July and August of last year. The matter of re-opening the grounds this coming summer was referred to a committee.

It was decided to undertake no special work at the present time, but to assist in every way possible every patriotic movement. It was also decided to hold open meetings every two months, to which the members of all affiliated societies are invited.

Election of Officers.

President—Mrs. F. C. Neal.
1st Vice Pres.—Miss Staples.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. Robt. Harstone.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. James Wood.
Rec.-Secretary—Mrs. W. R. Morris.
Cor.-Secretary—Mrs. J. B. Mann.
Treasurer—Miss Nina Davidson.
Convenor of Household Economic Committee—Miss Edna Ferguson.
Convenor of Press Committee—Miss Hatton.
Convenor of Immigration Committee—Miss Peacock.
Convenor of Educational Committee—Miss F. D. N. Roberts.
Convenor of Playgrounds Committee—Mrs. A. Mowat.
Convenor of Equal Moral Standard Committee—Mrs. A. Stevenson.
Convenor of Citizenship Committee—Dr. Bernie.

In one of the Southern prohibition states a physician had occasion to order some whisky for a patient, relates The Medical Pickwick. It so happened that the whisky reached the express office on Sunday morning. The doctor sent for the package, and the express agent returned the reply that the whisky could not be delivered on Sunday. Thereupon the doctor sent word that the whisky was for a very sick patient and must be had at once. The agent sent a reply that if the doctor would write a prescription for the whisky he could get it. The doctor wrote upon his prescription blank: "Sic semper tyrannis," and the whisky was promptly delivered.

PYGMALION.

Pygmalion was a King of Cyprus. He is said to have fallen in love with the ivory image of a maiden, Galatea, which he himself had made, and to have prayed to Aphredite to breathe life into it. When the request was granted, Pygmalion married the maiden. This classical reference explains the origin of Bernard Shaw's title for the play in which Mrs. Patrick Campbell is appearing. In pronouncing the word the first syllable is short and the second long.

How To Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes, do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally either eye trouble that threatens partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely artificial; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the Warne Drug Company or to the nearest wide-awake drug store, and get a bottle of Bon-Optic tablets; fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how even the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it, as it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvellously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned, don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

SUFFERED ANGUISH WITH ECZEMA

280 Palmerston St., Sarnia, Ont.—"My little girl developed a slight eruption on her thigh which I was told was eczema. It spread to her hands and feet, her eyes and behind her ears. She suffered terrible anguish and failed to a mere skeleton. The skin all came off the palms of her hands and the soles of her feet and we thought she would die. She could not bear her clothing near her.

"I got a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. In a few weeks there was no trace of the trouble left." (Signed) Mrs. H. Langlois, Feb. 21, 1914.

WITH THE STARS

Mr. W. E. Harper, B.A., of Ottawa, to Visit Peterboro'

Mr. W. A. Harper, B.A., of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, is to lecture on the subject, "Nebulae" on Thursday evening, Feb. 10, in St. Paul's Sunday School room.

Many of the large observatories are at present devoting considerable time to the study of the films, shreds and balls of cloudy material among the stars known as nebulae; seeking to give them the proper place in the universe.

Mr. Harper will tell in simple language what is known of the wonderful objects, with particular reference to discoveries of the past few years. A number of lantern slides of nebulae will be shown, made recently from the best photographs obtained with the 60 inch reflector at Mount Wilson

The lecture will be given in the St Paul's Sunday School room on Thursday, Feb. 10th. Admission free. No collection.

TO-DAY---ST. AGATHA

This Day is Commemorated---St. Agatha, Virgin and Martyr of the Third Century---Some Curious Customs Observed on Her Feast Day

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

The festival of St. Agatha occurs to-day, February 5th. She is the patroness of Catania in Sicily, and of Malta, our strongly armed possession, and naval base, in the Mediterranean sea. She is one of the most venerated of the virgin-martyrs, and has been honoured and commemorated from a very early date.

Her Birthplace.

Both Catania and Palermo dispute the honour of having been her birthplace, but her martyrdom took place in the former city, and the fact has been well authenticated, yet even though her veneration as a saint and martyr had in the earliest days spread far beyond her native locality, there is no reliable information regarding her death.

Her History.

According to the old historians, Agatha was the daughter of a distinguished family, and was remarkable for her great beauty. Quintianus, the king of Sicily, laid siege to her honour, but as his proposals were spurned by her, he caused her to be bound and beaten and her bosom to be cut off or lacerated. But St. Peter appeared to her, so tradition says, and miraculously healed her. Then Quintianus ordered her to be burned at the stake.

But no sooner was the torch applied than an earthquake happened, and the citizens compelled the king to release her from the flames. She was then cast into prison, where she succumbed to the treatment she received, in the year A.D. 251.

St. Agatha's Veil.

A year after her death Mount Etna, a volcanic mountain in Sicily, burst out into flame. The fire had nearly reached the city when St. Agatha's veil, which some of the inhabitants had placed on a pole and carried out in procession, was the means of arresting the conflagration. This caused the conversion and baptism of all the heathen present.

St. Agatha thus became the patroness against fire as well as of all diseases of the breast, and throughout the region of Mount Etna she is invoked against eruptions of the volcano, and elsewhere against fire and lightning.

Monuments to Her Memory.

In Rome is a church dedicated to her memory, which was built as early as the fifth century. It is situated on the Suburra, and is much enriched with Mosaic work. There is also a Basilica, erected to commemorate her on the estate known as Caclano, in Catania. Most of her bones are preserved at Catania, but some were sent to the monastery of St. Stephen in the island of Capri.

In Art.

She is represented with a palm in one hand and in the other a salver on which is placed a woman's breast, symbolical of the dastardly cruelty practised upon her.

How history has repeated itself during the present terrible war. It will be fresh in one's memory how the villainous Huns—despite their "kultur"—served the Belgian women and maidens.

Her Name in Many Languages.

This ancient, and to my mind pretty name, occurs in many languages. In English, Danish, Dutch and Latin it is spelt Agatha; in French, Greek and German, Agathe; in Italian, Spanish and Portugese, Agata. The meaning of the word, which is Greek, is good, kind.

Her Festival at Catania.

There is a peculiar distinguishing feature in the festival at Catania, which is a pony race. An eye witness has thus described it: "The ponies destined for the contest have no riders, but by means of wax, ribbons are firmly attached to their back; and to these again are appended bladders and weighted pieces of wood armed with sharp spikes; the noise of one, and the pain inflicted by the other, being amply sufficient to urge to exertion animals much better qualified to resist the effect of either than the horse.

At the firing of a signal gun they are turned loose from one extremity of the street; and amidst the shouts of the populace which lines it on both sides, they make what haste they can to the other. Here I discovered to my great surprise, sitting in the open air, under a canopy of crimson, arrayed in robes of office, with their president. The business of these first magistrates of the city, decked out in all their paraphernalia, and attended by drummers, fifers, and musketeers, was to declare the winner among half a dozen jades, the best of which was not worth ten pounds. It was difficult to suppress a smile on seeing one of the parties rise, discuss the matter with the rest of the bench, and, not without much action and emphasis and deliberation, deliver the verdict to the expectant crowd."

Curious English Custom.

A curious ceremony on this day is still kept up in Biddenham, England, and possibly yet in other remote rural districts. Shortly before noon a procession of villagers, carrying a white rabbit decorated with scarlet ribbons, passes through the village singing a hymn in honour of St. Agatha—who by the way is a black letter saint in the English church calendar. Maids, old and young, who meet the procession, point at the rabbit with the first two fingers of their right hand, saying:

Maidens, maidens, bury him here.

This custom is said to date back to the year of the first crusade. It will be remembered, no doubt, that red and white were the colours of the garb of the Crusaders—the colours of the banner of St. George of England.

The Maidens' Prayer.

Sweet Agatha! who art to maidens kind,
Show me, I pray, where a sweetheart I'll find.

There are a good few, even in this burgh, uttering this petition. Will their prayer be answered? I hope for their pretty sakes it may be, although they are asking for trouble. For

A mighty pain to love it is,
And 'tis a pain that pain to miss;
But of all pains the greatest pain
It is to love, and love in vain.

A Jack For Every Jill.

It is said that notwithstanding the preponderance of the feminine gender, that there is a Jack for every Jill. That means, of course, for every nice Jill. There are some who would never get married; they appear to be born old maids. There is nothing about them which renders them attractive to the man's eye, and consequently, his heart; and they altogether seem to be lacking in those qualifications which appeal to the masculine heart; their tempers are short, snappish, shrewish; they talk with closed teeth—a sure sign of spitefulness— and there are a thousand and one other signs which mark their condemnation.

A Man Wants But One Woman.

But at the same time it is not every man that dares to rush in where angels fear to tread. For it seems pretty true that no man ever married one woman; he marries, apparently, an executive committee of her girl friends, with his mother-in-law in the chair.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANDRUFF

Try This! Your Hair Gets Wavy, Glossy and Abundant at Once

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair — sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

Suffered From Nerves
Could Not Sleep

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B, writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Price 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE IRISH ARE DOING WELL

successor of Augustine Roche in North Louth. Whitty is quite a young man from Dublin. The succession means mainly a tribute to Richard Hazelton, his uncle a former member, and is therefore a demonstration against factionism.

Meanwhile confidence abounds everywhere, not only in the tighter alliance but more concerted action of the Allies. A parliamentary committee just elected, will meet a similar committee of the French Parliament. John Dillon, Hugh Law and myself are members. We should have started February 15, but our French colleagues requested a postponment as M. Briand was absent on a mission to the Italian Ministry in Rome. The French Parliament wants to give us a big reception headed by the French Premier. This committee probably later will be augumented by representatives of Russia and Italy.

It is thus becoming clearer daily that Germany must abandon hope of a separate peace. It must confront her that her gradual wearing down by a vast accumulation of superior forces is a certainty.

London papers contain long accounts of President Wilson's recent speeches. Their abstention from comment is due to their full appreciation of the delicacy of the situation and the peril of even appearing to try to influence American opinion or American policy.

I turn from Imperial Federation to another of the problems after the war. Though the plural Voting Bill has been kept alive by the terms of the Parliament Act just passed, it is recognized by everybody that it has a very poor chance of passing into law as an isolated item. There is a desire for agreement on the subject and it is possible that agreement may take the shape of an entire change in our present registration and voting system. At present it is a scandal that residence has to be of such length, and getting on the voting register is so difficult and expensive, that it presses very hardly on the masses of the people. This is especially the case in great cities like London, where working people have very often to change their residence in pursuit of their work, and where a change from one street to a street around the corner, or indeed from one side of the street to another, by breaking the continuity of residence, imperils the chance of getting the vote. Our system also of constituencies has become out of date owing to the increase and shifting of the population. It is possible, accordingly, that a compromise will be found on all these questions, and that this compromise will include a redistribution of seats. Of course, these transformations of our system are made the more inevitable by the enormous change created in the Imperial Parliament by the passage of the Home Rule Act. For the 103 Irish members who now sit in the Imperial Parliament there will be substituted 42; and this involves other changes.

One of the most pressing questions which occupies people's minds in England is the reform of our land system. We have still too much of the concentration of land in few hands. Our soil is neither sufficiently populated nor sufficiently cultivated. Some radical reformers go the length of demanding that the big and beautiful domains with their ancient trees and lovely green fields shall be broken up also game which is the pleasure of the rich and does not appeal so strongly to the masses, especially as game preservation has excluded them from any share in it. At the same time there are portions of the country, as in Scotland, which are so unsuitable for cultivation by their barrenness, that much land may still be left for mere sport. One of the vices of our system, to, is that the land-owning class belongs mainly to the aristocracy, the leaders of society, still in great political power-idle, reckless out-of-door Englishmen and Scotchmen and for the most part trained for many years in universities, who do not approach their ownership of land with the business instinct and training of men in mercantile life. The cutting down of expenditure which the vast cost of the war will impose on all classes in England, the greater realization of the sternest facts of life which many of these landlords will have found in the battlefield, the greater interest in science which Germany is impressing on the British mind—all these things may make a new race of land-owners. Some of the happy-go-lucky races of the old times will pass; but on the other hand a more skilful and a more assiduous and more business-like management of their estates may well be imposed and produce quite a new race.

This may soften some of the asperities which characterized the old land campaign of which Mr. Lloyd George was the chief spokesman. The discussion will be further softened by that new spirit of solidarity between the different classes of the country which the war should produce and which I have already mentioned. It was so difficult to rouse any interest in the land question before the war and in piping times of peace that the advocates of land reform were almost forced to resort to vehement personal appeals, when the "wicked duke", to whom I have already alluded, figured largely. And the wicked duke may be said to have vanished now from the British political stage. It may then be that the whole problem, approached in a different spirit, may find different handling, and may be conducted on business rather than on political lines. Enormous advance has been made in the idea of the small proprietor as the best method of cultivating the land to the highest advantage of the community, not merely by the example of the extraordinary resources of country of peasant proprietors like France, but also by the example of a country nearer to us, namely, Ireland. That country as everybody knows, has been in little more than a quarter of a century transformed from a nation of pauper serfs into one of prosperous and hopeful homes. The old Ireland of the thatched cottage and the dunghill in front of the door and the cattle inside the door and the poverty, discontent and disturbance, has practically disappeared, the slated house has grown, the jails are being closed, the workhouses emptied. Rural shopkeepers in Ireland have had to add a furniture department to their stores; drapers do a roaring business, and the peasant in rags has become an anachronism which is rarely seen outside the stage of the Irish theatre. All these things have penetrated the Irish mind, and to-morrow, if it were possible to form a chancelry of the Exchequer to find the money to pay out to the English as the State bought out the Irish landlords, the English landlords would jump at the offer.

I will turn to another subject which will probably be treated in a very different spirit than that of the past—namely, the liquor traffic. Everybody knows that no subject has never proved more contentious in British politics. We have had in England among the larger portion of the population and outside the ranks of temperance fanatics, no such prejudice against those in the liquor business as exists in other countries, and notably in the United States. Great breweries, as everybody knows, are numerous in the House of Peers and are now to be counted among our great families. The dealers in liquors in some thirty or forty years indeed belonged in almost equal numbers to both political parties, but as the teetotal extremists mainly belong to the Liberal party, and as such Liberal government nearly always attempted restrictive liquor regulation, the whole liquor trade was thrown into the arms of the Conservative party, and nearly every liquor saloon of the country became a permanent Conservative committee room. The liquor question thus became a conflict on the purest party lines, and though the Conservative party, owing to the growth of teetotal sentiment in the ranks of the clergy and the church of England, now and then attempted some reforms, these reforms were always of a somewhat timid character.

Here again, the war produced an entire transformation of the whole political situation. Mr. Lloyd-George, who remains in essence a strong Welsh and temperance Nonconformist, thundered against the waste of labour and of money and of proper conduct of the war with what he called the "lure of drink." Eager, impulsive, vehement, prompt, he even went to the length of suggesting that the whole trade should be bought by the State; but a financial operation that would have amounted to 20 to 30 hundred millions of dollars was more than the nation could make up its mind to face in the midst of the tremendous expenditure of the war; and though he eagerly pressed his scheme on his friends in the press and some of them responded cordially to it, the project had to be abandoned. In the meantime, however, the very mention of the subject and the deeper realization every day of the gigantic perils and the gigantic anxieties of the war produced a universal feeling in favour of a restriction of the liquor traffic. This movement was further helped by the example of the King and of several men in high station, as well as among the middle classes generally, of abstention from alcohol during the war. When you sit down to a dinner party in London society you often find half the men

Both Local Teams Won and Are Tied For Group Honours

93rd Battalion Beat Cobourg by 5 Goals to 3, While Electrics Won at Campbellford 4 to 3—Will Have to Play Off.

TWO EXCITING GAMES

Both Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. teams won their games last night, the 93rd Battalion defeating Cobourg 5 goals to 3 at Cobourg, while the Electrics won an overtime game at Campbellford by 4 goals to 3. As a result the two teams are tied for the district championship and will play home and home games to settle the title.

The 93rd were in front all the way at Cobourg. They started out at a fast clip and had the score 3 to 0 at the end of the first period, duplicating the Electrics' stunt on Wednesday night. Cobourg came back stronger in the second period as they did against the Electrics and outscored the soldiers 2 to 1 in that session. Both teams scored one in the last period. For the soldiers Windsor was especially effective, scoring all five of their goals. Lavis and Reddy starred for Cobourg. Referee Harvey Sproule gave satisfaction.

The Electrics had a hard battle at Campbellford. Tommy Moffatt's team who are rounding into shape for the Trent Valley League fixtures, gave them a fight all the way. The checking was close and hard all the way, and the teams were given few opportunities to break away. The period scores indicate the evenness of the going. It was 1-1 at the first, 2-2 at the second, and 3-3 at the third, the Electrics scoring the first goal in each case. In the overtime period Evans scored the winning goal for the Electrics. For the latter the Junior defence handled themselves nicely.

Whether or not Andy Webb would be permitted to practice for a half an hour before a game, was the burning question on the Kickers' Club slate this afternoon. Enquiry brought out the fact that the charge is in the main a mere allegation, but some of the members claim they have supporting facts that warrant Andy's appearance on the carpet.

The club has had a busy week and in fact President Fitzgerald granted them a half holiday this morning as a respite. A number of important questions have been discussed in camera and the club is running smoothly even turning its attentions to members of the Club.

Orillia were fifteen points up on their own ice yesterday in the first half of the Neill-Sheppard trophy games. Four local rinks went and the skips made the following showing: T. Brightman down 2, W. H. Taylor down 5, A. Moore down 13, and J. W. McDermid up 5. The return games will be played here on the eve of the local bonspiel, when it is hoped this lead will be overcome.

A Revelation.

Zeppelin Went Down In North Sea

"He said: 'I pledge you my sword we will do nothing of the kind.' He took a dying oath that he would not interefere with us, and that I could have plenty of money if I saved them. Well, I took another thought. They are thirty, I said to myself, and we are nine; they are armed, and we are not. We have not got as much as a pistol on board.

Decided Not to Take the Risk.

"I would not take the risk. If there had been another skip standing by I could have taken a chance, but there was nothing in sight. Besides I remembered what the Germans have done, and what they might do again. I could see the Iron crosses painted on the Zeppelin, two on one side and one underneath its wooden nose, which was tilted up.

"I suppose that these crosses were given for some daring deeds, and I did not want me and my crew to be part of the fourth.

"So I steamed away from the Zeppelin about 9.30 o'clock. The captain said: 'We are sinking now, look here.' I said as the last word: 'You will come here and take charge of me.' 'No,' he said, and pledged his word again. We drew away. Some of the German crew at first shouted: 'Mercy! Mercy! Save us,' and then they shook their fists at us.

"I was in two I would have done it except for the reason I have told you. I went away to find a gunboat or a patrol vessel that was better provided than we were for looking after an enemy crew.

"In peace time, of course, I would have had all the Germans aboard in two ticks."

A member of the King Stephen's crew, confirming Captain Martin's story, added the following: "We cruised round and round the wreck for a while. The skipper asked us what we thought best. We all said: 'Let's get away. If they come aboard they'll slaughter us.' So we went and then a wind got up."

George Denny, mate of the trawler King Stephen, which sighted sighted the Zeppelin, stated to-day that he believed there was no chance of the airship being saved. The wind was rapidly freshening to a gale when the trawler left the Zeppelin, and as the car and its machinery were wholly submerged, the swell of the sea would cause a terrific drag on the envelope which apparently must eventually have been pulled under the water.

A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Copenhagen says the wrecked Zeppelin L-19 was well known along the west coast. It was formerly stationed at Hamburg and Pondern, and was frequently mentioned in newspaper reports received from captains of North Sea vessels. For some time the airship patrolled the area around Horn Reef, and relieved the wrecked Zeppelin L-13 at Pondern.

The L-19 was first mentioned about two months ago, when accompanied by the L-7 and L-8, it stopped a Swedish steamer in the middel of the North Sea and sent a party aboard to inspect the steamer's papers.

WHICH ROAD?

WHICH road? This is the question every country community is facing to-day. In OUR community there are only two kinds of people. And they travel on just TWO roads. There are the "HOME TOWN patriots" and the "Out-of-Town patrons." There is the "Trade at Home" road and the "mail order" road. Which class are YOU in? What road are YOU taking? It should be easy to decide. Every time we fail to patronize HOME INTERESTS we are boosting an outsider. Every time we take the mail order route we are boycotting our home town. Which ROAD? The only answer for US is the ROAD TO THE RIGHT.

at the table, who appreciated a glass of good wine as well as anybody before the war, drinking nothing but water. Add to this the necessity of everybody of retrenching expenditure, the strong feeling against an unnecessary luxury which this created, so that a bottle of champagne at a table became almost a reproach, even in wealthy houses, and you will understand how temperance sentiment made an extraordinary rapidity of advance. Add again to all this the extraordinary feat of Russia prohibiting vodka and of France prohibiting absinthe, and you will understand the entirely new attitude of the National mind in England toward the liquor problem.

And finally, the necessary darkening of our streets at night, owing to the Zeppelin danger, made the dinner party either at the luxurious hotel or in the luxurious home much rarer. This led to the curious result that when the hours of the liquor saloon were reduced in many great centres of population almost to half, there was scarcely any protest except from the liquor trade itself, and though there was some grumbling among the working men the general feeling of the public was in favour of the restriction. Thus a revolution of social sentiment took place which would have been regarded as impossible a year and a half ago. Once an attempt was made to close public houses in London on Sunday. It ended in a fierce riot, and ladies and gentlemen going to their clubs or to their homes with wel-filled wine cellars, were actually dragged out of their carriages and rather severely mauled. To-day there is not a murmured word of public revolt.

This in its turn has produced an entirely different attitude of mind in the liquor industry itself. With their revenue in some cases diminished by a third or even a half, the brewers find themselves face to face with a serious financial situation. This has brought them to practically the same position as the Irish landlords, and in one case as in the other, makes the solution acceptable and welcome to them of the selling of their interests to the state.

I have very little doubt then, that one of the first changes in the life of Great Britain after the war will be the substitution of state for private ownership of the liquor traffic. It may be on the lines of municipal ownership as in Norway, or State ownership; but I regard the private conduct of the liquor traffic as doomed.

HOME AND HOME GAME TO SETTLE THE GROUP RACE

9rd Battalion and Electrics Will Meet at Brock St. Rink on Tuesday and Thursday Nights of Next Week

TWO GOOD BATTLES

The O.H.A. has ordered the 93rd Battalion and Electrics to settle their differences in this group by playing home and home games for the district championship. They will meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights of next week, and fans can look forward to two of the most exciting games of the season. On the games played during the group the teams are most evenly matched. Each team has won five games out of six played, and each has beaten the other twice. There is keen rivalry between the two, and the two battles next week should be worth going miles to see.

What's What in Food.

For health and long life three important elements must ever be present in food—nutrition, saline matter, waste matter. The first builds tissue; the second hardens bones and teeth, builds and stimulates nerves and brain, makes stomach digestion possible, and keeps the blood non-acid. Waste matter promotes digestive secretions and keeps the bowel muscles active and strong, overcoming constipation. Roman Meal has all these properties because they reside in the darker parts of all grains. Refined cereals cannot have them. Roman Meal nourishes better than meat, prevents indigestion, and positively relieves constipation or "money back."

At grocers, 10c and 25 cents.

The Strand Musical Comedy Co.

To Play Five Nights Next Week

Commencing Tuesday evening next the Strand Musical Comedy Co. will open a five days' enaggement at "The Grand." It is also long since local lovers of musical comedy have had an opportunity to see the class of amusement, that the above announcement will come as welcome news. The Strand Co. is composed of twenty people headed by Canada's favourite comedian, Felix Martin, who is ably assisted by Rose Emmett, and a bevy of pretty girls. The opening play Tuesday evening is 'The College Widow,' when the following musical numbers will be introduced, "Sprinkle Me With Kisses," "A Few Merry Moments," "Tulip Time in Holland," "Everybody Rag With Me," "Kentucky Home," "England I Love You," "Carolina," etc. Popular prices of 15c., 25c and 35c. will prevail for this engagement and patrons are ensured of a good bright entertainment on all five nights.

City Wins a Point in Its Hydro Campaign

At the meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council last night City Solicitor Gordon stated that the Court of Appeal's decision in the City vs. the Peterborough Light and Power Company meant that the city's demand for details of the basis upon which the arbitrators' award was made must be complied with. This was the point which the city sought when they carried the case before the Court of Appeal. Owing to the illness of Mr. M. H. Gowan, Mr. Gordon was authorized to engage other counsel if he deemed it advisable.

ALL CHILDREN LOVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give It When Feverish, Cross, Bilious, for Bad Breath or Sour Stomach

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food, and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Ottawa Fire Just Another German Act

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—The fire which destroyed the war supplies factory of Grant, Holden and Graham, Limited, last night, as yet unexplained, is accepted quite quietly by Ottawa as "just another" German Act. Hon. G. J. Doherty, the Minister of Justice, is absent and has been in Washington during the past week. He was expected home on Monday, but may now remain possibly in Washington for a while owing to the likelihood of some activity in the States. If anyone is apprehended in the States on charges arising out of the Parliament Hill outrage he would be, of course, immediately extraditable.

Home Nursing Classes Begin on Monday

Application should be made at once for entrance to the home nursing class starting at the Y.W.C.A. Monday evening. The lectures are given by Dr. Cameron.

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Council of St. John's Ambulance Association recently in the Central Y.M.C.A. it was reported that there is no immediate need for holders of the association's certificates as nurses' assistant in England. The report stated that a number of members have gone to England and are employed in various hospitals of the Red Cross Association as nurses' assistants.

The past year, owing to the war, has been one of unusual activity. Much interest has been aroused in the classes conducted by the association throughout the Province. Classes of instruction have been held in thirty-nine cities, towns and villages in Ontario, and in eleven places for the first time. Five thousand four hundred and twenty-seven took instructions in 239 classes, and 4,175 took examinations for certificates, of which number 4,109 satisfied the examiners. In addition, 71 candidates were awarded Vouchers for their second examination in First Aid to the injured; 65 received Medallion standard and 61 received Label Standing.

Twenty-four nurses were selected for service under an agreement of the National Relief Committee. They are serving in various hospitals in England.

A team in Carleton Place won the Hon. Wallace Nesbitt First Aid Competition. They were given five Ross rifles.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Brig.-Gen. Senator James Mason; Vice-Presidents, Sir Henry M. Pellatt, Mr. W. K. George, Col. W. M. Gratshore, London, Ont.; Chairman of Executive Committee, Col. J. T. Fotheringham; Deputy Chairman, Mr. W. K. George; Honorary Secretary-Treasurer, Dr. Charles J. Copp.

WEDDING BELLS

ABRAHAM—DICKS.

A very pretty wedding took place this afternoon at the Park street Baptist parsonage when Miss Lillie Dicks, eldest daughter of Mr. Herbert Dicks of Kenneth avenue, was united in marriage to Lance Corporal Ernest Abraham, late of the 59th regiment, Brockville, now of the 93rd Peterborough, son of Paymaster Sergeant James Abraham of the 93rd regiment. The bride and groom were unattended.

The newly married couple were the recipients of many useful and costly presents, among them being a beautiful clock from the boys of the 59th Battalion.

OBITUARY

CHAS. H. CROFTS.

The death of Mr. Charles Henry Crofts, aged 62 years, 1 month and 17 days, took place at the family residence, Minden township, early Monday morning, after an illness of comparatively short duration.

Mr. Crofts moved from Peterborough to his late residence some thirty-five years ago, but still retained his position as storekeeper of the Midland Railway for a number of years. He afterwards held the same position for the Erie and Huron Railway, until it was merged with other roads. Since then he has lived a quiet, retired life at Ingoldsby, where his family has constantly resided since first moving to Minden township. He was honoured by a position in the county council for several years, but chose later to take no such part in public matters.

He had been ailing for some time and was not noticeably weaker during the winter, but did not take to his bed at any time.

He is survived by a sorrowing wife, two sons and three daughters. The sons are Geo. Alfred of Lochlin, and Fred, who is with the Princess Patricia Light Infantry in France. The daughters are Mrs. N. Ball, of Donald; Mrs. W. B. Oberfelt, of Thessalon, and Miss Florence at home.

The funeral took place to Ingoldsby cemetery on Wednesday, in charge of Rev. T. A. Carmichael.—Minden Echo.

GERMAN STUDENTS AND THE WAR

The fact that more than 81 per cent. of the 68,000 native male students in the universities and colleges of Germany are now in the military service, in comparison with 28 per cent. of the 13,765 students at the time of the Franco-Prussian war, is regarded by the Frankfurter Zeitung as a striking proof of the physical development of the German people since the days of 1870. In its issue of Dec. 8, the newspaper gives the following data on the army service of the college youths:

"In the Summer of 1914 there were 79,077 students, among whom were some 4,500 women and 9,000 foreigners, in the fifty-two universities and colleges of the German Empire. In the Summer of 1915 the number of students enrolled in the forty-seven colleges fell off 64,700. At the end of the Summer of 1915 it was found that of the 66,000 native male German students only about 12,000 were in their colleges, so that the number in the military service was 54,000, or 81.81 per cent. of the total.

"Of the 62,000 male German university students, but 10,000 were present, leaving 42,000, or 77.7 per cent. in the army. Of the 9,6000 students of technology 87.5 per cent. were in the military service. The percentage of those in the army in the other divisions was as follows: Veterinaries 92.8, agricultural students 87.5, students of mining 90.1, commercial students 72.3.

In the case of the students of forest practically all of them were in army, as the schools were closed the beginning of the war.

"These figures can only lay cla to comparatively accuracy, as, a from the variations due to the to arms, not all the colleges are in dition to give exact data on number of their students at the fro and, in fact, there are many studen about 6,000 to 8,000 in the serv who at present are not matricula with any college."

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 10—A RISK or SURE THING—Which?

Here are two cases, very appropriate at the present time, as many householders know. A total stranger, probably a German or other foreigner, calls at your house, and offers eyeglasses for sale. He makes them sound cheap perhaps, and you risk injury to your eyes by buying and wearing glasses that are not correctly fitted to your requirements.

The other way is, when you notice the least eye trouble, you go to Dr. Fowler and have a proper scientific test made of the eyes. He supplies what he knows is a correct lens for just the weakness you may have in your vision, and you wear what, you are taking no risk in connection with whatever.

In this case you have an absolute guarantee from the oldest continuous optical business in Peterboro, and can see Dr. Fowler at any time. Can you afford to risk of the Fakirs' hap-hazard service? It will be Fowler's eventually, better come there first.

before a trench, and then bombed and bayonetted its way down the trench. The enemy was in considerable force, but offered little resistance. About twenty were killed and a machine gun and its emplacement destroyed by our bombers. Our party returned bringing with them a German lieutenant, a sergeant and a private. Lieut. Wilmot and two men were slightly wounded. Another party under Captains McIntyre and Taylor, spent eight minutes in a crowded German trench killing or wounding about thirty of the enemy, and putting a machine gun out of action and taking three prisoners. All of whom, however, were killed by bombs from their own side. Captain Taylor was wounded in the leg by the explosion of a bomb, but subsequently killed five of the enemy with his revolver and stunned another with the empty weapon. He then seized a bayonet and killed another man. In the meantime he received altogether eight wounds, but was able to walk back to his own lines. Our other casualties were one man killed, two died of wounds, and three slightly wounded. A patrol party under Lieut. Owen engaged a patrol of fifteen Germans and immediately engaged them in a fight with revolvers and bombs. Four of the enemy fell. When all our supply of bombs were exhausted Lieut. Owen ordered them to retire saying: "I will be coming right after you," and remained firing his revolver to cover their retreat. A search party was sent out for him and found that the Germans had retired leaving their wounded. Owen was lying on the ground shot through the head and died shortly after being brought into our trenches, leaving the memory of being one of the boldest employed in this dangerous work in "no man's land."

NEUTRALITY ALL SPAIN DESIRES

PARIS, Feb. 7.—"Spain wishes above all things to remain neutral," said Conde Romanones, the Spanish Premier, in an interview accorded to Andre Mevil, a noted French writer. "That is the unanimous sentiment of the country irrespective of party, and discussions therefore among Spaniards who may hold divergent views regarding the war are of a purely theoretical interest. All of us here suffer at least morally from this great war.

"This government had no hesitation," Conde Romanones is further quoted as saying, "in asking the King to sign a decree indefinitely postponing the centenary celebrations in honor of Cervantes. These celebrations would be international in character, since the genius of Cervantes belongs to the entire world, and it would be obviously impossible to think of celebrating while the great European nations are at war. We in Spain hope that the Cervantes festival will be the first to be held after the war is over."

Bulgarian and Turkish Troops Moving Toward The Roumanian Border

To Meet the Concentration of Roumanian Troops Against the Bulgarian Frontier---Report That Central Powers Have Demanded Partial Demobilization of Roumanian Army.

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 7.—Bulgarian and Turkish troops are moving toward the Rumanian border to meet the concentration of Rumanian troops against the Bulgarian frontier, according to Milan despatches received here to-day.

From another source came reports that the Central Powers have demanded a partial demobilization of the Rumanian army and a pledge of benevolent neutrality toward Austro-Germans and Bulgars. These demands, it was stated, have been ignored by the Rumanian Government.

WILL UNITED STATES COMPROMISE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Whether this Government shall compromise to meet German compromises in the Lusitania case, was to be decided today at the White House conference between President Wilson and Secretary Lansing.

Germany, according to intimation from her representatives here, has conceded several points. This appeared to be a big factor in to-day's conference.

Secretary Lansing, in response to direct questions, has declared "the American attitude regarding the Lusitania sinking remains unchanged" from that taken when the United States, in a formal note, called the act illegal and demanded disavowal.

At the White House the same thing has been said insistently.

WITH THE STARS

Mr. W. E. Harper, B.A., of Ottawa, to Visit Peterboro'

Mr. W. A. Harper, B.A., of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, is to lecture on the subject, "Nebulae" on Thursday evening, Feb 10, in St. Paul's Sunday School room.

Many of the large observatories are at present devoting considerable time to the study of the filmy sheets and balls of cloudy material among the stars known as nebulae; seeking to give them the proper place in the universe.

Mr. Harper will tell in simple language what is known of the wonderful objects, with particular reference to discoveries of the past few years. A number of lantern slides of nebulae will be shown, made recently from the best photographs obtained with the 60 inch reflector at Mount Wilson.

The lecture will be given in the St. Paul's Sunday School room on Thursday, Feb. 10th. Admission free. No collection.

"That officer there in the uniform," she said, "was the great great grandfather of the present owner of the property. He was a brave as a lion, but one of the most unfortunate of men. He never fought in a battle in which he did not have a leg or arm carried away."

Then she added proudly

"He took part in twenty-four engagements."

Fifteen Thousand German Troops Have Been Driven Into Spanish Guiana

Have Been Interned There---An Indication That Franco-British Campaign in the Cameroons Has Reached a Successful Conclusion

MADRID, Spain, Feb. 7.—Fifteen thousand German troops, including fourteen thousand colonials, have been driven into Spanish Guiana and interned. This indicates that the Franco-British campaign in the Cameroons has reached a successful conclusion.

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 7.—German artillery is very active on the British front. Considerable fighting took place in the neighbourhood of LaBassee. Hostile aircraft shelled Ypres.

PETROGRAD, Russia, Feb. 7.—Russian troops in the Caucasus are still pressing Turks hard at all points. Troops in Persia continue to advance.

PARIS (Official), Feb. 7.—German trenches in Champagne were subjected to a terrific fire from the French artillery Saturday. A German aeroplane was brought down in flames by a French machine.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—An attempted British advance southwest of Neuville was repulsed says the War Office.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Special guards have been assigned too all underground elevated and steam railways. The police refused to discuss the matter, but it is believed warnings have been received of attempts to dynamite railways.

Rome, Feb. 7.—The Rumanian Government has announced its intention of floating a forty million dollar foreign loan immediately, presumably for war purposes.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Four hundred were killed and 500 were wounded when French aviators bombed the Bulgarians near the Greek border.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—The Dominion Secret Police have been sent to work on the two latest mystery fires in factories at Hespeler and Ottawa.

THE CALL OF THE BLOOD.

'Tis not the breath of a braggart boast—
O you of the slower speech!
'Tis something hewn from the channel coast,
And bred from the bones of Harold's host,
Where the Norman bought the beach!

'Tis not for the sake of jests or jeers
O you of the calmer mind!
'Tis a memory of Saxon spears,
Of Agincourt, and the younger years
Of Drake, and the "Golden Hynde!"

'Tis not in hot nor in hasty thought—
O you of the safer stand!
'Tis but a voice by a vision brought,
From braver days, when my fathers fought,
Afar, for the Motherland!

'Tis not just a vain or careless vaunt
O you of the wiser years!
'Tis the blood of speech, and the Teuton taunt,
And the broken brotherhood, which haunt!
For my tithe is only tears!

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

"An' phwat is your Patsy doin' these days, Mrs. O'Hagan?"

"Ah, he's doin' foine! He's a conductor in the opery-house, and wears a swallytail coat."

"A conductor is it? An' phwat does a conductor do?"

"Sure, he conducts the people to their seats."

The Health Alarm

often sounds first in the doctor's office when some healthy looking specimen of humanity, undergoing examination for life insurance, is told that his blood pressure is too high.

Increased blood pressure is no longer confined to old age; it is frequently found in men in their 40's who are otherwise healthy. In such cases it points to approaching degeneration of the arteries—a condition which in turn indicates those errors of diet that often end in various diseases of the stomach, kidneys, liver, nerves and heart.

Among these errors of diet are tea and coffee drinking, because of their drug caffeine, the constant use of which weakens the walls of the arteries. Medical authorities now insist that in all cases of high blood pressure there must be total abstinance from tea, coffee and other harmful beverages.

Hard to give up tea and coffee? Not at all, when one uses instead the pure-food drink—

Cattle Have Wintered Well

Stock Had Ample Supplies of Feed —Board of Trade Report

D. C. Coleman, assistant general manager of the Western lines, Canadian Pacific Railway, wires that sensational statements of injury to live stock in Alberta by weather conditions are not borne out by trustworthy reports. Board of Trade, Lethbridge, wires as follows: "After consulting Fairfield Experimental Farm and several experienced persons, we reply, sensational reports are somewhat exaggerated. Cattle and sheep went into winter in best possible condition. Farm cattle have abundance of food, and ordinarily well managed, will not suffer. All careful cattle and sheep rangers had ample supplies of feed hay. January weather, this year, continued cold throughout, and under old, crude conditions, range cattle would have suffered severely, but careful management now given, will show but slight losses at the end of the season. Unless continuous severe weather prevails again southern sheep men intended to meet here yesterday, but are dividing attention to their herds. All the large herds of sheep near Lethbridge are in good condition. The cattle at the Experimental Farm, Lethbridge, fed in corrals, with open straw shed shelter, are gaining two pounds daily."

BEAR SHOT NEAR NOGIE'S CREEK

On Monday of last week, Mr. Wilbert Mellmoyle of Nogie's Creek, shot a bear while at Rose Lake cutting timber. The dogs had been running bruin for some time and finally when about 50 feet away from where Wilbert was standing he turned on them. Mr. Mellmoyle killed him with his shotgun. A few grains entered his jugular vein, which did the trick. He was judged to be about two years old. The carcass was sold to a Peterboro butcher.

SUBMARINE BORE TWO FLAGS, IS THE ADMIRALTY VIEW

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The following British official statement was issued to-day:

"The master of the Harrison line steamship Commodore, sunk by an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean on December 2, interviewed by the naval authorities, states:

"'The ship was fired on without any colours being shown by the submarine, and after the ship was abandoned the submarine approached the boats with two flags rolled up at the flagstaff and inquired if the ship was British. Being answered in the affirmative, they unrolled one of the flags, which was the German ensign.

"From this account it is likely that the submarine kept German and Austrian flags bent on, ready to fly either according to the nationality of the ship attacked."

Austrians Take Ship That Was German Owned

BERLIN, by wireless to Sayville, L. I., Feb. 7.—It developed to-day that the Koenig Albert, formerly of the North German Lloyd line, flying the Italian flag, whose capture by an Austrian submarine and destroyer in the Adriatic was reported yesterday had gone to San Giovanni di Medua to take on board the three hundred Serbian refugees who later were captured with her.

The Koenig Albert was discovered in the harbor of San Giovanni de Medua by an Austrian hydroplane, and when she came outside the harbour she was held up and captured by the submarine, which called a destroyer to its aid in taking the ship into the Bay of Cattaro.

DIGGING UP FOSSILS

MONTREAL, Q., Feb. 4.—The first immigrants into Western Canada came three million or more years ago and their bones are being systematically dug out by archaeologists working for the New York museum. These bones are found in large numbers along the banks of the Red Deer river, which has scenery, reproducing on a small scale, the grand canyon of Arizona. Among the recent shipments from this district were a nearly perfect fossil tree, two gigantic dinosaurs and other valuable specimens of the prehistoric ages.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her Rival

By OSCAR COX

Mrs. Ver Beck was sitting in her boudoir sewing when there was a ring at the doorbell, and a few moments later a maid handed her a telegram addressed to her husband with the book for signatures. Having signed and the maid departed, Mrs. Ver Beck began to look at the envelope curiously, holding it up to the light as though she might read what was inside. All this was merely doing something to while away the time while she was resisting a temptation to read the telegram, to which she finally yielded.

Before acting it occurred to her to gratify her curiosity without her husband knowing it. She warmed the little gum with which the envelope was sealed and drew forth the message.

The look on her face as she read it would have sent a cold chill through the bones of any husband, however brave. The corners of her mouth were drawn down, and her lips were set tight together. This was what she read:

"You can't woo the widow this week. Come Thursday, the 15th. She's a fine dandy.

The message was signed with the initials of Mr. Ver Beck's most intimate friend, of whose influence over her husband the wife was distrustful—a clubman, a man about town, a man with the reputation of being rapid.

"Thursday, the 15th," she said to herself. "I'm glad he gave the date. We shall see about this."

Replacing the telegram in the envelope and pressing down the flap, she took it downstairs and left it in the salver for mail on a table in the hall. Then she returned to her boudoir and, like Mrs. O'Shanter, spent the rest of the afternoon "nursing her wrath to keep it warm." But shortly before dinner, realizing that it was necessary to her plan that she should dispemble, she dressed with her usual care and by the time her husband came home had steeled herself to receive him as usual. She heard him pause in the hall while he read the telegram; then he came up and gave her the customary marital kiss.

"Anything new downtown?" she asked carelessly.

"No, nothing special. The market is better today. Have you anything on hand for next Thursday night?"

"It's coming," mused the lady. "I thought so."

"Yes," she replied. "I've promised Kit I'll go over and keep her company. She'll be alone."

"Oh, I'm sorry. I was going to propose that we go into the city, dine and go to the theater."

"The wretch!" said Mrs. Ver Beck mentally. "He was not going to propose any such thing. He asked the question to find out whether he would be able to get rid of me. I'll fix him. If he sees his widow he'll have to take me along with him.

"I'm sorry," she said aloud, "but I promised Kit I wouldn't disappoint her. We'll have to go to the city some other night."

Mrs. Ver Beck was standing at her dresser putting on finishing touches. Forgetting that her husband was behind her and a mirror before her, though she spoke the words indifferently, she expressed her feelings in her countenance. Her husband saw and wondered. Something had evidently gone wrong. But he had learned when things had gone wrong with his wife to let her alone till the storm had blown over. So he arose from the chair, went downstairs and read the evening newspaper till dinner was served.

The next Thursday morning before going to business Mr. Ver Beck asked:

"My dear, are you going to Kit's tonight?"

"I am."

"Then I think I'll remain in the city."

"Do so by all means. It will be very dull for you here alone."

So Mr. Ver Beck remained in the city, little dreaming that he was a mouse on whom the cat was to pounce. His wife knew that when in town he dined at his club, and wherever he went he would go from there. Fortunately for her there was a little restaurant opposite the clubhouse, and there she went for dinner, sitting at a table close by a window. She made a frugal meal—not having any appetite—and spent half an hour after she had finished waiting. Then she saw her husband come out to the club stoop, stand a moment—looking bored, she thought—then stroll slowly down the street. Leaving the restaurant, she followed him. He went to the theater district.

Mr. Ver Beck turned in at one of the theaters. His wife, keeping far enough behind to permit him to get in, followed and asked for a single seat. The clerk gave her an excellent one that had just been returned. Mrs. Ver Beck drew down her veil and entered. She would watch her husband and the widow unrevealed. When shown to her seat she was thunderstruck to find it next her husband. He looked at her curiously, but did not at first recognize her through her veil.

Then suddenly she saw the name of the play on her program—"The Merry Widow." A light broke in on her.

"Jim!"

"Ballie!"

"I thought I'd surprise you," she said.

But it is questionable if he believed her, though he pretended to do so.

Honored.

Clayborn, an old negro coachman of a southern physician, was talking to another negro one day about the price of a ticket to Jacksonville. "Ah don't know nothin' 'bout tickets," said Clayborn. "My boss never has no tickets for his travelin'." "Is dat so?" asked his friend. "Why don't he have no tickets?" "'Cause de railroad is jes' proud ter tote him!" exclaimed the loyal Clayborn.

Coal Enough For Thousands of Years.

The results of the investigation of the world's coal resources by the international geological congress show that there is a reserve of unmined coal estimated at 7,393,681,000,000 tons, of which two-thirds are situated in North America between the Rocky mountains and the Appalachians. As the present annual consumption is about 1,300,000,000 tons, there is enough coal in sight to last nearly 6,000 years at the present rate of consumption, and it must be remembered that South America and Africa are still largely unexplored.

A Hibernating Fish.

A remarkable fish known as Protopterus annectens is found throughout the whole of tropical Africa, but is most common near the West Coast, where it sometimes attains a length of six feet. During the dry season, when many of the ponds dry up, the fish descends some distance into the mud and forms a rounded hollow for a nest, which is lined by a capsule of hardened mucus secreted by the glands of the skin. It hibernates thus for nearly six months, drawing its sustenance from the tissues of its own body while it is active.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WELL-KNOWN ONTARIO WOMAN SPEAKS.

Welland, Ont.—"I am most pleased to say that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved itself a first-class remedy. I was run-down, weak and played out, and needed a woman's tonic. I have just finished using one bottle. I feel much stronger and better. Can eat better and am less nervous. You may say that 'Favorite Prescription' is just the medicine for tired-out, worn-out women. It does wonders for them."—Mrs. GEO. FLANIGAN, E. Main and State Sts., Welland, Ont.

THIS PRESCRIPTION IS FOR YOU.

If you suffer from hot flashes or dizziness, fainting spells, hysteria, headache, or nervousness you are not beyond relief.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is directed to the real cause and promptly removes the disease, and thereby brings comfort in the place of prolonged misery.

It has been sold by druggists for nearly 30 years, in liquid form, at $1.00 per bottle, giving general satisfaction. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form. Sold by all medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.

Every sick woman may consult us by letter, absolutely without charge.

Write without fear or without fee, to Faculty of the Invalids' Hotel, Dr. V. M. Pierce, President, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

WOMEN LACK OPINIONS, SAYS INVESTIGATOR

"Girls," said Mrs. Greene, in that nice, friendly way a lot of middle-aged women have when they are collected for a jollification and no one is about to remind them that school days and school ways are gone forever; "Girls, I got to thinking to-day that precious few of us really have any distinct opinions. And I believe—here's my opinion, anyhow—that it is up to each of us to have lots of them. Not some one else's handed over to us in a neat unopened package, but something we've really thought out and are ready to stand up and die for, if necessary.

"Mercy! Opinions! I should say we were crammed full of them," exclaimed Mrs. Wright, the senior of the group.

"Then I'll begin with you," retorted Mrs. Greene, "and you just watch out. What is your opinion on divorce?"

Mrs. Wright looked a bit flustered but she came back gamely.

"Of course, I don't really believe in divorce; I think it's awful. But there are cases—poor little Gertie Rich, and that terrible husband of hers, for instance. I think divorce there is required. But divorce in general——" She stopped, and looked at us somewhat bewilderedly.

"You've never thought it out," said Mrs. Greene, triumphantly. "You don't know whether you'd favor a uniform divorce law, for instance. You don't know what grounds you think divorce should be allowed on. You haven't any definite opinion on the matter, you see!" She turned to Miss Bentley, who is secretary to a big insurance official. "Now, you're a business woman Elsa. What do you think should be done in regard to the minimum wage? Should there be such a law? And what ought the wage to be? And will it do what it is intended to do? And if not, what would have to be put in its place?"

"But, look here, you and your opinions," disputed another of the circle. "What about holding wrong ones? What good would that do?

"Yes," we cried in triumph, "how about those wrong opinions some of us are sure to 'stand up and die for?'"

"Never mind how wrong your opinion is, if it's only carefully thought out and sincere," returned Mrs. Greene, with unbroken calm. "I don't believe a wrong opinion, if it's not simply a pig-headed statement made without any clear recognition of the circumstances, does harm. It's the not having any that's hopeless. I tell you what, girls, we women are getting to be world people these days, and we should begin to take up our responsibilities. Now, there's the drink question—another huge affair. We ought to have some definite and workable opinion on that, not just a blind opposition or a careless acceptance."

"You're right," said Elsa: "For instance, there's child training. Most of us take it out in sending our young ones to the public schools and letting a small group do all the planning and fussing over questions of education. I have some very strong convictions on the subject myself. But what have I ever done to make my convictions work for themselves? Nothing at all. Just sat back and felt them. I haven't even formed them into a good talkable opinion all done up in nice words that each one of you could understand and argue over. Yet where's the value of the best of all possible convictions unless it comes out full-fledged, or at least able to cheep a bit?"

"Told you so," chuckled Mrs. Greene. "As a class, my dears, we haven't any opinions. And it's time we had. Just take up the first thing that interests you and settle down to thrash it out until you know, and can say what you think of it. And if it doesn't turn out valuable for the world, it will for you, anyhow."—By Hildegarde Hawthorne.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

SWAGGER CANE IS PART OF TOMMY'S UNIFORM

The army swagger cane has attained to a new importance since the war. Even civilians carry them, upon occasion; hoping, perhaps, to be mistaken for soldiers in mufti. Therein they err, Tommy, when in mufti, does not sport a swagger cane; which is in effect a part and parcel of his uniform outfit, and which is discarded when it is discarded. The swagger, in its present form at all events, is a comparatively modern innovation. True, soldiers have affected a short cane when "walking out" almost from time immemorial. But whereas in the old days, such canes were of all sorts and sizes, according to the whim of the carrier, they are now of a uniform pattern for the whole British army; though differing in detail for each branch of the service, and also as regards most regiments.

Riflemen, for instance, carry a black ebony cane with a silver top. Ordinary line corps affect a kind of malacca, also with a silver top, on which is engraved the regimental crest or badge. The artillery sport a thangee or Japanese cane; and so on.

All these various swaggers are practically of one size, measuring in length from the armpit to the tips of the fingers of an ordinary average bit Tommy; while their girth is about equal to that of a substantial fountain pen. The canes are not cheap and the soldiers has to pay for them out of his own pocket. Consequently, in order to minimize the risk of loss, he usually has his regimental number stamped on the rim of the metal top. This is done by the armorer-sergeant, to whom, in most regiments, is allotted the monopoly of the sale of the canes. Needless to say, he makes a good thing out of it. In most battalions, in time of peace, "stick parade," otherwise saluting drill, is held once a month. The men march in sections of fours past the adjutant, saluting with the right hand as they go by, and bringing the cane to the left shoulder, upright, and parallel with the body, knob uppermost.

This enables the adjutant to spot damaged or dented knobs, canes minus tops altogether, or otherwise unserviceable. A visit to the armorer's shop, and a new cane, is the inevitable sequel. In conclusion, it may be mentioned that Tommy never speaks of a "swagger" cane. He calls it a "square-pushing" cane. Why, nobody seems to know.

To Make 11,000,000 Tires.

According to the manufacturing plans of the 20 large rubber tire companies in the United States, their output during the present calendar year will exceed 11,000,000 tires of an average value of $30 at retail.

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the label and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOW'S ITS DONE.

Glenn H. Curtis, at a dinner in New York, was congratulated on the war success of his huge biplane, the "American," wherewith the English have sunk three German submarines.

"The English were at first averse to biplanes so huge as the 'America,'" he said, "but they realize now the advantage of a flyer that can carry 1,000 pounds of high explosive.

"Anybody who objects to the big 'American' type is just about as well versed in aeronautics as the cockney.

"His girl asked the cockney:

"'Wot makes 'em go up?'

"'Why, the blinkin' hengine, yo silly kid.'

"'Well, ain't automobiles got engines?'

"'Course they 'as, but they ain't got no wings, 'as they?'

"'Ow! Then it's the wings as makes 'em go up, ain't it?'

"'Partly. It's like this. They runs along the ground a bit, an' the wind hits under the wings, and hup they go! See?'

"'Wunderful, ain't it?'

"'Just ahaht.'

"'An' 'ow do they come dahn, then, Alf?'

"'Why stop the hengin, o' course.'

"'But 'ow can they get the wind aht from under the wings?'

"'Well—f'r instance—well, 'ow does a bird do it?'

"'I dnano.'

"'You seen a bird, I s'pose, ain't yer?'

"'Rapz.'

"'An' yo seen a bird come dahn?'

"'Oh, yes. I seen that!'

"'Well, then, don't arst such silly questchuns!'"

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lotell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. It has certainly entirely ousted all other cures like by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

TRIBULATION'S DESIGNED EFFECT

Time Has Come for the Setting Up of the Kingdom.

Subject of the Kingdom Very Prominent in Scripture—Ransom and Kingdom Its Two Most Prominent Doctrines—Most Momentous Period of World's History Now Present — Men's Hearts Alienated From God—Time of Trouble Necessary for Awakening Mankind to Their Need—Church's Tribulation of Different Nature and Purpose.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

New York City, Feb. 6.—Pastor Russell gave a characteristic discourse here to-night at the New York City Temple, W. 83rd street and Broadway. His text was, "We must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." (Acts 14:22.) He said in part:

God gave the kingdom of earth originally to Father Adam, and put everything in subjection to Him. But Adam lost his dominion through sin. Then God imposed upon him the death penalty, which was shared through heredity by all his posterity. Jehovah God, foreknowing man's fall from his holy estate, had provided beforehand for his recovery. In due time, more than four thousand years after the pronouncement of the death sentence, Jesus came to earth to give a Ransom-price whereby man might be restored to Divine favor and have an opportunity to gain life eternal. Our Lord's death was the turning-point of the world's history. —1 Corinthians 15: 21, 22.

Abraham's natural seed, the Jews, were expecting all that God had promised in respect to His favors and the Messianic Kingdom. But there was another feature of God's Plan which they did not see. This was the selection of a Church to be Abraham's Spiritual Seed, through whom all the families of the earth were to be blessed. To-day we are entering upon the seventh thousand years since man's creation and fall—man's great Sabbatic Year. The Church is almost completed. The time for the setting up of the Kingdom has come.

Ever since man lost his kingdom its restoration has been more or less vaguely expected. At the time of the fall God declared that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. All the blessings implied in this statement looked forward to the Messianic Kingdom, through which man's first dominion was to be restored. Now this Kingdom is just at hand. Therefore we are living to-day in the most important period of the world's history. As the poet has said:

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an Age on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

These words seem almost prophetic of the glorious time to come, and these glories are about to burst upon the world. But the world will enter into that Kingdom through much tribulation. Mankind are not ready to appreciate their needs, their impotency. They have been thinking that they could do almost anything. Leading minds have thought that they could heal the world, could properly govern and bless it. But now it is gradually dawning upon the people that these hopes and plans are abortive. Now we see their schemes going to pieces. The theories and projects of those Christian people who a short time ago assured us that soon they would convert the world are being scattered like chaff before the wind.

The Time of Trouble Necessary.

These nations which have claimed to be Christian, to be Christ's Kingdom—"Christendom"—are demonstrating that they have not understood the real Kingdom at all. Instead of being Christ's Kingdom of blessing and peace, they have proven to be kingdoms of bloodshed, kingdoms of this world. God will bring in His Kingdom through great tribulation, as foretold by the Prophet Daniel and the Lord Jesus Christ. (Daniel 12:1; Matthew 24:21.) This tribulation has already begun. We can hardly imagine anything worse, but present distresses are only "the beginning of sorrows." Darker and darker will grow the times until mens hearts shall utterly fail them. All their cherished hopes and plans will be overthrown by the mighty whirlwind of trouble. Then earth's rightful King will take control and bring order out of confusion. Upon the ruins of human institutions, plans, and shattered hopes men shall see arise a glorious new arrangement which shall be "the desire of all nations."

Men's hearts are already failing them through fear of the things which they see coming upon the earth. (Luke 21: 25-28.) This is because they are entering into the coming Kingdom through much tribulation. God cannot introduce His Kingdom through peace and blessing. Men have no ears to hear His Word. They are too busy looking after their own projects and affairs, too busy making money. They care not for God, do not appreciate Him. Consequently they require a catastrophe to awaken them. The coming great tribulation will do this most thoroughly. The ears that now hear only the jingle of money will then open to hear something much more important. Men will begin to cry unto the Lord, as upon the Sea of Galilee the disciples cried unto Jesus. Then He arose and rebuked the wind and the waves; and immediately there was a great calm.—Matthew 8: 23-27; Psalm 46.

The Real Thought of the Text.

An examination of our context reveals the fact that the Apostle is referring, not to the trouble upon the world, but to that upon the Church. Living at the beginning of the Gospel Age, he was telling the Church of the tribulations necessary to fit them for the positions in the Kingdom to which God has called them. So surely as we are God's children we shall have tribulation. At first our painful experiences are not seen to be a blessing; but after a while we come to see that adversity drives us nearer to God and gradually develops strength of character.

The Church will not share the world's tribulation. Those who are called and chosen and faithful will be accounted worthy to escape those things coming upon the world. Luke 21:36.) The tribulation of the Church will be different from that of the world. Our Lord Jesus suffered tribulation. That of the Church will be similar to His. Messiah's entrance into the Kingdom is different from the way in which the world will enter. Jesus enters as King; and the Church is invited to share with Him in His Kingdom, as joint-heirs, under His Headship. The world will enter into the Kingdom as subjects of the King.

God's Harp of Many Strings.

We are beginning to see reasons for every feature in the Divine Plan. The Church is called to wonderful glory and honor. In Revelation 14: 1-3 we read of a song which no one could learn to sing except the hundred and forty-four thousand who will, with their Lord and Head, constitute the Church in glory. This song is a Message. We who have learned it are singing it in all the affairs of our lives. The world does not understand this song; neither does the Church nominal, nor do the babes in Christ. A Christian must get beyond the infantile state before he can sing this new song.

Not all Christians have the ability to sing this song. Some can sing it more appreciatively than can others. The whole Divine testimony, whether communicated by the Law, the Prophets, our Lord or His Apostles, is in harmony; and this fact is the proof of their Divine inspiration. The Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments constitute what the Lord Himself calls "the Harp of God." When tuned by the Holy Spirit dwelling in our hearts, and swept by the fingers of devoted searchers after Divine Truth, that Harp yields the most entrancing melodies that ever fell on mortal ears.

Once some of us harped about civic righteousness, prohibition, female suffrage, etc. But now we have something far grander. We have the most important subject in all the world. We are harping about the Divine Plan of Salvation. We have the Message of God, the Glad Tidings which yet shall be to all people. We are ambassadors for the Lord. He has accepted us in Christ, and has authorized us to tell His message to all who will hear—to tell them that God will receive into His favor those who come to Him through the Saviour, through faith in the precious blood of Christ.

But when we come to discuss some of the deep things of God we sing, as it were, a new song. It is not really new, however; for it was sung in the days of the Apostles. But it has long been forgotten, so that it is practically new to-day. All of the people of God are privileged to sing this song. Some learn it more quickly than others. It is "the song of Moses and the Lamb."—Revelation 15: 3, 4.

When we come to see how great is God's Plan, formed before the foundation of the world—that Jesus should be the Lamb of God, that would take away the sin of the world, that in due time God would select a Bride for His Son; that afterwards He would establish the glorious Messianic Kingdom for a thousand years, in order that every member of Adam's race might have an opportunity to hear of God's love in Christ and be saved; and that eventually all the wilfully wicked would be destroyed—we are indeed ready to say, "How wonderful are Thy works, O Lord! Who shall not come and worship Thee!"

Preparation for Future Exaltation.

It is to this class who can sing "the song of Moses and the Lamb," those who have given their hearts to the Lord, who have been accepted by the Father, and who have become the children of God through spirit-begetting—it is to this class that our text applies. How reasonable is the thought that we should enter the Kingdom through much tribulation. If the Master needed tribulation in order to be perfected as a Son, to demonstrate His love and loyalty to the Father's will, how could we expect to be treated differently? How otherwise could the Heavenly Father recognize us as His children?

Perhaps we once wondered why the Lord permitted such trials and tribulations to come upon the righteous, while the wicked often had a comparatively easy time. Now we see why this is. God has invited these righteous ones to become kings and priests, to reign over the earth during the next Age; and in order to qualify for this great work this class must reach a certain condition of mind and heart, a certain development of character. Unless they learn their lessons they will not be prepared for their future high station. Every one exalted to reign in the Kingdom of God will be qualified for his place; otherwise he will not be there. No one will be appointed through favoritism or partisanship. Each individual must thoroughly demonstrate his fitness.

No trial can overtake us that is not subject to the Lord's control. He will make all things work together for good to those who love Him. If we would be of the Church of glory we must become like our Lord, who loved righteousness and hated iniquity. We must be thoroughly honest. We cannot do as do others, for the reason that we are following a different course. We have entered into a Covenant with God, not only to love God with all our soul and to keep the Golden Rule, but to do more. In order to be merely just we are bound to love God and keep the Golden Rule. Jesus did all this and more. He loved His neighbor far beyond what He would have His neighbor do for Him. His love led Him to die for others. We are privileged to do likewise.

We must live up to the Golden Rule. Above all things we should learn to appreciate and practise the Golden Rule; for it is a fundamental principle in God's requirements. The Heavenly Father must have the first place in our hearts. God must be first. We must intend to love our neighbors as ourselves, although we may not always be able to do so. While we may not be able to do all that we would, yet the longing to do so must ever be in our hearts. And it is this honest will that brings us into conflict, necessarily, with those of a contrary will.

Thus we see whence this tribulation comes to the Lord's people. In the case of Jesus, His name was cast out as evil, because He was true, because He was honest, because He would not join with the scribes and Pharisees, because He was wholly loyal to the Lord. And "the disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. If they have called the Master of the House Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of His Household?"—Matthew 10:24-26.

Stones for the Spiritual Temple.

Throughout the Gospel Age God's people have been prepared for the Kingdom "through much tribulation." St. Peter speaks of them as "living stones" for the great spiritual Temple. Of that glorious Structure Jesus is the Chief Corner Stone. He has already been chiseled, polished, and taken His position. The last members of the Church are now being chiseled and polished for whatever place they shall occupy in His glorious Temple. For more than eighteen hundred years the work of preparing the "living stones" has been in progress. Their tribulations have been preparing them for their position in the Temple structure.

But if under the Lord's chisel or hammer anyone should fail in obedience, in submission, in loyalty, in learning his lesson, he might become unfit for the place to which he had been invited, and thus become what St. Paul calls "a castaway." (1 Corinthians 9:27.) He might serve some other purpose in the future, but he would not be fit for the place for which he was originally intended.

We should submit ourselves fully to God. We are to be "His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Ephesians 2:10.) It is God who is working in us both to will and to do. When first we gave our hearts to Him, He was working in us to will. After the spirit-begetting that followed our consecration to Him, our minds began to expand. We began to grow in grace and in knowledge. Then we began to see and appreciate our privilege of serving the Lord. Thus God's grace worked in us to do.

God does not accept works as a ground of justification, however. We are justified because of our faith in the Ransom-price provided by our Lord Jesus. Until we became children of God we had neither opportunity nor ability to do any work that God would accept. Now that we are related to Him as children, He is working in us. But we have hardly begun our good works as yet. They are to be carried forward throughout the Millennial Age, and on into the eternal future.

Our Father's Tender Care.

But now we are not able to do much. Our main work now is to show God by our endeavors what we would like to do. We may make heroic efforts; we may do our very best in the Lord's service; but after all there is little that we can do, and that little is done very imperfectly. Our work is acceptable to God because of the honest, earnest, loving effort which He sees; for it represents our heart's sincere desire to do His will. When we first come to God, we have not learned to do things in a wise way; and we are often like a child carrying a pail of water and spilling more than he carries home. God lets us have these experiences, that we may learn wisdom by our mistakes. Meantime, He accepts the will that prompts our act, imperfect though it be.

We are not, therefore, to become discouraged because of our mistakes and imperfections. As we seek to serve our Heavenly Father, He is very tender and merciful to us. Let us take everything to Him in prayer, and persevere in the good way. Let us cultivate in our hearts a strong love for everything that is right, that is noble, that is Godlike. We are to love righteousness and hate iniquity—injustice. This rule should apply to all the affairs of life, both great and small. We should always take our stand for what is right.

We cannot enlist our services in works of reform; for the Lord has given us other and still more important work to do, even though we sympathize with every effort toward righteousness. Our main work now is to get ourselves and our fellow-members in the Body of Christ ready for the Kingdom. Then we shall not be ashamed; for we shall have attained to those things to which God has invited us. According to our faith shall be our reward in Heaven—not according to our ability, not according to what we have not. But if we do the best that we can do, then the Master's words will be appropriate to us—the commendation which He gave to Mary when He said, "She hath done what she could." And He will add, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumweacop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Learned From a Sample Nineteen Years Ago

Living eighteen miles from a drug store Mr. Carr found it necessary to keep in the house some treatment to regulate the action of liver, kidneys, and bowels.

To the habit of keeping these important organs active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, when required, he attributes the good health of his large family.

Here, surely, is evidence of the value of these pills as a family medicine to protect the members of the family who use it from the common ills so many of which arises from constipation of the bowels and torpid condition of the liver and kidneys.

Mr. James Carr, Maynooth, Ont., writes: "About 19 years ago I received an envelope containing two of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I was doctoring at the time with two doctors, and as they did me no good I used the Pills, and by the time I had finished one box I was cured of the pain in the back and shoulders.

"We have great confidence in Dr. Chase's Medicines. I have a family of ten children and have never had a doctor in the house for any of them. We live eighteen miles from a drug store and find that these Pills cure nearly all the ordinary ills by regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels. That we are all well and sound I attribute to their use and I have recommended them to hundreds and given away many a box because I believe there is no medicine so good."

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the system of poisons and remove the cause of biliousness, headaches, backache, lumbago, kidney disease and rheumatism. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

THE DECISIVE ELEMENT IN THIS WAR IS SEA POWER

In estimating the possibility of success for the Germans in the present war it is easily possible to overrate the value of their successes on land and to under-rate Great Britain's triumphs on the seas. This fact lends additional importance to an article appearing in the current issue of The Review of Reviews upon "Sea Power the Decisive Element." The writer starts out by saying that this war is, in its main issue, a contest between the Germans and the British. The dispute between the French and the Germans is limited to a single province, Russia and Germany could arrange their differences by bargain, Italy could be bought off by a payment in territory, but it is not any question of relatively minor importance that separates Germany and Britain. On the contrary, Germany has asserted that Britain has deliberately set out to thwart her expansion, to check her natural growth, and that it is only on the ruins of British sea power that she can erect that empire which is necessary to her existence.

Taking the existing situation, it will be recognized that up to the present British sea power has accomplished all that Nelson accomplished for his country and a little more, that is to say, it has established the British supremacy on water beyond question, it has abolished the German commerce from the sea, it has destroyed the German warships and undersea boats that have ventured within reach, it has given to British commerce and to British transport the safe use of the sea. Despite the sensational details of the sinking of a few great liners, it is well to remember that the actual percentage of loss of British shipping from German activities is far smaller than that inflicted by French privateers in the Napoleonic time and never did the British in the earlier wars with the French succeed in paralyzing so completely an enemy commerce as they have now.

Following the earlier precedent, British sea power has made it possible for British expeditions to operate in Europe and outside of it. In Europe British armies have rendered great help in France and contributed to abolish all prospect that the Germans can win a decision in the west. They have permitted the British to undertake a campaign in Gallipoli, which has failed, as did the several campaigns undertaken against Napoleon before the great campaign of Wellington in Spain. In the same way sea power has permitted the concentration of troops at Salonika and in Egypt, thus blocking a Turkish thrust upon Suez.

Outside the European and Mediterranean field sea power has enabled the British to gather up all but one of the German colonies; with French and Japanese help, the remaining colony, too, German East Africa, lies within the grasp of the British whenever they choose to seize it. The Great Britain of Asquith has dealt with Germany as the Britain of the Pitts dealt with France, both of the Monarchy and the Empire. It has abolished German commerce, appropriated German colonies, sealed up German harbours to trade, and it has prevented the Germans from inflicting any material loss upon the British in their own kingdom and from effectively interfering with their trade or their transport.

To-day Britain is giving aid to Russia and to Italy, she is giving military aid to France and she is engaging Germany's Turkish ally. Her troops, her money, her fleet are all available for use wherever German activity calls for allied effort. By no means all of her ventures have been successful, but in the Napoleonic war there were several Gallipolis, notably on the Island of Walcheren and in the case of Sweden. Even the Spanish affair was for long such a failure as almost to lead to its abandonment.

The real obstacle to peace, at the present moment, lies in the fact that Great Britain has so far been the sole nation to profit by the war, and her profits has been absolute. Germany has made conquests on land, she has most of Belgium, a corner of France, much of Russia, and (with her ally) Serbia and Montenegro. But Germany has lost the sea. Not a German ship can put to sea, and Germany cannot return to the ordinary business of life until she can again begin to ship her manufactures by water and draw her raw materials by the same route.

Thus, in effect, Germany has occupied Warsaw, Lille and Belgrade, only to lose Hamburg and Bremen, which are to all intents and purposes in British hands, since they cannot be used by Germany. After 18 months Germany has captured nothing that can give her a basis for bargain with Britain. And what Britain holds makes all of Germany's conquests of little value. She is, as I have said before, in the position of a burglar who has entered a house and collected the silver but cannot get out to dispose of it.

Now, unless Germany can outlast Britain, or find some way to exercise compulsion upon Britain, she must ultimately go to London and ask for peace, because she must ultimately resume her sea commerce, she must ultimately use the oceans. Nothing is more idle than to suppose that there is a market or a future for Germany as a self-contained empire, even if that empire extends from Hamburg to Bagdad. The very character of German industry makes the sea the necessary way of transport, and it is from her trade beyond the frontiers of her allies that she draws the revenue which keeps her great population living in a restricted area.

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

Molly and Minnie were two little girls who had been very carefully brought up. Particularly had they learned that they must never tell a lie—not even a 'white' lie—nor deceive anyone.

One day these small girls met a large cow in a field they were crossing. They were much freightened and stopped, not knowing what to do. Then said Minnie:

But Molly's conscience was wide awake.

"Wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" she objected.

OVERWORKED MINISTER

Tells How Vinol Restored Strength and Vitality.

Peterborough people will realize that we could not publish such letters as the following if they were not genuine and truthful statements of facts. The Rev. Mr. Hughes, Holly Springs, Ark., says:

"I am a Methodist minister, and suffered from broken-down nerves, loss of appetite and sleeplessness. I was weak, my circulation was very poor, and I was not able to do my duty in my Parish as I felt I should. I had tried various remedies but did not seem to get any better. Through Mr. Gathn, of Bearden, Ark., I learned of Vinol, and it built me up. I regained my appetite, can sleep better and do more work."

There is no secret about Vinol, it derives its power to build up the overworked, brokendown, nervous system from the medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers without oil combined with tonic iron and beef peptone.

Anyone in Peterborough who wishes to try Vinol can do so with the understanding that we will return their money if they are not satisfied.

GIVING WIFE A SQUARE DEAL.

In the December American Magazine a contributor to the department on "The Family Money" tells how he and his wife have solved the problem of domestic expenses.

"When my wife and I were first married," he says, "we experienced some difficulty in the handling of my salary. My wife would often want little things, and would hesitate to ask me for the money fearing that I would think them silly. Again, she would need clothes occasionally and would not wish to ask for them, believing that either I could not afford them or would think her extravagant. Often I would see things that I desired, but many times would not buy them because I could not afford to spend a like amount on her.

"So we devised a method of dividing the money. Upon receiving my salary, twice a month, I pay whatever household bills that are on hand—such as rent, coal, groceries, light, etc. The balance I divide, giving half to my wife and retaining the other half myself. Then we each pay half the daily incidental expenses of the house, being very exact, even to the purchase of a yeast cake. Personal expenses, such as clothes, carfares, etc., we can pay from our own half. If we go out for a day's pleasure I pay the bills, and upon our return I figure what I have spent and my wife pays me her half. Thus each of us has half my salary, each pays half the household expenses, and each has half of the balance for his own use."

A SONG OF BRITAIN'S COAST.

Germany's mad dog is on the track.
He's looking at the Union Jack.
Those mad dogs will soon be wiser;
They shall hear the sound of Rule Britannia—
God Save the King.
And they'll soon know we fear no foe,
When they hear our voices ring.

We're all under the same Old Flag;
Brothers in arms are we;
One fleet and one desire—
One King and one Empire.
England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales;
And comrades o'er the sea;
United to fight in a cause that's right,
And we'll conquer Germany.

We're still the Rulers of the Waves;
Britons never shall be slaves;
Our banners flying, enemy's defying
And we'll soon stop this secret spying.
Dreadnoughts and cruisers sweep the ocean,
Keeping foes at bay—
Iron clads and sailor lads,
Are fit and ready for the fray.

Chorus—
We're all under the same Old Flag, etc.

—Dudley.

CHARGES GERMANY IS ROBBING BELGIUM

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Feb. 3.—An article in the Providence Journal says: "That German, after devastating Belgium, is trying to tax the country out of existence is charged by the Belgian government in a statement communicated to the State Department by Emanuel Havenith, Belgian Minister at Washington.

"The statement says that more than a year ago, in December, 1914, the German Governor General in Belgium demanded the Belgians should pay a tax of 40,000,000 francs (about $8,000,000) a month, equivalent to approximately $96,000,000 for one year. The authorities of the nine provinces which constitute Belgium agreed to pay this amount, provided that there should be no more taxes levied and, furthermore, that the German Government should pay cash for any goods requisitioned by the German Army.

"The Belgians have promptly paid the $8,000,000 a month, although Germany has not fulfilled her promise of paying cash for goods requisitioned, the statement continues. On top of this, and in spite of the promise of the German Governor that no additional taxes would be levied, the German Governor General in November, 1915, issued an order demanding from the nine Belgian provinces an additional contribution of 40,000,000 francs ($8,000,000) a month.

"The memorandum which the Belgian Government has communicated to the State Department indicates that this is approximately twenty times the amount of the taxes levied by the nine Belgian Provinces in times of peace and prosperity. This, it is asserted, would be burdensome even in the best of times, but when it is remembered that a large portion of Belgium has been laid waste by the German army, that the people have been impoverished, and that both foreign trade and domestic industry is at a standstill, on account of the restrictions imposed by the German Government, it will be seen that the taxation is practically confiscatory. It is also alleged to be contrary to the regulations of The Hague Convention and the rules of civilised warfare, as well as a breach of the promise given by the German Governor General in December, 1914.

The statements communicated to the State Department by the Belgian Government represent that Germany has steadily pursued a system of spoliation and oppression. Many of the Belgian towns, when captured, were subjected to a heavy fine. Raw materials were requisitioned at low prices fixed by the German authorities. Other large stocks of raw material were tied up by orders that they could not be sold without the consent of the German Government. Machinery has been taken out of various factories and sent into Germany. Live stock has, in the same way, been seized and sent to Germany.

It is charged further that the German authorities issued orders that fourteen small inter-urban railways should be dismantled and the rails removed. Moreover, goods requisitioned have not been paid for. The President of the Antwerp Chamber of Commerce reports that in the cases he had investigated in Antwerp less than one-fourth of the raw materials requisitioned have been paid for by the German authorities. Under German rule Belgians can not carry on export and import trade with other countries; they cannot travel from one part of Belgium to another without enormous difficulties in regard to passes and permits; they cannot freely communicate [illegible] on account of the German [illegible] many of the factories [illegible] dismantled by the German authorities. Industry and trade are stagnant.

Belgians who were formerly rich are becoming impoverished by confiscation, taxation, according to the statement. Many of the farmers have been turned out of house and home by the wanton devastation of the German Army. Factory owners have no business, and cannot give employment to the labourers. About the only employment a Belgian labourer can find is in working for the Germans on military works; this he patriotically refuses to do. The Germans, it is charged, have tried to coerce the workers, as at Luttre, Malines, and Sweveghem, in May and June, 1915, but without success. Some hundreds of these labourers who refused to work for the German Army against their own fellow Belgians were, contrary to all the laws of civilised warfare, imprisoned and afterwards sent as prisoners to Germany.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" BEST LAZATIVE FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Don't Stay Constipated, Headachy, Bilious, With Breath Bad or Stomach Sour

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from a cold, constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headachy, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour gassy stomach, bad cold, offensive breath and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

The statement recites that the German authorities in Belgium encouraged one factory to start up again. It was an artificial silk factory at Tubize. They then demanded that two-thirds of the material should be made into nitro-cellulose (used in the manufacture of explosives) for the German Government. The factory refused and shut down throwing 7,000 Belgians out of employment. Germany encourages Belgian industries only when it is useful to the German army or to Germany. As far as the Belgians are concerned they may starve. Germany does not lift a hand to help them; on the contrary she does everything to impoverish them.

Even Belgian Red Cross property has been seized by the German authorities, it is alleged. Part of the Belgian Red Cross outfit escaped from the part of Belgium now occupied by the German Army, but some of the equipment and funds were left in Brussels, trusting to the Red Cross conventions and the rules of civilised warfare. On April 14, 1915, the German Governor General issued an order confiscating the property of the Belgian Red Cross in Belgium and proceeded by force of arms to take over all the equipment in Brussels, including the cash in bank.

Belgium charges that after wantonly killing thousands of Belgian civilians (about 800 in Dinant alone), after burning farmhouses and destroying whole villages, after looting banks and imposing heavy fines on many towns, after requisitioning the available raw material of commerce without paying cash, after dismantling factories and paralyzing all trade and commerce, both foreign and domestic, after impoverishing the Belgians and bringing them to the verge of famine which the Germans do nothing to relieve, the German authorities, in December, 1914, imposed an exorbitant tax of $96,000,000, and now, one year later, when Belgium has become still further impoverished by lack of trade and commerce, when she has been still further impoverished by a year of confiscatory taxation for the benefit of Germany, in spite of the solemn promise of the German Governor General, has imposed a new and exorbitant tax of 40,000,000 francs a month, without time limit, upon the Belgian people.

SYSTEM MAKES ONE ACRE DO WORK OF SIXTEEN

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside is the account of a clever crop rotation plan which has proved a signal success:

"We have a one-eight acre patch that makes more money for us than any two acres on the farm," writes E. P. H. Gregory, "our present rotation is two years in potatoes and two in strawberries, and the yield increases each year.

"The second crop of potatoes is always dug and disposed of about the first of July, when prices are good. Then the ground is prepared for strawberries, and the plants set out at once. We are always able to get sufficient growth for a full crop the next year when plants are set at this time. We cultivate once a week until frost comes and kills the weeds. Just before cold weather we mulch this patch with cornstalks, the refuse part of shredded fodder, and a good deal of manure. The mulch is made four or five inches deep, which effectually prevents heaving. The plants start to grow as soon as a few warm days come, and the heavy part of the mulch is then raked off the row.

"Some of the mulch is left between the rows to help keep the weeds down until the berry crop is harvested. Some time after the crop is cared for, and just before the weeds go to seed, we drive in with the mower and mow weeds, vines, and all close to the ground. When this cutting is perfectly dry, a match is applied and the patch is burned off clean. Then the berry vines are cultivated until frost, and kept trimmed back to a dense row about a foot wide.

"Two crops of berries are taken off. The ground is mulched heavily each winter, and burned over each summer. The heavy mulch is good for the ground, as are also the two coats of manure. The ashes made of burning the trash help to balance up the fertilizer so that this ground is never wanting in the necessary plant food.

"We then proceed to crop this piece in potatoes for two years, sowing wheat, rye, or rape for winter chicken pasture, and for making a green growth to plow under before planting potatoes in the spring. Our 50 hens usually take care of the green stuff so well that there is never enough left to choke the plow.

Sensational Reports as to the Discovery of New German Plots

Military and Civil Guards on Power Plants, Bridges, etc., Are Being Greatly Strengthened Throughout the Dominion---The Report of Col. Sherwood However is Expected to State That the Fire Which Destroyed the Parliament Buildings Was Not of Incendiary Origin.

HEAVY ARTILLERY FIGHTING IN THE WEST

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—Sensational reports of the discovery of new German plots were in circulation as Parliament prepared to assemble this afternoon to discuss the origin of the fire that destroyed the Canadian Parliament Buildings. It is understood that the view held in official circles is that the fire which destroyed the buildings was accidental and not of incendiary origin. The report of Colonel Sherwood, Director of Dominion Police, it is said, will express this opinion when presented to Parliament by the Prime Minister this afternoon.

Notwithstanding this official report the whole Capital is overrun with secret service men, and a rigid examination of all strangers continues. From all points of the Dominion comes news of greatly strengthening of military and civil guards on power plants, bridges, public buildings, and public works of all kinds.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—The Imperial Munitions Board has received an order for nearly one million eighteen-pounder shells.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—When asked this morning about the report in the New York Herald that another German plot to destroy the Welland Canal had been discovered, the Dominion Police and Gen. Sam Hughes said that they did not regard the story seriously.

"The thing which impressed me most," said Mr. Cochrane, "was the splendid spirit and enthusiasm evinced by our men everywhere. The rain and mud would seem to be enough to damper the spirits of the best, but no wolf are the men fed and cared for that they do not complain at all. The general spirit is enough to provide inspiration to anyone who may be fortunate enough to visit the trenches."

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—Robert A. Pringle, K.C., was nominated by the Government, and Judge McTavish, of Ottawa, by Sir Wilfrid, this afternoon, to sit on the Parliament Buildings Fire Commission.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 7.—Following all kinds of wild rumours of plots and warnings, munition manufacturers are putting double guards night and day on their factories. All are heavily armed. A full military and civil investigation in to the fire which destroyed the Jardine factory at Hespeler is going on to-day.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Specific denial was made by the Admiralty to-day of the German official claim that British ships were bombarded in last Monday night's Zeppelin raid on England.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The idea that the German fleet will come dashing out of the Kiel Canal some day equipped with 17-inch guns that will blow England's Dreadnoughts to pieces, was ridiculed by British naval experts to-day.

Official utterances on the subject are taboo in London. Nevertheless it was learned to-day that British naval officials believe the fifteen-inch gun with which the monster Queen Elizabeth is equipped is the maximum calibre for real efficiency, especially in the North Sea, where the British and German fleets might clash.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—Heavy artillery fighting along the western front between the LaBassee Canal and Arras; and also southward toward the bend of the Somme, was reported in to-day's official despatches. The British are again bombarding Lens.

The repulse of a Russian attack on the Schara river was also announced.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—It is stated in private cable messages from England to-day that Lord Kitchener has gone to take personal charge of operations in Egypt and Mesopotamia, and that General Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, who rose from the ranks, will become War Secretary. There is no other confirmation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A sensational turn was given the controversy between the United States and Germany to-day when Secretary Lansing declared that Under-Secretary Zimmerman of the German Foreign Office had made an "utterly false" statement if he had said as quoted by a news agency, that the United States had "made new demands" in the Lusitania case.

Lansing declared that the United States had "neither increased or reduced" its demands regarding the Lusitania. Later in his formal statement he eliminated the reference to reducing the demands, explaining that it had no bearing on Zimmerman's charges.

The flat declaration coming from the Secretary of State that the United States had not reduced its demands is believed to bode ill for the German hopes that to-day the President and the Secretary might decide to meet compromise offers half way.

Have Issued Writ Against School Board of Ottawa

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—More than one hundred Separate School teachers who declined to comply with department of education regulations and were suspended have to-day issued a writ against the School Board with city as garnishee for their salaries.

KNITTED ARTICLES ARE CALLED IN

The Canadian Kitchener League would like to have all finished knitted articles sent in this week to be packed in the bale which is going forward in a few days. This is the time when the soldiers need socks more than at any other period of the year and we must keep them well supplied. Kindly send or bring finished articles to 481 Gilmour Street.

Charged With Murder in the First Degree

BUFFALO, N.Y. Feb. 7.—John Edward Taiper a young business man of Orchard Park was charged with murder, first degree, before Justice Marcus in Supreme Court to-day in connection with the killing of his mother and brother in an auto hold-up about a week ago.

SUNDAY EVENING MEETINGS MORE OF CONCERT FEATURE

Methods Changed But Strong Appeal Made in Stirring Speeches —Band Played Splendidly

ATTENDANCE ENCOURAGING

Minus the frills and thrills of the direct appeals which stirred the two former Sunday evening recruiting meetings, the third of this series in the Armouries, last night, once more re-echoed the necessary and strident call dinning in the ears of Canadians, and particularly the physically fit.

Last night's plan was not so strenuous as on previous occasions, but cards were handed out to the men, conveying a silent urging to respond to Canada's appeal for the complement of its fighting units. Captain R. P. Watt acted as Chairman, and introduced the principal speakers. Mr. Jos. Wearing of this city and Prof. (Trooper) Molloy of R. M. C., Kingston.

The 93rd Battalion Band made another fine impression, especially in the overture to "William Tell," which, in itself, indicates the standard Bandmaster Hughes is bringing his men. A cornet duet, "The Larboard Watch," by Bandaman Payton and Waino was a very satisfying number. A patriotic vocal solo by Miss Dorothy Allen, was sung with fine effect, and Master Percy Luther's recitation was warmly received.

Mr. Wearing said that he would begin by holding and confidently asserting that in this war Germany cannot win the victory. For seventy years she has put her faith in iron shard and reeking tube and in preparation for this war did many wonderful things. One thing, however, she was unable to do, though she tried hard, she was unable to make wrong right, or make her cause a just one. The laws of God may be broken, but they cannot be changed. Whatsoever one soweth that shall he also reap, and he that soweth to the wind shall of the wind reap the whirlwind. Germany has been very successful in breaking every law, human and divine, but she cannot change the eternal veritise When the Kaiser, by forcing Austria to make impossible demands upon Servia, threw down the gauntlet of battle to the Triple Entente, he also threw to the winds every principle which binds nations together in peace and amity and concord. But today a mighty whirlwind is gathering among the nations of which we are proud to be one, which, with the certainty of unerring and adamantine justice, will sweep the Kaiser and all those responsible for this war from power to destruction. The day will come, may even now be dawning, when the Kaiser, looking upon his hands, red with the blood of the innocent babes and defenseless women will, like Lady Macbeth, cry in vain, "Out, damned spot," and when, like Judas, he will say, "I have sinned in that I have shed innocent blood," and the world will reply "What is that to us," "Sic semper tyrannis." The path of tyranny leads to exile or destruction. Germany cannot win because while God is in His heaven, truth, though beaten, battered, betrayed, ruthlessly assailed, shall stand forever.

Britain's Example.

Mr. Wearing next pointed out that again Britain has risen to the opportunity of defending freedom and opposing tyranny, and because of this would be the instrument for effecting Germany's defeat. It would have been so easy to have taken the coward's port, to have stood by as a so-called neutral, while Belgium was trampled to the dust and the plighted word of nations broken with effrontery. But, as a Chicago paper pointed out, Britain did not do so. She threw into the balance on the side of liberty the whole power of her mighty Empire—to the last shilling and the last man.

Britain is Always Ready

The last point made by the speaker was that Britain was able to take the stand she has because her sons have always been ready to die that the cause of freedom might live. He reminded the young men that in their

Peterboro' Asked To Raise Complete Overseas Battery

Capt. W. C. Ackerman, O.C. Commanding 24th Field Battery Received Official Announcement From Kingston—Four New Batteries to be Raised—News of the 93rd—To-day's Military News.

Capt. W. C. Ackerman, O.C. the 24th Field Battery, Peterborough, has received word from Col. Ogilvie, the A.A.G., 3rd Division, that the 30th, 31st, 32nd and 33rd Depot Batteries, C.F.A., C.E.F., are now being organized. Capt. Ackerman is instructed to send recruits to Kingston until such time as he is notified that the units are at full strength. In a previous letter he was informed that Peterborough was expected to raise one complete battery.

Little difficulty is expected in securing the necessary number of recruits for a battery. As announced in The Examiner last week the Belmont Club has already taken preliminary steps toward raising such an unit, and a meeting will be held to-night in the club rooms in regard to the details.

Further information in regard to enlistment for the Peterborough battery will be given to-morrow.

Mrs. Robt. Graham, 675 Stewart St., received a letter this morning from her son Gunner Gerald Graham of the 33rd Battery at St. John's. It was written prior to the battery sailing for overseas a couple of days ago.

J. H. EASTWOOD,
Lieutenant.

Among the list of pensions adjusted during the past month appears the name of Pte. Arthur Wm. Phipps, of King George street, Peterborough, at $16.00 per month. This allowance dates from the 1st of February, 1916. It is understood that the returned and partially disabled man has been on pay until the pension has been determined. The injury that disabled Pte. Phipps is given as a shell wound in the right thigh and gassed. The disability was assessed at 50 per cent. of normal efficiency, for six months.

Col. Jos. Mills, Inspector of Supply and Transport, 2nd Division, spent Sunday in the city and returned to Toronto this morning.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 4. — On Thursday morning Mrs. Jones, 40 Wall street, received two interesting letters from her husband, Captain J. Harold Jones, medical officer of the 8th C.M.R. One was dated January 14th and the other one January 20th. Dr. Jones wrote from Bramshott, Kent, England. He conveyed the intelligence that the 8th Mounted Rifles, the corps that visited Brockville fair in September, is now at Bramshott, but that orders have been received to disband the same, as cavalry is not wanted in France just now. The 8th Mounted Rifles will be divided into smaller units of 400 men and are to be formed into one battalion at the front. Col. Munro, so well and favourably known in Brockville, is still in command, but it is not thought likely that the same officers will be in the new battalion.

The news of the disbanding of the 8th C.M.R. will be heard with regret.

Of the 1,678 recruits for the last two weeks in January, secured in this Division, 1,000 were born in Canada, 402 in England, 64 were Scotch, 40 Irish and there were 47 other nationalities. The total number of soldiers now in the 3rd Division is 19,000.

The Daughters o fthe Empire will entertain the men of the 93rd Battalion at the recruiting rooms to-morrow evening from 7.30 until 9 o'clock.

Lieut. Hayes of the 136th Battalion, Cobourg, was in the city on Saturday.

Word has been received from Pte. Jos O'Connor a former resident of Peterboro and an ex-conductor of the Peterboro Radial Railway that he has enlisted with the 136th Battalion C. E. F. at Blind River.

There will be a meeting of Shareholders of the Belmont Club to-night at 9.15 o'clock in the club rooms George street to make arrangements for the recruiting of the overseas battery which is to be raised in Peterboro.

1ST CANADIANS LEFT FOR FRANCE YEAR AGO TO-DAY

AN APPEAL AT FACTORY WAS VERY SUCCESSFUL

TO HOLD MORE METINGS

The 93rd Battalion introduced a new recruiting plan to-day, when Majors Watt and Leck, Capt. Munro and other officers visited the plant of the Matthews-Blackwell Company, and held a short recruiting meeting. Operations in the plant were shut down for fifteen minutes and the employees gathered in the shipping room where short but able addresses were given by Major Watt; Major Lech and Captain Munro. The speeches were straightforward explanations of the need for more men, and the result was that at the conclusion of the addresses, although the men were not especially asked to come forward at that time, eight employees of the factory stepped forward and offered themselves for service. The first to do so was a man whose salary is $30 a week. Cards were left with the other employees, and it is expected that other recruits will come forward from the Matthews-Blackwell Company, although that concern has done as well as any in the city in providing men for Peterborough contingents.

It is the intention of the 93rd officers to hold meetings in all the factories if possible.

OAK HALL CLOCK IS STILL TICKING

The Oak Hall clock is still going, unconscious of the fact that its making loosers every day and ticking on its way to some lucky winner. The clock is still in the window and will remain there till it does stop. Mayor Duffus wound it up tight on Wednesday, Jan. 26 at 12 o'clock noon, and as was remarked, anything His Worship does he does well.

Mr. F. Clarke, the Jeweller, states it is a high-grade 8-day clock, and if the spring happened to be a thousandth part of an inch heavier it would cause the clock to run much longer—and that it may stop any hour and may run for a day or two yet.

Owners of 8-day clocks have varied experiences in their running from ten to 14 days without winding, and as this is a brand new clock, may yet tick on for a couple of days. It is running twelve days to-day at 12 o'clock noon.

Marched Away From Their Winter Quarters, Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plains on Feb. 7, 1915—Col Jos. Mills Reminiscent on an Anniversary of Twofold Interest to Him.

One year ago to-day, February 7th, the First Brigade, Canadian Expeditionary Forces broke their winter camp at Bustard, Salisbury Plains, and marched away on active service, they knew not where. It had rained all day, as it had rained during the greater part of their stay in England. The mud to which they had long since grown accustomed seemed to cling to them in a retarding embrace, and the relentless rain drenched them in a farewell downpour.

The scene was fresh in Col. Jos. Mills' memory to-day as it swept back over the eventful year that has passed so quickly. An additional reminder was the fact that it was the birthday of his son, Private Bruce Mills. At the entraining point the men piled into a dark and cheerless transport train. There was neither light nor heat to comfort them. The next day they embarked at Bristol for the channel trip. Officers and men were without accommodation. Space was at a premium on that trip. After two days and two nights they landed in France, where they immediately began a rail journey for Merris toward the front. Everybody crowded into box cars, horse cars and whatever rolling stock had been provided. There was no choice, and the spirit of the men endured every inconvenience not only patiently but even cheerfully.

From Merris they went on to Armentiers, tramped it to the trenches, where they got their first taste of the new warfare. They went into the trenches alongside the North Staffords and Royal Rifles, where they remained a week, with only one casualty. The Colonel's orderly was killed when the dug out he was occupying fell in on him.

After that their experiences rapidly increased, until April, when they made their great stand at Langemarck. Sunday, April 7th, was Easter, and Col. Mills recalled the Church of England Communion service held in the open during a rain storm. Col. Mills did not attempt in referring to to-day's anniversary to sketch the affairs of the Brigade, but felt that the recollection of it would be of general interest.

Sept. 28—Arrived Gaspe Bay.
Oct. 3—Left Gaspe Bay.
Oct. 14—Arrived Plymouth.
Oct. 18—Left Cassandra.
Oct. 19—Arrived Salisbury Plains.

Feb. 7—Left Bustard Camp.
Feb. 8—Left Bristol.
Feb. 10—Arrived St. Nazarre, France.
Feb. 11—Left St. Nazarre.
Feb. 13—Arrived Merris.
Feb. 17—Left Merris for Armentiers
Feb. 23—Left Armentieres for Merris.
Feb. 28—Left Merris for Sailly on the Lys.
March 25—Left Bac St. Maur for Neuf Becquin
April 7—Left Neuf Becquin for Winnezeele.
May 14—Left Bailleul for Fesars.
June 25—Left Oblinghem for Neuf Becquin.
June 26—Left Neuf Becquin for Neotebourn.
July 5—Left Ploegsteert for La Creche
July 14—Left La Creche for Neuve Eglise.
Oct. 8—Left Neuve Eglise for —.

MONDAY, FEB. 7, 1916.

A QUESTION OF ETHICS.

No doubt opinion will be sharply divided upon the question of the relation of Sunday observance to the insistent demands of the war. We have Sunday recruiting meetings. So far no noticeable outcry has been raised protesting against such meetings as involving a desecration of the Sabbath day. It is recognized that what we need in the fight for right is men. We get men by various recruiting methods, and the Sunday recruiting meeting is one of them. But will the same excuse apply to other war needs? If we get men to enlist by Sunday meetings, these men and others otherwise recruited must be looked after. They must be equipped and clothed. The most important part of a soldier's equipment is that for his feet, good boots and good socks. So great is the need for socks, that all over Canada women and girls, and even grandmothers, are knitting socks — working day and night, at home and abroad, even on street cars. Nof it is said that some ladies are so zealous for the comfort of the soldiers' poor feet that they knit on Sundays. Here comes in the ethical point.. Is this work a work of necessity—as it is a work of mercy, and is Sunday knitting of soldiers' socks as justifiable as Sunday recruiting meetings? Our soldiers have to fight on Sunday, and wear socks as they fight. Is it a breach of the sanctity of Sunday to spend the day in knitting these socks? Here is a chance for a casuist to exercise his skill.

CANADA'S RHEIMS AND LOUVAIN.

It is more than idle curiosity that insists upon discovering whether the fire that destroyed the Ottawa Parliament Buildings, and caused the loss of half a dozen human lives, was of accidental or intentional origin. If accidental, there is reason to lament the carelessness or stupidity of those in responsible charge of the building, and the swarming life it normally contained during a session. If of incendiary origin then a charge of lack of vigilance can easily be placed. There are many things to support the incendiary theory and, that admitted, to feel the certainty that it was of German origin. In the first place, it is quite in line with the German policy and practice of outrage and destruction to satisfy the lust of destruction, as witness Rheims and its historic cathedral and ruined Louvain, both battered to pieces, without the attainment of any military advantage. In the next place everything else points to the outrage theory as the cause of destruction. It is, of course, the cue of officialdom to insist upon the accident theory to excuse criminal lack of vigilance and precaution, which must have been responsible, if the facts urged are as stated. Without criminal carelessness, how could the Babcock extinguishers have been so tampered with as to be charged with some chemical that when the extinguishers were used, increased instead of put out the flames. Colonel Sherwood, Chief of the Dominion Police, says he was warned that the buildings were electrically wired to cause the explosion of bombs; and a doorkeeper says the fire came "from underneath" the reading room papers and spread with amazing rapidity. Any one who knows the topography of the buildings cannot conceive how the flames could have spread so rapidly or created such sudden and dense volumes of smoke or gas from a fire accidentally started. The scepticism of the Chief of the Dominion Police, and the airy pooh! pooh! of the Minister of Militia, are self confuted. Why, if they thought the fire accidental, do they at once put on a force of sentries? Why was Rideau Hall filled with watchmen from cellar to attic? Why is no one allowed to enter the Parliament Grounds, and why do even members of Parliament have to have special passes in order to enter the grounds? We must not shut our eyes to the danger that threatens, a danger whose intelligence and lurking terror are emphasized by the wanton destruction of the Parliament Buildings, the most splendid monument of Gothic architecture on this continent. It is a costly hint of the vigilance, the unresting watchfulness we must maintain. We must not be content to live in a fool's paradise any longer. We must recognize that the German menace is at our doors, underneath and all round about us.

From all the evidence available there is no escaping the conclusion that the Ottawa fire was of incendiary origin and not accidental—no more accidental than the destruction of Rheims cathedral, the outrage of Louvain, and a thousand other outrage traceable to German vandalism.

WHITEWASH.

It is bad enough to "Germanize" Canada by means of bombs that blow up parliament buildings, but it is worse to "Germanize" Canadian political methods. The nomination of Mr. Fallis of Peel, who resigned his seat in the Legislature on account of shady deals in buying horses for the government, whereby he received a rake-off without giving proportionate service, is a pure case of abuse of his representative influence to secure personal profit. His action was so bad that many Conservative journals demanded his dismissal from his seat—that he be read out of the party as Sir Robert Borden read out of the party, Foster and Garland. These men were thus punished for actions no worse in principle than that practised by Fallis.

Yet, on Saturday, the Conservatives of Peel nominated Fallis, "in open convention," and he may be re-elected—if the body of electors is as shameless in disregard of the political morality of their representatives as the convention. There will be a contest; for the Liberals were willing to allow any other candidate than the besmirched Fallis to be elected by acclamation. German methods, founded upon disregard of honesty and honour, are little worse in principle than the whitewashing of a discredited politician by the bastard "vindication" of returning him at the polls. It is not partizanship that condemns the effrontery of Fallis and his party abettors. Here is what the Conservative Toronto World says

> Mr. Fallis, late member for Peel in the Ontario Legislature, will do a most patriotic thing if he declines the Conservative nomination, if offered to him to-day. Should he be re-elected, that will be the end of any attempt to better political life in Canada. If he comes back De Witt Foster will come back to the Commons from Nova Scotia, and Mr. Garland from Carleton; and Sir Robert Borden and the whole Conservative party will be that much discredited. And the World trusts that Richard Blain, M.P., will also see the situation in this light, and that he, especially, will be held responsible for the example of Peel on the fortunes of the Conservative party. Mr. Blain cannot counsel Mr. Fallis to stand if he has the Prime Minister's welfare at heart. If an Ontario constituency stands for whitewash so will Ontario and Canada have to stand for many another thing while this war lasts; if Peel and Mr. Fallis do the right thing the country will benefit immeasureably therefrom, and a certain disloyal element in the community will think again before defying public opinion and the public welfare in this day of extreme peril."

A man that will palm off a whitewashed horse upon the government cannot be expected to have any fine moral objection to being whitewashed himself. But that the electors of Peel should be parties to it is simply awful. One such man in the riding is enough.

PREMIER HEARST'S ILLNESS.

The Evening News, which is understood to represent the government, stated yesterday evening that Premier Hearst was not as ill as he was reported to be, and that all he required was complete rest. He may not be able to appear at the legislature, which it is announced is to be opened on the 29th. The News concludes with the statement that "all rumors that he will not continue to lead the government and the Conservative party in the province do not deserve a moment's serious consideration."

At least the statement of the News deserves a moment's serious consideration. Premier Hearst is plainly a very sick man when it is said that "he may not be active during the session of the legislature." With the experience which the party has already had in the appointment of a premier over the heads of the provincial members, it would seem that it would be wiser to take the party into the confidence of the cabinet, and let them know exactly how affairs stood. The health of the premier is of considerable moment to the province and of even more moment to the Conservative party.

If the idea is to repeat the coup that occurred after Sir James Whitney's death, and carry on with everybody in the dark until a near-promise has been arranged for by the powers that wish to be, without calling a caucus or letting anyone know anything until the coup is effected, then we may be assured that the Conservative party has not only lost its premier, but its vitality, and its initiative, and that its successor is treading on its heels.

It is unfortunate that governments will not learn from experience. The Conservative party in Ontario has nothing to gain from following the example set by the late lamented Ross government. Barnacles are no more useful to Conservatives than to Liberals.—Toronto World.

STUPIDITY OF THE GERMAN ANTICIPATORY CHICKEN CENSUS

Wheresoever the carcass is there will the eagles be gathered together. That is true; and the carrion birds are already dividing amongst them the remains of what was, and is yet, Europe. The Germans carry by storm a thousand yards of trenches (generally an over-estimate of nine hundred and fifty yards), and Sayville announces with delirious joy that Germany has grown that much. The Balkan States and Persia and Turkey and Egypt and Russian Poland have already been scientifically carved and readjusted to suit the German bill of fare—and the maddest German at large must know full well that the little tactical advantages gained occasionally by German arms will not have the slightest effect upon the redistribution of Europe, Asia and Africa, which must follow the close of the war. The mere accident of temporary occupancy will have no effect whatever upon the political boundaries of the future. There will be just two parties to the geographical settlement, the victors and the vanquished. Just those two; and the victors will have the casting vote. The vanquished may say "We are in possession of the greater part of Belgium, of the best part of Northern France, of Serbia, of Poland, and so on." The victors will reply "Well, we do not want to be mean about it. We will give you forty-eight hours to get out"; and the vanquished will get out. The ultimate result of the war may be decided in any one of the numerous battlefields, probably in Belgium or along the Franco-German frontier or on the North Sea, but the precise location will have no effect whatever upon the coming territorial readjustment.

This is what makes the German strategy look so pathetically stupid; a characterization which might be applied with equal justice to most of the melancholy criticism of the campaign from a British point of view; and certainly to all the Berlin jubilation over the most trumpery little achievements of German arms. This lack of perspective and sense of proportion is the greatest blunder in the German war policy. Take the Zeppelin raids in England for instance. What do they, or can they, possibly accomplish compensurate with their cost? Practically the Zeppelins are not engaged in the war at all. The only conceivable purpose of the raids is to fool the hungry German citizen with the idea that something is being done to improve his bill of fare. They have not the slightest military value, and evidently do not frighten the British people, worth a ha'penny. What difference will be made in the ultimate rectification of frontiers by the fact that the Germans murdered 23 men, 20 women and 8 children, and smashed a Congregational chapel, when they dropped bombs upon a number of small towns in England under the delusion that they were bombarding Nottingham, and Great Yarmouth? The cockneys go out to look for the raiders as they would go out to see a display of fireworks at Sydenham or Muswell Hill, and are disappointed when there is nothing to be seen. The little element of personal risk adds piquancy to the spectacular treat, and that is all there is to it from John Bull's point of view. He laughs at the German who has to pay for the free show, and he laughs again when he thinks of the little bill the stupid Teuton will have to pay for damages when the day of reckoning comes. He will not, of course, be exorbitant in his claim for damages; but he may take it for granted that a careful account is being kept, and that the vanquished will have the privilege of paying the bill without any discount. We may also take it for granted that seizures will be made upon the debtor's assets in both real and personal estate; and that, as security for any balance left unprovided for, the blockade of German commerce will be maintained until the last farthing of the debt and costs is paid. There is no particular reason why the good German should not go on smashing things like a bull in a china shop; but he will soon realise that it is his own china he is smashing.—Montreal Herald.

THE SAVING OF WASTED DOLLARS

The pioneer of December 24th says, "Whether the question be viewed from the standpoint of national economy or the desirability of Military efficiency the argument in favor of suppression of the liquor traffic at least during the war is unanswerable.

Russia has done this and leading politicians in Great Britain are advocating it strenuously. One of the most widely known conservative London Journals, the Spectator said:

"We must economize and the only great national economy open to us is the cutting off root and branch of our expenditure on intoxicants. If we do not our waste in alcohol will undo us even more surely than the forces of Germany and Austria.

If we mean to win this war we must prohibit the use of intoxicants in order to save money and get more munitions and the ministers know as well as we do that the only great thing attainable would be from prohibition."

Commenting on these utterances from such an authority a recent writer calls on the King's Ministers at Ottawa as well as at Westminister to take warning and asks, "What answer has the Dominion Government, what answer can it have to the protest in these war times that last year two hundred and seventy-five million pounds of food stuffs were destroyed in the breweries and distilleries of Canada in order to produce sixty-six million gallons of intoxicating liquors with an estimated vale of one hundred and three million dollars. There is the loss both of the food stuffs, the loss of the money paid for the liquor and the loss of efficiency in the men who drink it. The most authoritative voice in the Journalism of British respectability calls out for prohibition during the war. Will the King's ministers listen?

And what about the provinces? Alberta and Saskatchewan have taken the lead. British Colombia, Manitoba and New Brunswick will soon vote on the question and we have faith that the others will not be far behind. The Provincial authorities are responsible for the waste of food and money and the waste of men caused by drink. They have the power to cancel forthwith every license, bar-room, shop or club and stop the waste.

Every wasted dollar will be needed to meet the financial demands of the war and afterwards. All wasted energy is needed in the munition factories and every wasted man is needed now at the front and for other urgent service at home.

The authorities have been waiting to make sure that they will be supported by the Country and now we may expect that they will go ahead.

As an illustration, he told them of building a house and putting water pipes with taps in all the rooms, these pipes not being connected with the main in the street.

"Suppose I turn on a tap and no water comes, what is the matter?"

He naturally supposed that some of the boys would answer that the water was not turned on at the main; but none didn't. On the contrary, one boy at the foot of the class called out:

"You didn't pay your water rate."

HOLY WAR'S FAILURES

Arabs and Even Kurds Disregarded Call—Some Aid Wanted

Besides the Turks, there are other Moslem elements—Arabs and Kurds—whom the Germans expected to join the jihad. The Arabs, who are numerically stronger than any other race in the Ottoman Empire, generally are hostile to the Turks. For years Turkish armies, one after another, have been annihilated in the deserts of Arabia. During the war Arabian antagonism toward the Government was well understood in Constantinople and it was not without reason that about sixty Arabs were hanged in Beirut, and quite a number in Beirut and other Syrian quarters. Ten thousand Arabian soldiers in the Dardanelles were attacked, disarmed and sent back to Anatolia. If some Arab Sheiks and Arab tribes have joined the Turkish army operating against the English advance in Mesopotamia it is entirely due to the lavish distribution of Prussian gold and promises of future rewards, and compensation.

Another element on which the Turks counted was the Kurdish tribes. The Kurds are entirely nomads, scattered in Eastern and Southern Asia Minor, divided into hundreds of small tribes having no bond of union among themselves, and their whole number is hardly two millions. They are supposed to be Mohammedans, but in fact they are in a very immature stage of life, their religion consisting of a few superstitious ideas; and they are powerful in proportion to their abilities for plunder and brigandage, considered by a Kurd an honorable occupation. In this war the Kurds not only did not respond to the call of the jihad, but, on the contrary, taking advantage of the general confusion and anarchy, began to plunder, kill and devastate everything within their reach, without distinction of race or religion. In some places they joined the Russians, in others the Turks. There have been Kurds who have taken part for a while with the Russians, then with the Turks, and vice versa.

BRITAIN'S STAKE IN THE HOME OF MAHOMET

Of all the countries of the Oriental world bordering on the theatre of war, Arabia is the least known and her part in the world-struggle the least distinct. It is generally thought that Arabia does not matter, but evidently Britain's agents and leaders think differently. To most Arabia is just a geographical expression, but from the activities of both Briton and German agents it must be judged that the Powers count Arabia in in making their strategical calculations. Yet Arabia is hardly a nation. She has not that unity or driving power which the first Mohammed and the Caliphs and their new faith gave her. The land is one of wild tribes, faithless friends, treacherous foes, but not possessed of the wealth, knowledge or organization which could make them powerful military factors. They are swarming, like insects. They have worried the Bagdad expeditions of the British, but by themselves could never stop the Anglo-Indian hosts. This applies mostly to the tribes of the interior. With the seafaring Arabs it is different. The desert man cannot appreciate sea power. It is nothing to him that the German flag dare not appear on the oceans. But the Arab trader who visits Zanzibar, Madagascar, Bombay or Alexandria knows and is decidedly pro-British. It is to his interest. The British fleets would drive him too off the seas if he dared interfere with traffic through the Suez or in the Indian Ocean or tried to stop the oil steamers from the Persian Gulf as they go to supply the British fleets.

The result is that Britain has little to fear from Arabia. Aden is a great stronghold and commands a danger point on the route to India. It is well garrisoned and from it as a base the British warships can operate to protect the eastern end of the Suez. Britain has other fortified points along the southern coast of Arabia and along the Arabian, as well as on the Persian, shores of the Persian Gulf. The coasts are safe and that is all that is essential. But it would be very advantageous if Britain could win the tribes of the interior of the Arabian peninsula so securely to her side that an attack could be launched upon Palestine from the desert side. Britain coming upon the Jordan country from the east like the Midianites or Moabites of old would be more than interesting. It would paralyze the Turco-German power in Palestine and would end all the Kaiser's dreams [illegible] Suez canal. The reason is that Germany and Turkey anticipate a sea attack upon Palestine and consequently built their Damascus to Sinai railway away east of Jerusalem.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

City Teams Will Battle For The Group Championship

First Game at Brock Street Rink on Wednesday Night Promises to Be a Fight All the Way—Soldiers and Electrics Closely Matched on Their Showing This Season

The tie-up between the 93rd Battalion and Electrics promises to provide the fans with two of the fastest and most exciting games of the season. So closely are the two teams matched on their form during the group race that the fans are all at sea trying to pick a winner. All they are certain of is that the battles scheduled for Wednesday and Friday night at Brock St. Rink will be the hockey events of the year, and most of the fans are convinced that the result will be in doubt until the last few minutes of the second game.

93rd Battalion.

93rd	6	Campbellford
93rd	4	Cobourg
93rd	3	Electrics
93rd	4	Campbellford
93rd	5	Electrics
93rd	3	Cobourg

Electrics.

Electrics	4	Campbellford
Electrics	9	Cobourg
Electrics	4	93rd
Electrics	3	93rd
Electrics	7	Cobourg
Electrics	4	Campbellford
	31	25

The records show the two teams to be about as evenly matched as could be wished for, and the fans are looking forward to the first game Wednesday night as they will realize that both teams will be on their toes to get the break in the series. Both Soldiers and Electrics will have their strongest available line-up in action and neither will lack for rooters, especially the former, who will have their band and rooters' club in action.

The Soldiers by the way have a cosmopolitan team representative of many difficult sections of Canada. For the benefit of the fans some information as to the players of the khaki team may be of interest.

Capt. Widdifield, the goal-keeper, is the only Peterborough member of the team. He played originally with Owen Sound, and afterwards with the Osgoode Hall Seniors. The defence pair, Lieuts. Dupuy and Sexton, are "blue noses," hailing from Halifax, Nova Scotia, where they both played on the King's College and Wanderer teams, two of the fastest amateur teams in the Maritime Provinces. On the forward line Sergt. Montgomery, the rover, comes from the north and has played with New Liskeard, Parry Sound and other teams. Pte. Windsor, the veteran centre-ice man, originally came from Quebec, but has played hockey with a number of northern teams, including the Cobalt Lake septette. Lieut. Ketchum, at left wing, is an Ottawa man, and Pte. Harry Blewett, the right wing, claims Lakefield as his home.

MANY TIED-UP GROUPS IN THE O. H. A. SERIES

Senior.

Group No. 1—Kingston Frontenacs or Queen's.
Group No. 2—Toronto Argonauts or Riversides.
Group 3—Berlin or Elmira.
Group 4—Seaforth or Hamilton R.C.

Intermediate.

Group No. 1—Belleville or Picton.
Group 2—Peterboro Electrics or 93rd Battalion.
Group 3—Bowmanville or Oshawa.
Group 4—Weston or Brampton.
Group 5—Hamilton or Port Colborne.
Group 6—Paris.
Group 7—Sarnia.
Group 8—Seaforth.
Group 9—76 Battalion, Bracebridge, Collingwood and Midland playing off this week.
Group 10—If Owen Sound beats Markdale to-night at Owen Sound there will be a three-cornered tie, with Wiarton in it.
Group 11—Alvinston, a bye.

Second Round Games.

Alvinston beat Sarnia 9 to 7.

Junior Series.

Group No. 1—Kingston C.I.
Group No. 2—Port Hope.
Group No. 3A—Lindsay or Belleville
Group No. 3B—St Andrew's College
Group No. 4—Aura Lee.
Group No. 5—Simcoe Norfolks.
Group No. 6—London Ontarios.
Group No. 7—Sarnia St. George's, a bye.
Group No. 8—Berlin Union Jacks or Stratford.
Group No. 9—Collingwood.
Group No. 10—76th Battalion, Barrie.
Group No. 11—Toronto High School Association a bye.
Group No. 12—Owen Sound, a bye.

Second Round Games.

London Ontarios beat Sarnia St. Georges.

The Senior Situation.

Kingston Frontenacs have to beat Queen's in the return game on the 18th to win Group No. 1 senior championship. Queen's can tie it up by winning that game and beating Brockville twice.

If Berlin seniors win to-night at home from Elmira they win the championship of Group No. 3. If they lose Elmira can tie by winning on Friday from Waterloo.

Either Argonauts or Riversides has to win both games on Wednesday and on Saturday, the 19th, to land the honors in Group No. 2 senior—unless T.R. and A.A. should happen to beat either in the meantime.

Hamilton Rowing Club's senior team will play Thursday and next Monday with Seaforth for the championship of Group No. 4.

Niagara Falls Quits.

Niagara Falls intermediates have retired for the season without winning a game. They have tried out a bunch of juniors for next year, but were in a district where it was difficult to win.

Bowmanville and Oshawa intermediates are tie for their group and will play off Wednesday and Friday. They will toss this morning for choice of games.

Peterboro Electrics and 93rd Battalion are tie for their district and will play off Wednesday and Friday.

If Markdale beats Owen Sound to-night they win the district; if they lose it is a three-cornered tie. The lighting and boarding of the Markdale rink is very poor and it is not likely that the O.H.A. will permit any more games there, unless great improvement is made.

The winner of the Stratford-Berlin Union Jack junior series will play at Simcoe on Friday night; the return game on Monday, the 14th.

St. Andrew's College will play at the winner of Lindsay-Belleville juniors next Friday night, the return game in Toronto on Monday.

In the second round junior Kingston C. T. and Port Hope will play, on Wednesday in Kingston, on Friday in Port Hope.

HOCKEY.

The Electrics will practice at Brock St. Rink to-night between 7 and 8 o'clock. In view of the games this week a full attendance is requested.

PLAY-OFF GAMES CHANGED TO WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY NIGHTS

The play-off between the 93rd Battalion and Electrics will be played on Wednesday and Friday evenings of this week instead of on Tuesday and Thursday. Secretary Hewitt is making the change in justice to both teams who had a hard week last week. The rest will be appreciated by both and the fans will gain by reason of the fastest hockey that will be provided. It is likely that Lou Marsh will referee the first game on Wednesday night and Jerry Laflamme the second game on Friday night. Both games are called for 8.30 o'clock.

CURLING

Four rinks are expected to represent the local club at the Oshawa Bonspiel and will leave to-morrow morning.

"RED" MURRAY SOLD TO KANSAS CITY.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Two more Chicago players have been added to the roster of the Kansas City Club of the American Association. They are Jack "Red" Murray, formerly of the New York Nationals, last year with the old Cubs, and Charles Hanford, with the Chicago Federals last season. Both are outfielders and were purchased from President Weeghman by Danny Shay, Manager of the Kansas City Club, it was announced Tuesday.

Y.M.C.A. BOWLING LEAGUE.

Two changes have been made in this week's schedule. The Business Men-Examiner game, scheduled for to-night, is postponed until Thursday night. The C.G.E.-St. Andrews game on Thursday night will be played to-night instead.

THE SONG OF THE TELEPHONE MAN

The following lines, written by a telephone man in the 13th Battalion at the front, were forwarded by Lance-Corporal Clayton Martin, of the same Battalion, to Mr. W. J. Brooks:

This is the song of a telephone man
The man with the buzzer-box
With dirty face and filthy clothes
With mud covered hair and eyes and nose
Who gets no sleep but a fitful doze
Who daily does work of which no one knows
Who's life is any old colour but rose
The poor D——d telephone man.

Who ever thinks of the telephone man
The man with the constant grouse
If he's a 'phone-man his life's a curse
If he's a line-man it's something worse
In either case he'll need a nurse
Or else a stretcher in lieu of a hearse
And, as an epitaph something terse—
This was a telephone man.

What is the work of a telephone man
The man who's the cause of this song
It's to be on duty both early and late
With a black buzzing 'phone for his only mate
Unless he's a linesman whom all men hate
And who, if he's lucky can sleep on a gate
Who gives a d—— for at any rate
He's only a telephone man.

What does he do when the shrapnel screams
This man who is no one's friend
He may be asleep when he hears the shout
Lines gone again, send a linesman out
It's a job for him not the slightest doubt
He may come back at the end of the bout
Or he may be found by a Uhlan scout
It's his work he's a telephone man.

And what does he do when the battle's done
Does he live and sleep like a man
No, he pinches and steals his neighbour's wire
And denies the fact with curses dire
Taking no heed of the other's ire
And St. Peter above stutters "What a liar"
While Satan chuckles and rakes up his fire
For the poor doomed telephone man.

But he has one hope, has the telephone man
Which he always bears in mind
Be he from Cumberland, Surrey or Devon
When his wire in miles is really seven
And by all accounts it should be eleven
In his electrical line there is some slight leaven
Let's hope they don't have 'phones in heaven
Is the prayer of the telephone man.

FROZEN WATER PIPES.

A burning match, torch or open flame of any description should never be employed for this purpose. To wrap the pipes with oil soaked rags and set them on fire is worse than folly: it is incendiarism.

Pipes are almost invariably adjacent to walls or partitions where there is an ascending current of air to feed and spread a flame. Even if the flame does not start a fire, its sudden local heat may cause the pipe to break and flood the premises with water.

Recommendation.

Wrap the frozen section of the pipe with a cotton cloth and pour hot water upon it (even if the hot water must be obtained from a neighbour) until the ice in the pipe gives way. Rags on the floor at the base of or under the pipe will absorb the waste water. If the freezing is too severe to yield to this treatment, send for a plumber.

Reputable plumbers always avoid running water pipes along outside walls where it is possible to do so. Property owners when building should look out for this. It may some time save them money and vexation.

Large onion bulbs of the varieties like Denia and Giant Gibraltar are obtained by growing the seed in the greenhouse or hotbed in February and transplanting to good rich garden soil. Thorough cultivation must be given throughout the season.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

OUR PLEDGE.

The family pledge hung on the wall,
And on it you could see
The names of mamma and Mary Jane,
And Charlie—that is me.
We did not dare to ask papa
To write upon it, too
So left a place for him to fill—
'Twas all we dared to do.
He saw our pledge as soon as he Came in the door that night,
And when we saw him read it
It put us in a fright.
He did not say a word to us
About the pledge at all.
But oft we saw him look at it
Hanging upon the wall.
And every night when he came home
He stood and read it through;
We all kept still about its words,
Although we knew them through.
Four weeks passed and then one night,
When pa came home to tea,
He took the pledge down from its nail
And then turned to me.
"Go get the pen and ink, my boy,
And let me fill that space,
It looks so bare," he slowly said,
A queer look on his face.
And then mamma sat down and cried
(She said it was for joy)
And Mary Jane, she cried some, too.
I did not—I'm a boy!
And papa said he did not drink
Since that first night when we
Had hung the pledge upon the wall
Where he our names could see.
And ever since that space was filled,
Mamma said so to-night,
Though dark may be our little room
One corner's always bright.

The past year has been one of bloodshed and carnage. In all part of the world men, women and innocent children have been murdered by the tens of thousands, but yet Christianity is advancing, is rolling on and it is going to warm the hearts of all nations and all nations will bask in its light. Men may shut the window blinds so they cannot see it, for they may smoke the pipe of speculation until they have shadowed under their own vaporing; but the white light of the gospel made up of all the beautiful colors of earth and heaven, violet plucked from amid the spring grass, the indigo of the southern jungles, the blue of the skies, the green of the foliage and the yellow of the autumnal woods, the orange of the southern groves and the red of the sunset, all the beauties of earth and heaven are combining to keep the ball of Christianity rolling. The good homes of our land are the little yeast cakes that keep the moral influences working. Infidelity and atheism are receiving their death blow from clubs in the hands of the good mothers of our land.

Young man! Young woman! Don't let your lives be failures. Make the best of what God has given you. Let your gratitude to Him for life and its noble endowments, be exerted in a full devotion of will, and thought, and strength, to whatever work He brings in His wise providence to your hand. And remember, that it is the only good and useful work that He provides. Shun evil work—work that harms your neighbor in any way, as you would shun the deadliest thing. No true success ever comes from evil work. It may bring a harvest of golden apples and purple grapes; but the apples will be like those of Sodom, full of bitter ashes and grapes sour.

The grandest luxury God ever gave man is health. He who trades that off for all the palaces of the earth is cheated. Many have envied Napoleon, but he would gladly have given all his honors to have been freed from the gout. A dinner of herbs tastes better to the appetite sharpened on a woodman's axe or a scythe, than wealthy indigestion experiences seated at a table covered with venison and all the luxuries of the season. With good health we can sleep sweetly on a straw mattress, while fashionable invalids get but little rest on a couch of eagle's down. Let us remember Paul's advice to the Hebrews and if we have health in all other respects "Be content with such things as ye have."

It is so easy to criticise one's neighbor who has gone wrong in morals, or made a failure in business, and so hard to give credit for the effect of the influence impelling him to disaster, over which he has no control, that our criticism of others is often very uncharitable. Men often say how good they would have been, or what they would have accomplished had they been in the other man's place. They do not stop to ask why the fellow that was in the other shoes did not succeed. If they did they would often find the man who went wrong, or who failed, was entitled to great credit for standing up so bravely under forces and burdens that might easily have overthrown his accusers. Sometimes the man who fails is a greater hero than another who wins.

It has been said that from the same materials one builds palaces, another hovels; one warehouses, another villas; bricks and mortar are mortar and bricks until the architect makes them something else. The block of granite which was an obstacle in the path of the weak becomes a stepping stone in the pathway of the resolute. The difficulties which dishearten one man only stiffin the sinews of another, who looks on them as a sort of mental springboard by which to vault across the gulf of failure on to the sure, solid ground of full success.

That injunction to love your neighbor as yourself, means the neighbor in trouble as well as the other who has a big automobile.

All Clothing Goods in Germany Seized in Preparation For a Long War Nation Recently Told

BERLIN, Feb. 4th.—The most far-reaching war measure taken by Germany so far as the confiscation of practically all stocks of cloths, textiles, woven and knitted goods, which are suitable for use for the German army or navy, the sick and wounded prisoners, and German government officials. This military ordinance has been approved by the Bundesrat, and is more significant even than the bread card proclamation.

The measure is not dictated by any present shortage of clothing materials but is rather a far-sighted determination to checkmate England's possible sharper blockade intentions in advance and be prepared to wage the war for years, if necessary, so far as clothing materials are concerned, independent of imports.

The ordinance which goes into effect throughout Germany at once, amounts to a general mobilization of all textiles, woollens, linen and cotton goods. All companies as well as individual merchants, having in their possession more than a fixed maximum quantity of the goods subject to confiscation, are required to make an itemized report of their stocks to the Minister of War, and must be held subject to the disposal and orders of the War Ministry, which will as soon as possible release goods not wanted or unsuited for the war needs, taking over against prompt payment goods suitable to cover future war requirements. To obviate a rush of the public on the stores, tailors, etc., and to prevent a sudden boosting of prices, the ordinance fixes automatically a maximum. The price for such goods in the future is to be no higher than the price at which they were sold before Feb. 5.

The new war measure is the one topic of interest to-day and the press with wonderful unanimity sounds a stirring patriotic note. The Tageblatt says:

"It will mean a stretching of supplies. Hitherto discarded clothes have largely represented dead capital; use will now be found for them again for the rest of the war. Nobody in Germany will trouble about fashion. We will wear what clothes are available and adapt our needs to actual conditions.

"The new programme for stretching stocks is not merely occasioned by military reasons to cover the needs of the army. Greater significance lies in the fact that the military authorities are striving to strengthen the whole German national economy. The Prussian war ministry is following the policy of a war of economics, which is just as important for Germany as strategy, for Germany is waging not only a military and political war against the Quadruple Entente, but also an economic war. The economic ending of one is unthinkable without carrying the other through successfully. One of the Ministry's most important tasks is to keep our economic weapons just as sharp as our military ones. The army must first be covered, the needs of the civilians can be more easily limited.

"As in the case of all our other protective measures this readjustment in the textile industry will attract notice abroad, and particularly the notice of our enemies. Capital will be made of the confiscation to show that Germany has reached the end of her strength. The clear headed abroad who are familiar with conditions here, however, will think as we do, that Germany is arming for long war. Confiscation is not an indication that no stocks are on hand but rather of a gather of new strength."

Other newspapers lay emphasis on the fact that the new measure is designed to meet the exigencies of a war that may last for years.

The Morgen Post says:

"The purchases of textiles will undoubtedly make it more difficult for the civilians, but this will have an educational effect on the well-to-do classes."

The Tageliche Rundschau says:

"The well-to-do classes will be forced to recognise the seriousness of the situation, which unfortunately they have not done so far. Men and women will ransack closets and trunks and return to old discarded clothes, conscious of the fact that to-day it is an honor to go about in a shabby coat."

veins might run the blood of men who died at Naseby, or Edgehill, or Blenheim, or Waterloo, and that this blood must surely now stir them to emulate the deeds of their ancestors. He said that on Saturday he had got impression that the 93rd was lacking in young men in the first flower of their manhood, and that on Saturday night he had seen a good representation of this flower of Peterborough's young manhood at the skating rink in civilian clothes. At this point in his address Mr. Weering made a strong appeal to the young men of Peterborough who were without a reasonable excuse for staying at home to enlist and do their duty for king and country, and freedom and God. "Britain will win," he said, "because she is fighting for the right, and she is able to fight for the right because she knows that when the call of duty is sounded throughout the Empire her sons will come from the Yukon, from the isles of the sea, from the far reaches of Australia, from the frontier of India, from the centre of Africa. They will come and they will die, for the call is irresistable, and they are unafraid. The call comes now for a battalion from Peterborough. The Battalion will soon be there, complete to a man."

Trooper Molloy.

Trooper Molloy is a welcome visitor to speak, and was given another cordial reception last night. His address covered the duty that has come to Canada and the necessity of Canadians enlisting more largely in the Battalions now in formation.

The Attraction of the Season at The Grand To-night

22 Stage Mechanics Engaged Since Early Morning Preparing Stage For "Pygmalion"

Some idea of the splendid attraction which is being offered at 'The Grand' to-night, in the appearance here of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, may be gained from the fact that since early this morning a staff of twenty-two stage mechanics have been busy setting up the scenic equipment. Without doubt "Pygmalion," with Mrs. Campbell in the leading role, will be one of the finest attractions that has yet visited Peterborough, and local theatre-goers should avail themselves of the opportunity of witnessing the performance. There are some good reserved seats still left at 50c, $1.50 and $2.00. The upper gallery doors will be open at 7.30 p.m. and the performance will begin at 8.15.

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION TO MEET WEDNESDAY

In haste Mrs. Macherty leaves the fireside, and goes in search of the cause of the disturbance. In the garden she finds her husband nailing a board on the bottom of the barrow. "Donald', man," she says, "ye're makin' an awfu' row. What'll the neighbours think?" "Niver mind them, Kirsty," says Donald. "I maun get my barra' mon'it." "Oh, but Donal'," says Kirsty, "it's very wrong to work on the Sawbath. Ye ought tae use screws!"

M.P. CALLED FOR A POLICEMAN TO QUENCH INCIPIENT BLAZE

Frank Glass Says That Jar of Mineral or Even His Own Coat Would Have Stopped Fire.

MINUTE'S DELAY WAS FATAL

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—A five gallon jar of mineral water standing outside the reading room would have quenched the incipient blaze that—given an extra minute or two—brought about the destruction of Canada's Houses of Parliament.

So says Frank Glass, of London (Member of East Middlesex. He asserts the fire broke out in the paper files in the reading room and that there is nothing to show it was not of accidental origin.

"I was standing reading one of the files in the reading room," said Mr. Glass, "when Sir Thomas White came through. He stopped and glanced at a paper. The only other person in the room was Mr. Northrup, M. P., and I noticed that there was no attendant.

Felt Heat of Fire.

"Sir Thomas went out of his private room and when I looked around Mr. Northrup had left also. I continued to read. Personally I felt an unpleasant heat from behind and turned. I then noticed that smoke was coming from a pile of newspapers under the file desk behind me. It looked so simple, no flame or anything.

"I walked to the glass door and called the policeman who is stationed at the entrance to the Speaker's chamber. "There's a little b'aze here,' I said not thinking the matter was very serious, and believing that he would smother it with his coat. Instead of that he rushed in, looked at it, and then ran down the hall for an extinguisher.

Gave the Alarm.

"By the time he had returned the flames had of course broken out, and the moment he opened the door and threw on the chemical the smoke and fire burst out so suddenly that he was driven back.

"I walked down the corridor to the main door of the chamber, stepped to one side of the Speaker and said: 'Mr. Speaker, the House is on fire.' There was no panic. The Speaker promptly adjourned the House and ran to the door. At the same moment the policeman and an attendant rushed down the corridor shouting 'Fire!' The House is on fire!"

Could Have Quenched It.

"It was pretty sudden, but if I had known that the policeman didn't intend to throw his coat on it, I would have taken mine off. In moments such as those, one naturally looks to the policeman, and perhaps that is why I overlooked the part I could have played.

"There was a five gallon bottle of mineral water outside the reading-room door and this could have been broken on the fire, and extinguished it.

Someone's Carelessness.

"I am certain that the fire was not caused by enemies, as members are smoking in there all the time, and I think that possibly some member, in glancing over the files, dropped a cigar butt or a match which set the papers to smouldering. The moment that the policeman rushed in and parted the papers to throw the chemical on it, the flames shot up.

"The building was a veritable fire trap. If there had been a fireproof door, I could have shut it. There was lots of time."

Food for Flames.

The newspaper room was a small room, about 30 x 40 feet, with low ceiling, on the same floor as the Commons Chamber, and at the back of its north end above the passage leading to the library. The room was filled with wooden reading stands, and its walls were given up to cupboards and shelves in which were stored many papers. The whole room was finished in varnished white pine and would make ready fuel for the flames.

93RD BATTALION BAND GIVE GOOD MUSIC

For Skaters at the Brock St. Rink—At Rink To-night and To-morrow Night

Saturday night brought out one of the best crowds of skaters of the season. There will be few nights for skating this week—to-night, to-morrow afternoon and night and Saturday afternoon and evening. Hockey will be played at the Rink on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. The ice is fine for to-night and with the 93rd Band in attendance to-night and to-morrow night there will likely be a good attendance.

ADDRESS BY DEAN McCOLL ON SCOTT

At the meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. on Friday night, Rev. Dean McColl gave an address on Scott's "The Lord of the Isles" that proved very entertaining and delightful.

Rev. Father Phelan and Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien also spoke briefly on Scott's work. Mrs. J. E. Sullivan presided. The musical programme comprised a vocal solo by Miss. Annie Simons, violin solo by Mr. Vincent McCabe, instrumental solo by Miss Geraldine Delaire.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

Yesterday was the opening day of a week of special services at Bethany Tabernacle. Rev. H. M. Shuman of Wilmington, Del. gave a forceful address on the "Power of the Cross" at the morning service.

Two speakers were present at the evening service. After a live song service Mr. Jas. Cuthbertson, who has been working in Japan for many years under the auspices of the International Christian Police Association gave an excellent address on the "Gospel of Heathenism". He said: "Japan has two religions Shintoism, a purely Japanese religion, is the exaltation of such virtuses as Courage, patience and charity to the plain of Diety and when any of their men or women exemplify these virtues in a marked degree, they are also Deified. The other religion of Japan is Buddhism. Neither of these religions can bring true peace to the heart or help the sinner who is bound by the power of sin and habit. The speaker told how the Japanese make long pilgrimages and endure extreme suffering which they inflict upon themselves in order to find deliverance from sin and secure peace to their souls. But they never find it except as they receive the Gospel of Christ. Mr. Cuthbertson was heard with much interest and appreciation and will probably speak again during the week.

Rev. Mr. Shuman followed with an address on "The Will of God" speaking from Col. 4:12. He said "God has a plan for every life and to learn what God's will is for each of us and to walk in the centre of His will is to bring the greatest happiness and blessing to our own lives as well as to our fellowmen. To miss God's will for our lives or to get out of His will is to waste opportunity and to bring upon ourselves loss and sorrow. We can learn God's will by the study of His Word which is His Revealed will. If we would please God we must be faithful in our prayer life. If we cease our private devotions we cease to live spiritually. The greatest safeguard to the religious life of a people is the family altar. It is God's will we should be separated from sin, evil habits and worldliness for He says that "Whosever is the friend of the world is the enemy of God" and exhorts us to separate from these things saying "come ye out from among them and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you and ye shall be my sons and daughters. The Lords purpose for His children is that they consecrate their lives wholly to Him, (Rom. 12:1&2) and be filled with the Holy Spirit in order that we may live consistent and victorious Christian lives and be able to lead others to Jesus Christ. A life lived in the Will of God is certain to result in fruitful service and an active Christian life. It is the Divine pleasure that men should be saved for "He is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance."

Mr. Shuman is a man with a message and knows how to convey God's truth to the hearts and minds of his hearers in such a way that they are sure to be benefited. He spoke this afternoon at three o'clock and will speak to-night at eight o'clock. All are cordially invited to hear him.

15TH BATTALION.

As the stout but haughty-looking lady sailed sedately along the road a small boy spoke to her.

"Your bootlace is loose, ma'am," he said shyly. "Shall I tie it again for you?"

Even a haughtier woman would have found it hard to disdain so kindly an offer, and with a gracious smile, the lady held her foot forward.

The little boy pulled the lace tight and then smiled up at her.

"My mother is fat, too!" he exclaimed.

You Have Already Paid Admission For Address on "Nebulae"

Some people are a little diffident in attending the astronomical meetings, because no admission is charged, or collection taken up.

Let us tell every citizen not to worry on this point, for they surely pay for it, even though they do not pay for admission.

The Astronomical Society is sustained by the Ottawa Government, and every Canadian doubtless pays his share towards its maintainence. Every citizen has a right to attend their public meetings.

There will be a large meeting held in the St. Paul's Church Sunday School Room this week on Thursday evening to listen to Mr. Harper, Dominion Observatory, Ottawa.

He will Lecture on "Nebulae."

Come and bring your friends and hear the latest thoughts about your future homes.

The society publishes a monthly journal, which contains the latest scientific astronomical information, also the observer's hand book containing a celestial map, showing the position of all the prominent stars and the planets.

These maps enable you to readily find any star you may wish, its name, etc.

All these books are sent free to every member for one year for $3.00 per year.

But it is not necessary to be a member to attend the meetings. You pay for the meetings, come and enjoy them.

A Plea For The Youngster

If the fans of Peterborough miss the play-off games between the 93rd and Electrics this week they are not worthy of the name. The teams have been playing clever hockey, and are worthy of better support than they have been getting. The Soldiers, of course, are always sure of a following as their comrades at the Armouries are with them to a man, but the civilian fans have not been turning out as they should. In the Electric team this year they have a home-brew aggregation of youngsters, for with two exceptions they are all juniors, or just out of the junior series, and an outfit that has been demonstrating what The Examiner has always contended that Peterborough was capable of raising as good hockey material as any other centre, if the youngsters were given a chance, and were well supported. This year the Electric management has not hesitated to use junior players on its intermediate team, and strange to say there was not as many fans always seemed to think much difference between the two classes. So far in the group race no less than seven junior players have been used in the intermediate ranks and the youngsters have never failed to give a good account of themselves. It is time that the hockey fans of Peterborough woke up. There were many fans who could not see Frank Heffernan as a star until he left Peterborough and became one of the best known amateur defence men in the game. The same thing is true of Joe Dwyer and Grover Halpin, both of whom are starring for Barnia. Half a dozen other young players in the past few years have left Peterborough and made good with other teams, and among this year's juniors are half a dozen players who have every promise of making a shining mark for themselves. But there is little encouragement in trying hard when the fans persistently stay away from the rink.

When a popular sea captain had died, four leading men of the hamlet were selected to write an epitaph, and it was decided that each should write a line. The first wrote his easily. The second puzzled a little, then he wrote his. The third followed even more slowly. But the fourth wrote as if inspired, and the whole verse read:

Here lies the captain of the sea,
Here lies him, here lies he,
Hallelujah, hallelujee,
A. B. C. D. E. F. G.

Yeates Bros. Got Judgment For $320 and Costs in Note Case

Greek Met Greek and the Win Came to Peterborough—Action Against E. H. Mann Regarding Quality of Certain Potatoes-Geo. Stevens, Plaintiff.

COSMOPOLITAN COURT

The County Court sat on Wednesday the 2nd of February and the case of Yeates Brothers against Gust Condos was tried. Judgment was given for the Plaintiffs for $320.00 and costs. The claim was upon a promissory note which had been discounted at the Bank of Commerce.

M. B. Tudhope, of Orillia was solicitor for the defendant Condos, and Gordon and Widdifield for the plaintiffs. There was a County Court sitting on Saturday the 5th inst., and judgment was given in the case of John J. Allen against Lee Peter, John J. Allen suing for $185.00 wages and Lee Peter counterclaiming for $200.00 damages claiming that Allen had removed certain parts of the moving picture machine from his Theatre, the Th-It, when he left his employment. His Honour Judge Hayeke gave judgment for Allen for $185.00 with Division Court costs, and Lee Peter got judgment for $85 on his claim.

Suit Re Potatoes.

At this sitting the action was tried of Geo. Stevens against E. H. Mann, for the balance due upon a carload of potatoes. Mr. Mann claimed that the quality of the potatoes being guaranteed that he was entitled to deduct those that were rotten and not merchantable and also had the right to weigh the dirt and sand that he found in the car. The action took all day to be tried and judgment was reserved in the evening.

POSITIONS FOR THE RETURNED SOLDIERS

A communication, received on Friday, from the Toronto Headquarter of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, gives a list of positions vacant and for which applications are requested. The places are not given where the positions are open, but to applicants who care to apply all information will be given. Should applicants have any difficulty in forwarding a written application if they will come to the office of the Secretary, City Building, Peterborough, the matter will be at once arranged and written and forwarded.

It will, of course, be well to state what qualifications the applicant may have for the position, though it does not follow that not being wholly familiar with the duties is absolutely essential.

The Secretary has a list of firms and employers in Peterborough who have signified their willingness to employ, as soon as they can place, a man returned. Application at the office will be one step toward placing such men as desire work.

Two single men to operate plugging machines, labourers, cabinetmakers, orderly for hospital, invoice clerk, to operate typewriter, returned soldier to act as sergeant in orderly room, able to operate typewriter, man who can write shorthand, man to work on dairy farm, unskilled labour for copper and brass rolling mills, accountant, for Chartered Accountant's office; clerk for broker's office, bookkeeper, cutters, chauffeur and butler, young man, quick writer, and good on telephone; stock-keeper, draughtsman and civil engineer, man and wife (wife to clean halls, man odd jobs), rooms free and small allowance.

For further particulars in regard to the above positions apply to J. Warwick, Secretary Soldiers' Aid Commission, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. Personal applications to be made between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., any day.

Anniversary Services of the George Street Methodist Church

Rev. E. B. Lancley of Toronto, Preaches Two Inspiring Sermons To Large Congregations—His Evening Message: "The Keys of The Kingdom of Heaven."

George Street was most fortunate in its choice of a speaker for its anniversary services. The Rev. Mr. Lancley is a man of outstanding prominence in the Methodist Church. He has held some notable pastorates not the least of which was the splendid Dundas Centre Church of London. Wherever he has laboured there has he left the imprint of his individuality.

To know Mr. Lancley is to love him.

His evening discourse had for its text, Matthew 16:19, "Jesus said: I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."

This world is full of doors, and to every door there is a key. Until the key is found the door stands closed to all treasures lying behind it. But the door opens easily to the man with the key, and multitudes rush in and are enriched.

Man's chief work, perhaps his only work, is to find God's keys for God's doors, God makes. Man only finds and uses. A great deal has been found, but in our Father's house there are so many mansions that discovery has never overtaken creation. Vast worlds lie waiting the coming of the man with the key.

The whole house is locked up with the key; without the key there can be no entertainment. At the touch of the key, however, the house opens up, and its walls become a shelter, even its innermost chambers.

It is not wholly so with houses built with hands, it is so with the temples of literature, art, music and science. Only such men as our friend Renwick can open to us the temple of music. Others have the key of art, others of science; the man with the key can open the galleries by which our lives become enriched.

Even so is it with the Kingdom of Heaven. The gates of hell are hurled against it in vain. Jesus, when He built, built for long ages, and the survival of His religion is a proof of His foresight.

There are those who tell us in these war times that Christianity lies in ruins—a failure. Whose failure is it? When Jesus was driven from the Coast of Galilee, was it Christ who failed? When He was betrayed in the garden was it Jesus or Judas who failed? When He was denied in the court yard, who failed? Was it not the poor fellow who went out and wept bitterly?

Anyone who condemns Jesus is by that very act self-condemned. Never boast you cannot see greatness that the world has seen; you are in the fault. A great poem is always great despite your verdict. A great picture is not judged by your standard of art. He who condemns Christianity, to him the gates of the Kingdom of Heaven are closed.

Except a man is born again he cannot see.

At this point the Rev. Mr. Lancley related an incident which happened during his pastorate in London.

An eminent physician of the city, a man whom he knew very well, came to his house late one Saturday night in February, and asked him to go along with him for a drive. It being Saturday night, intensely cold, and Sunday so near, a preacher might not be anxious to go, but, knowing the Doctor to be a skeptic, and the call unusual, he replied: "All right, Doctor, I'll go."

The Doctor was not only a skeptic but he was a philosopher, a mighty man of thought, a great reader, whose library was filled with books on theology, philosophy and science.

They had driven but a short distance when the Doctor said: "Say, what does it mean 'to be born again?'"

Mr. Lancley could have given an answer to suit Dr. Carman—the old orthodox, catechism answer, but Dr. Carman was not a skeptic, the other was. Had he given that to the Doctor; it would have been an unknown tongue. A scientist must be answered scientifically; a philosopher, philosophically. Mr. Lancley gave his answer by way of illustration.

I am a preacher; I want to be a farmer. What must I do? In the first place I would get some books on the farm, read agriculture, study the relation of seeds to soil, go into it thoroughly. After mastering the theory, then I would go out and live on a farm; lay aside my minister's garb and don the toga of a farmer; find out by experience all I could about harrowing, seeding, harvesting; I would eat what the farmer ate; I would drink what the farmer drank; read what the farmer read; in short I would live in the atmosphere of the farm—I would be born into the spirit of the farmer. I was a preacher, now I am a farmer.

Again, I want to be a Christian. First, I get hold of the Christian's book; I study the ideal Christian—the life of Jesus; then I would go and live in the atmosphere of Christians—enter into their fellowship; I would lay aside my old habits, and put on the habits of a Christian; I would feed on what a Christian feeds on; I would drink at the Christian's fountain; in other words, I would be born of the Spirit of the Christian. How does that suit you?

Well, that is sane, it sounds reasonable.

Then that's all you need; if you are honest in your search the great God, by some means, comes down into man's soul and takes possession of his heart, and he becomes a new creature in Christ Jesus.

Continuing, the speaker asked: "Where are the successors of Peter? Who has to-day the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven? To Peter, James and John He gave power to preach the religion of Jesus Christ, until men in far-off lands who had never seen Jesus believed these men and many were born again.

I do not deny that some have been popes, some bishops, but the great majority have been humble men, men who were able to present Christianity in a creditable manner to the people. This is the great need of our own time. Great changes have come in our methods of doing things. We will have to find the key to the inner chambers.

Some would belittle revivals. There are some men in every town who are converted every time a revivalist comes to town. Is it not something to make a man sober for a week? Is it not something to make a world serious for five minutes? But the mission way of presenting Christianity does not reach the intelligent, the thoughtful men, the men who determine the country's faith, the country's character, the character of the age. It is pathetic the way some churches are treating these men.

Some good men, how they need repentance! Some righteous men, how they need regeneration! Some men that know so much, how little they know because they know not God!

The speaker then referred to men he had met, men of remarkable intellect who did not think it worth while to go to Church.

How are they to be reached? Who has the key?

Recently, in Toronto, while waiting at High Park Boulevard for a car a man, a stranger, joined him on the corner; neither spoke; the car stopped and they got on together. The conductor came along and the stranger put in two tickets, and giving Mr. Lancley a nudge on the arm, he said: "There is one for the Church."

"Well, you're a decent fellow anyway, but I don't know you. To whom am I indebted?"

I am a neighbour of your's. I live on the same street.

What is your name? Where do you go to Church?

Now you got me. I have not been inside a church for ten years. Any way I don't take any stock in what you men preach.

You don't know what I preach; by your own testimony you haven't been inside a church for ten years.

Well; we get it in the papers.

No, you don't; they give a lot more than we preach.

Anyway, I am a Free Mason; that's enough for me.

I know something of that myself, and I do not know of any symbolic service that can surpass it, but Masonry cannot be mentioned in the same breath with the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Well, I have no faith in the atonement you preach. I do not believe that Jesus Christ had to die for me.

Neither do I, but I believe Jesus wanted to die for me.

I don't.

Yes you do, or you wouldn't have put in that ticket. Do you know what you did when you put in that ticket? You laid down your life for me, you made a sacrifice for me, you shed your blood for me. What you did is what I am preaching to my people to do; to lay down their lives for others. You are practicing what I am preaching. You are seeking to bring the Kingdom of Heaven to earth.

I think I will go up next Sunday to hear you. He has been coming ever since.

Who has the key to reach these men? What did He give Peter, Paul Luther, Wesley and Drummond, those men who made the House of Jesus a living home?

In conclusion, the speaker said a key should be found in the home. Parents ought to be proud to look on their boys and girls and feel that they can open doors denied to them; that they can give them a chance they never had; that they can open to them the Kingdom of Heaven. To do so the father has got to be a better man, the mother a better woman.

There is only one essential contact with Paul's Jesus and Peter's mother. Get a key for yourself, and there's will not fit. Ask Jesus to open the door of your heart and enter in, then He will put into your hand a key to open the treasures of the House of God, and you will become a new creature in Christ Jesus.

DR. E. V. FREDERICK IS NOW AT ALEXANDRIA

Dr. Frederick cabled a friend in the city yesterday that he has been transferred to the City of Alexandria in Egypt. Dr. Frederick was stationed at the base hospital on the Isle of Lemnos, in the Aegean Sea, and it is not known whether this hospital has been closed or whether Dr. Frederick has been transferred to Alexandria to another hospital or not. He stated that he was well.

Making It Fit.

"Did you hear about the refacement of Mr. Skinner's tombstone?" asked Mr. rown, a few days after the funeral of that eminent captain of industry.

"No, what was it?" inquired his neighbour, curiously.

"What was the epitaph?"

SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE AT MARK ST. METHODIST CHURCH

Not According to the Programme Advertised-Instead Chief Howard Took a Prominent Part --Conscription not the Least of the Lessons to be Drawn.

It is not often that the Mark Street Church puts on anything sensational, but yesterday morning the programme was remarkable for its great variety and burning interest. Instead of the Rev. Mr. Whattam preaching his sermon on "The Christian's Cross," the Sexton delivered one on the subject of "Defective Chimneys," in which he was assisted by Chief Howard and his flying fire fighters.

Early in the day—ten o'clock, to be exact—a number of the "faithful" gathered for their usual quarterly "love feast," in the body of the Church, while below, the furnace was preparing for a busy day. The chimney, however, refused to work in harmony with the furnace and went on a rampage, with disastrous results to the programme.

At the close of the first meeting the people who had been waiting outside viewing the steam escaping from the side of a window and the corner of the tower where the roof joins, took their seats; but they were not to occupy them long for the Rev. Mr. Whattam, in a very calm, reassuring manner, asked them to retire to the parsonage for a while as there was something wrong with the heating of the Church.

A call had been sent in to the Fire Department, and it was not long till Chief Howard and his flying squadron were on hand. After a thorough investigation the Chief assured the Rev. Mr. Whattam that there was no reason why they could not proceed with the service, and he instructed one of the firemen to remain at the Church for the day as a matter of precaution.

As the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was to be administered, at the close of the regular service the sermon was omitted, but the occasion was not without its lessons—indeed there were several "sermons without words."

One might have been on the subject of "Preparedness," with text in Matt. 24:42—"Watch, therefore, for ye know not the hour."

Another might have been on "Confidence," with text in Deut. 3:5—"For ye were afraid of fire." The lesson being that straight flue is better than a crooked one.

Another, "The sacredness of the House of God," with text in Psa. 74:7—"They have cast fire into the sanctuary."

Another, on "Protection, with text in Deut. 33:29—"Let them rise up and be your protection," showing the value of maintaining an efficient Fire Department in case of emergency—or of maintaining an efficient standing army in case of an "emergency." Hark! Did I hear any one say CONSCRIPTION?

Another on 'Fireproof Construction' with text in Proverbs, 26:20—"Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out" which leads to the truth which has been only too apparent for many months that Mark Street needs

A New Church.

A new edifice in keeping with the needs of the district and in conformity with modern ideas of Church construction, would be a mighty stimulus to the work of the Church in Ashburnham. Or might we not go a step farther and hope for Church Union for there are enough Methodists and Presbyterians in East City alone to put up and maintain a Church which would be a credit to the community.

Another sermon might have been on the far-off subject of "Peace," with text in Jas. 3:5: "How great a matter a little fire kindleth," which in turn would lead on to the great "World War," or "The World on Fire." At present the flames have spread to almost every part of Europe and parts of Asia, with a peculiar unpleasant smell of smoke on this continent (Remember Ottawa). Many brave volunteers have joined the fire-department (Our glorious Army) at the call of the motherland, many of whom have left the fold of old Mark Street. Conspicuous on the wall of the auditorium is an

DEATH OF A WELL KNOWN PETERBORO' MAN

John Booth Simpson Was a Member of the Peterborough Championship Lacrosse Team—Was Known as "Simmie" Simpson

WENT TO VANCOUVER

Booth Simpson, aged 54 born in Peter-

In the above brief notice, which is the usual notice of death when an ordinary man passes away, not many would recognise that it marks the passing of one of the sterling pioneer characters of Vancouver. But with the notice reading "Simmie" Simpson the loss to the community will be realized and thousands of men will mourn one whom they knew as a friend. For "Simmie" Simpson had only friends during his life. If he had an enemy nobody remembers it. Men in every walk of life knew "Simmie" as their friend. He was a friend of the poor and the rich, the high and low, and all these were his friends, for he was a man of the large heart kind, the sort of man people went to tell their troubles; to seek sympathy from an get advice. He was the kind of man whose death leaves a real void in the community. He wasn't in the public eye, he held no high office of trust; but he was just an important public man seen everywhere on almost every occasion, always pleasant and never alone, for he attracted friends and strangers to him and his friends were a multitude.

Attracted by Hemorrhage.

Only last Thursday night he was engaged in a lively game of billiards at the Hotel Vancouver. But that was the last the majority of his friends were to see of him. He walked across the street from the hotel and was attacked by another hemorrhage. He was taken to his rooms in the Castle hotel too weak to even smile and when he couldn't smile his friends adways knew "Simmie" Simpson was a pretty sick man. So he was hurried to the West End hospital, where he soon lapsed into unconsciousness and his soul peacefully passed to His Maker at 2.45 Sunday morning.

Mr. Simpson came to Vancouver in April 1886. He followed the trade of newspaper compositor and went to work on the old "Herald." Then John Meeng started the "World" and 'Simmie'" Simpson laid the first cases—that is he put the brand new type into their proper boxes and went to work. He was with the World awhile and went over to The News-Advertiser, and for some time worked for Hon. Mr. Carter-Cotton. Before coming to Vancouver he was a member of the Peterboro championship lacrosse team which held the Glidersleeve cup from 1880 to 1883 He was also on the championship Vancouver team from 1888 to 1890 with J. P. Hall, W. D. Wood, A. E. Suckling, J. Smith, J. Bigham, Phil Wade, H. E. Rankin, Sol Oppenheimer, H. J. Quigley, A. Godfrey, W. Taylor, C. E. Davidson, W. Law, D. Smith and H. McGregor

About this time the hotel business engaged Mr. Simpson's attention and shortly afterward he bought an interest in the old Boulder. In the early nineties he went to Victoria and while there owned the Brown Jug and the Garrick's Head. In 1910 he returned to Vancouver and took over the Windsor, now the Castle. Since selling out the Windsor he had done little except to represent well-known eastern cigar firm. His last work was as manager of the mayoral campaign of the Hon. Joseph Martin in the last election.

Mr. Simpson was married in Peterboro to Miss Hattie S. Gordon, on November 14, 1883, who survives him. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. M. J. Clarke, with her mother here. He was the last of his line, his father and two brothers dying during the past four years. Mrs. George Simpson of Victoria, is his sister-in-law.

"BRINGING UP FATHER."

"Bringing Up Father," Gus Hill's presentation of the newspaper cartoon hero "Jiggs" Mahoney, brought laughter to the Grand where it was seen at matinee and evening performances on Saturday. The troubles of "Maggie" in trying to climb the steep cliffs of society and to drag "father" with her are very funny, and the audience enjoyed the production, which was marked by some enjoyable singing and dancing. John R. Cain was very funny as "Jiggs." Among the best of the song numbers was the duet "Love, Love, Love," and the song "I Want You," which made such a hit last year.

Meeting of the Board of Trade Tuesday Night

There will be an open meeting of the Board of Trade in the Council Chambers on Tuesday evening, February 8th at 8 p.m., to discuss the recent activities among German sympathizers and agents in Canada, and to obtain suggestions as to the methods to be adopted to check further attempts and to consider the question of better protection against forest fires and other matters. All citizens interested are requested to be present.

—The proverbial caution in the Scottish character leads Mr. Malcolm Stark to tell this story in "The Pulse of the World—Fleet Street Memories." A happy couple were up from Ayrshire spending a silver jubilee, and went to the Earl's Court Exhibition. The wife had recently been presented with new teeth having a gold plate. When the time came for the Scotch lassies to sing, they gave the ever-thrilling "Ye Banks and Braes," and there was an immediate rush to that part of the show. In the midst of the crush that followed, the husband said:—"I hae my hand firm on my watch, Kirsty; mind ye your teeth." "I took guid care tae dae that afore I left the hotel. I locked the teeth in the bag!"

MARVELLOUS MUSIC

Wonderful Russians Extraordinary Inspiration

Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky have created an impression in Canada that will undoubtedly leave its effects for many years to come. It has been said by the critics, that no artists in the history of Canada have ever created such enthusiasm and such interest in music. They have probably done more to stimulate music in Canada than any twelve great artists that have visited the Dominion.

The Melbourne 'Age' of June 23nd speaking of the Cherniavskys, says:

"The clever Cherniavski trio, Leo the violinist, Jan, the pianist, and Mischel, the 'cellist, all gave convincing proof of their musicianship. A few years ago they were regarded as wonder-children, but now they have entered the ranks of mature artists, and must be regarded as such. To an audience that comprised a large section of the "popular element" the chamber music of Tschaikowsky and concertos for violin by Paganini and Liast must have come as an unexpected experience. Jan Cherniavsky made a great impression. His interpretation was marked by an admirable grasp of the essential spirit of the rhapsodic music and also by the brilliance of his technique. He was recalled several times and added Paderewski's minuet and a Toccata by Leschetisky as encores. Mischel Cherniavsky chose for his 'cello solos a beautiful Canatible by Cui, Popper's "Arlequin" and as the extra numbers the latter composer's Papillon and the Broken Melody (Var Bione.) The early promise of Mischel Chedniavskyk is being amply fulfilled and the future will bear more of him. Leo Cherniavsky gave a spirited performance of Paganini's violin concer to No. 2, in D. major—the well written cadenza being from the artist's own pen. In the early portion of the programme, the Cherniavskys gave an enjoyable rendering of Tschaikowsky's. A minor trio in which collectively and individually they were heard to advantage, the sensitive and delicate work of Leo Cherniavsky being particularly noticeable.

FIREMEN SUMMONED TO CHURCH.

The chimney of the Mark Street Methodist Church took fire yesterday morning just as the congregation was about to assemble for service. As a matter of precaution a call was sent in to the Fire Hall and the people vacated the church while the firemen investigated the cause of the trouble, which proved to be an over-heated furnace and a soot-begrimed flue which is none too straight in its route to the sky.

About 11.30 the pastor re-assembled his flock after the Chief had assured them that there was absolutely no danger.

WEDDING BELLS

CONROY—COLLINS.

On Wednesday, January 26th St. Mary's Church at Campbellford, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding when Rev. Father Whibbs united in marriage Miss Grace Collins, daughter of Mr. Patrick Collins, to Mr. James Conroy, son of David Conroy of Peterborough.

The bride wore a navy blue military suit with black velvet picture hat and carried a bouquet of white sweltas and lily of the valley. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Ella as bridesmaid, who wore a navy blue suit with black velvet hat and carried a bouquet of pink sweltas with lily of the valley.

Mr. Herbert Deane of this city ably performed the duties of best man.

Immediately after the wedding ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride where a sumptuous dinner was served.

After a short wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Conroy will reside at 193 Stubbles St., Peterough.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOS. STEEN.

The death occurred Sunday morning at 9:30 of Jane Nevin, relict of the late Thos. Steen, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. B. M. Frederick, 102 Dublin street. The deceased was 78 years of age, and was born in Ireland. She came to Canada at the age of sixteen, settling at Campbellford. At her marriage she moved to New York State, but some years later she returned to Campbellford where her husband passed away thirty years ago. She was well known in Campbellford where she enjoyed the esteem and respect of all with whom she came in contact. Of a family of nine children only one, Mrs. B. M. Frederick of this city survives her. Mrs. A. L. Webber, of Middleport, N.Y., is a granddaughter.

The funeral service will be held this evening at 7 o'clock at 102 Dublin street. The remains will be taken to Campbellford on the 9:30 train where interment will take place.

MRS. ELIZABETH BURNS.

The death occurred yesterday at the residence of her son, Mr. John Burns, Frank street, Brownton, of Mrs. Elizabeth Burns, at the age of seventy-eight years. She was born in Ireland, but came to Canada at the age of two years. She is survived by two sons and two daughters.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock from the above residence to the Church of the Sacred Heart. Interment in St. Peter's cemetery.

ANNUAL REPORT OF PARENTS' CIRCLE

Queen Mary's School Organization Has had Successful Year

During 1915 we may not have been quite as active as in the previous year for we found less need, the children at school being comfortable and very few cases reported by the different teachers. During February and March we held sewing meeting each week. Thirty children were clothed and 7 mothers assisted. We also made a number of warm quilts which we sold at 50c or 75c each to worthy members who did not wish to take them free gratis. Our circle was addressed during the year by Dr. Middleton, Rev. Mr. Rollins and Dr. Neal. These addresses I feel sure were a great help to all.

In June we ended our meetings for the summer months by holding a picnic at Jackson Park; to this we extended an invitation to the children of the members. Over 80 attended and the afternoon thereby enjoyed by all. We have received and returned visits from the different school clubs and three reports have been sent to the Mothers' Club at the Y. This has kept us in touch with the work of the different circles.

During the past year visits have been made, fruit and flowers sent to sick members. In November Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Stevenson explained to the circle what the Womans' Council was and the good work it has been doing. We hope our Circle will affiliate with the Council in the near future.

In February we hope to start and have regular weekly meetings for social benefit and to do anything we can to try and help one another.

We must not overlook our president, who by her interest and kindness has helped us during the years we have worked together. Let us all have some aim in view and do it; there is so much that can be done if we only look, and I feel sure all working together we will make the year 1916 the best year of all.

—Secretary of 1915.

ANNUAL MEETING OTONABEE CHAPTER, OF THE I.O.D.E.

Encouraging Reports Read—Officers for Year Elected

The annual meeting of the Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, February 5th.

Reports were read by the secretary and treasurer and Miss Hartshorne gave a short report of the work of the St. Julien Chapter.

It was decided that the matter of the purchase of a piano by the chapter should be left in abeyance for the present.

Greatly to the regret of the chapter, the secretary, Mrs. Allen, announced that she would be unable to fill the position for another year, owing to the pressure of work in connection with the Red Cross Society and her numerous other interests.

A resolution was passed that a very hearty vote of thanks be tendered to Mrs. Allan on behalf of the chapter for the exceedingly capable manner in which she had performed her work during the past year. This was carried by a standing vote.

The following officers were elected:

Regent—Mrs. Huycke.
1st vice Regent—Mrs. W. H. Dunsford.
2nd vice Regent—Mrs. Allan.
Treasurer—Mrs. Aylmer.
Secretary—Miss Helen Denison.
Echo Sec.—Mrs. A. E. Sherwood.
Standard Bearer—Mrs. A. H. Stratten.
Councillors:—Mrs. P. Campbell, Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Denison, Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. Crestman, Mrs. Porter, Miss Lundy, Miss Nan Hall, Miss A. Wood.

Tea was served at the close of the meeting.

Pte. Doleman Is Wounded

Word has been received that Pte. Edward Doleman of the 21st Battalion, has been wounded in the back with shrapnel, and is in hospital in France. The news came from a friend who visited him in hospital, Jan. 19. No official news has been received yet. His parents reside at 44 Lafayette Avenue.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Lackawanna steel broke 6 1-8 points to 76 at the opening of the stock exchange to-day following the announcement that the company had withdrawn from negotiations as a member of the proposed independent steel merger. The general list opened strong reflecting favorable sentiment regarding the Lusitania reports. Baldwin locomotive was up 2 3-4 points. U S Steel sold at 85 3-8 up to 7-8 and Mexican Petroleum advanced 2½ points to 119. Railroads were strong.

New York, Feb. 7.—Wall street received news of the purchase of the Cambria Steel Co. by Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co., with the greatest interest to-day as it is regarded as cheapening for the time being at least entire aspect of plans for big steel merger along the line of the United Steel Corporation which Standard Oil interests have been perfecting.

The trading pace slackened in the mid-afternoon and at 2 o'clock prices were steady, fractionally under the day's best figures. Sales for the four hours were nearly half a million shares.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. F. W. Waldon of Toronto, spent the week-end with Mrs. William Belleghem, Bethune Street.

Owing to illness, Mrs. W. C. Austin, 546 Weller Street, will not receive to-morrow.

Matt. Glasco of the Reserve Battery now stationed in England, is reported to be suffering from appendicitis and is confined in a military hospital. Clancy is a Peterborough boy and at the time of enlisting was a member of the Peterborough Fire Department.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Harding and Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Cotton entertained the members of Murray St. Choir at their home, 306 Park street, on Friday evening last. The time was spent in playing games and music, after which a most delicious luncheon was served and everybody came away feeling they had had a most enjoyable evening.

Rev. E. B. Lancley of the Howard Park Methodist Church, Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the George Street Methodist Church, both morning and evening, yesterday, on the occasion of their anniversary services, and delighted the large congregations that assembled to hear him. During his stay in the city he was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey, who were old parishioners of his.

Mrs. John Steen of Port Hope is in the city, having been called here owing to the illness of Master Fred Staunton, 208 Reid street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Thurston and three children, who have been visiting with Mrs. Thurston's brother, Mr. T. O. Donaldson, 494 London street, for the past two weeks, left on Saturday for a trip to British Columbia before returning to their home at Drinkwater, Sask.

Joffre was inspecting a company at the front. A sergeant-major was brought to him who had been promoted from private and had won the Military Medal and Military Cross. "Shall I make you lieutenant?" said General Joffre. "No mon, General, I have not book learning enough. "Then," said General Joffre, "as you have all you want I can give you nothing, but you will come and lunch with me to-morrow." And next day (adds the Paris correspondent of the Daily Telegraph) General Joffre's car went to fetch the sergeant-major to take him to lunch with the Commander-in-chief.

German Fleet Preparing For Long Expected Dash

Rumours to That Effect Reached London From Dutch Sources To-day—High Hopes That a Great Naval Battle is Imminent

LONDON, Feb. 8.—More rumours that the German fleet is preparing for its long expected dash into the North Sea reached here to-day from Dutch sources, and aroused high hopes in London that a great naval battle is imminent in the North Sea.

All leaves of absence of German naval officers have been cancelled.

Vague rumours that the Teuton naval officers were about to attempt a startling coup poured into London even before the exploits of the German commerce raider that captured the Appam became known.

Socialists in War For Peace

Opposed to Aggression, But Favour Legitimate Defence, Says Belgian Minister

PARIS, Feb. 8.—A memorial service to-day for Mr. Jean Baptiste Semanse, Socialist leader, and once Mayor of St. Bervais, who was a peace advocate but was wounded on the battlefield and died in a German hospital, took the form of a great popular social ...demonstration. Among the speakers were Mr. Marcel Sembat, the French Minister of Public Works, and Mr. Emile Vandervelde, Belgian Minister of State.

Mr. Vandervelde called attention to the fact that the speakers at to-day's manifestation were the same men who had before the war demanded that peace be maintained. They united to-day, he said, to demand war. Their sentiments had not changed, continued the Minister.

"The present war," he said, "inspires them with the same horror, and has made them more pacifist than ever. It is at the price of new sacrifices that peace and liberty will be assured. Socialism is opposed to war's conquests and aggression, but is in favour of legitimate defensive wars."

TEUTONS TELL ROUMANIA SALE GRAIN TO BRITAIN

Is an Hostile Act—Also Denounce Election of Irredentists From Transylvania and Say They Will Take Measures Accordingly

The Austrian and German governments have notified Roumania that the sale of 60,000 wagon loads of grain to England and the election of two irredentists to the Roumanian Parliament from Transylvania are acts hostile to the Central Powers, which will take measures accordingly.

Roumania has replied that the sale of the grain was justified in the interest of the country, and that the election of the irredentists is a matter involving the sovereignity of the people, which cannot be discussed.

The government monopoly of the export of wheat from India, which was originally intended to extend through the fiscal year ending March 31, will be continued indefinitely, probably to the end of the war, it was announced to-day.

The results of the monopoly are stated to have been entirely satisfactory, the net profit to the government of India from the experiment thus far has been about $650,000.

The Times states that the monopoly has been a considerable factor in holding down the price of bread in Great Britain, the entire amount of Indian wheat exported reaching a value to the end of October of $20,000,000 and representing a quantity sufficient to provide four weeks' consumption of the United Kingdom. Meanwhile the Indian producer received an excellent price for his crop, with a minimum speculative activity.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial?

Peps is the discovery!

Peps are little tablets, containing certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

INSTANTLY KILLED BY FALLING TREE

George Robertson, of Villers, Meets Death While Working in His Woods

George Robertson, residing at Villiers, while chopping down trees in his own woods, was instantly killed yesterday when a tree fell on him, striking him on the head. It seems a dog ran in front of him and he was unable to get out of the way of the falling tree.

The late Mr. Robertson was the son of the late Andrew Robertson of Villiers. He was about forty years of age and was unmarried. He is survived by his mother, one brother and three sisters.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 1.30 to the Westwood cemetery.

Bunny's Sure Tale.—About the New Year time a clergyman goes to a farm a few miles out to have a day's shooting. He is a very poor "shot," but a generous giver—facts well known to Jack, the attendant. This year he was out shooting, and a rabbit jumped up about ten yards away. Bang! went both barrels, but Bunny escaped with a whole skin. "Did I hit him, Jack?" he asked in an excited whisper. "I couldna say 'zactly as you 'it 'im, but I must say I never seed a rabbit wuss scared. Ye've improved vastly since last year sir." The clergyman smiled proudly. "An' if ye keeps on improvin' and comes agin next year, why," with a shake of his head, "summat'll happen to that rabbit!"

COUNTY COUNCIL GRANTS TO CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

The following statement of what the County Councils of Ontario have voted for 1916 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund is a splendid evidence of the generosity of the rural districts as exhibited toward this Fund. These contributions do not include what the Townships are giving, nor the voluntary contributions coming from rural parts of the Province, but only what has been voted through the county councils. The record is described by Sir Herbert Ames, hon. secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, as being "a triumph quite equal to that scored by Montreal or Toronto."

Suicides in German Army Increase Owing to Doubts of Final Victory

From a German prisoner the military critic of Rassnieye Outro professes to have received a document of great importance. It is an order of the day, bearing the number 2,107, and issued by Field Marshal Von Hindenburg to the group of armies under his command. The order had evidently been caused by the prevalence of suicide among the German soldiers, which seems to have aroused great anxiety in their commander. This is the Field Marshal's message:

"It is easy for us to comprehend the reasons for the increasing number of suicides in the Russian ranks. Their soldiers recognize very well that a continued resistance on their part will be absolutely fruitless, because the Russian arms, as well as those of France and England, are already now practically defeated. However, it seems as if doubts about the final issue had arisen also among our own troops. Some of our soldiers are said to question the possibility of our success on all fronts and to believe that we will not be able to prevent the Russians from invading our eastern provinces.

"Such doubts, and to some extent, perhaps, the undue prolongation of the war, too, are responsible for the cases of suicide which have occurred recently among our regiments. Happenings of this kind are a disgrace to our glorious country, and the doubts are themselves entirely unwarranted. On the contrary, our latest encounters have shown that in spite of numerical inferiority we are sure always to get the better of the Russians, thanks to our methods of defensive tactics and strategy."

Then follows a eulogy of the Kaiser, laying special stress on his great military genius, and an enumeration of all the victories won by the Austro-German armies. In conclusion the chief commander warns of the severe punishment that will be meted out in every instance of attempted suicide. Here is how the order reads on this point:

"The most rigorous measures, in fact, any available measures will be taken to stamp out this suicide evil, to pull it up, as it were, by its very roots. I have given orders to the corps of surgeons and physicians to use their utmost skill in trying to save the lives of those who may try to kill themselves. If the delinquents are officers, they will be deprived of their rank and tried by court martial. The only reason for the efforts to save the lives of these wouldbe suicides is, that they may get adequately punished for their dishonourable act. Furthermore, I wish to notify all soldiers having a notion to commit suicide, that their names will be inscribed on the black list of the German army. Their wives and children will lose all their rights and privileges, and will never receive the least allowance or assistance from any German authorities."

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Sick, Feverish, Constipated

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

No Shoes For Belgian Children in Liege

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The startling need for shoes in Belgium is seen in the statement of the Rev. Dr C. N. Lathrop, of All Saints' Cathedral, Milwaukee, Wis. Dr. Lathrop returned on board the Noordam from his duties as a delegate in Liege, where he had been stationed since last August.

"The need for shoes in Liege," said Dr. Lathrop, "is so great that the authorities ripped up the rugs in the Town Hall and sent them to a factory to be turned into footwear. The shoes now worn by the peasants are soled with wooden slabs and made of carpet uppers. In the province of Liege to-day everybody is being fed, but there are thousands of families who are without proper clothing. Girls are sent to the homes of the wealthy to beg for old rugs, from which clothes can be made."

Your contribution, large or small, to the local branch of the Belgian Relief Fund will help alleviate some of the distress King Albert's people are suffering.

Trenches a Century Ago.

Trench warfare has prompted memories of the famous "lines of Torres Vedras," which Wellington, when compelled to retreat before the overwhelming forces of Massena, threw up in the autumn of 1810 to protect Lisbon and secure a hold on Portuguese soil for future operations. The lines were the greatest defences of the kind conceived until that time, one twenty-nine miles long, stretching from Alhanda on the Tagus to the sea, a second running almost parallel with the first but ten miles in the rear, and a third, much shorter, extending from Passo d'Arco to the coast. The whole system fortified over five hundred square miles of territory, and presented a barrier against which Massena's forces battered in vain. In March, 1811, his sadly depleted armies had to retreat and Wellington issued from his defences to begin a new campaign that drove the enemy from the Spanish peninsula.

Barbed Wire.

Special machinery has had to be laid down in Britain for turning out the type of wire that is used in front of the trenches. This special wire has barbs more than an inch long, wound on a steel rod, one-eighth of an inch in thickness. The barbs are placed in sets of four at right angles. The barbs are very much sharper than those on the usual barbed wire, and are capable of inflicting severe injury to a horse or man. One firm alone has turned out over a hundred thousand miles of this wire.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

KING OF FLEET STREET.

Great Editor Passes With Death of Lord Burnham.

The world lost a great and good man last week when Lord Burnham, the chief proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph," passed away. Not only was he a brilliant and successful journalist, and the first member of the press to sit as a peer in the House of Lords, but a man of far-reaching interests and of boundless charity, friend of rich and poor alike. Nowhere will he be more sincerely mourned than in the east end of London, where his generosity to the poor has been so often exhibited. King Edward honored him with his friendship and King George continued the tradition. For over half a century he was a power in Fleet Street. The impress of his powerful personality was on every page of his great newspaper; for Lord Burnham was the Daily Telegraph, and the Daily Telegram was Lord Burnham.

During his sixty years of work, or during the greater part of it, no single personal influence in British journalism has been equal to his.

The Daily Telegraph is one of the great newspapers of the world. Lord Burnham's father established it a little over sixty years ago, and Lord Burnham had been identified with its history ever since. It was the first successful penny newspaper in Great Britain.

In his very early days he worked for the removal of the newspaper tax, and brought the morning's news to the poorest breakfast table. Through many changing Governments Lord Burnham occupied an outside position of strength, and his power was frequently above Cabinets.

It is an open secret that His Majesty looks at The Daily Telegraph every breakfast to see what he himself has been doing and saying, and is made to feel in its columns, more than anywhere else, that his realm has four estates. "Edward Rex, of Fleet Street," was one of the late King Edward's yearly titles for his namesake.

Lord Burnham was of Jewish extraction. He was born in London, on December 28, 1833, the son of Joseph Moses Levy. His education he received at University College, London. In his early days he was known as Edward Levy, but under the will of his uncle, Lionel Lawson, he assumed the name of Lawson in 1875, by Royal license. He was created a baronet in 1892; and was raised to the peerage as Baron Burnham in 1903. In 1904 he was created a Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order. He was a Lieutenant for the City of London, and a Deputy Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace for Buckinghamshire. He became High Sheriff for Buckinghamshire in 1886; and President of the Royal Institute of Journalists in 1892.

At Hall Barn, his seat in Buckinghamshire, where he owned 4,000 acres, Lord Burnham entertained many distinguished guests, including King Edward and King George, and famous statesmen, travelers, journalists, and others, from every part of the world.

Under Lord Burnhams aggressive management, the paper became distinguished for its enterprise in many fields. In 1873 it despatched George Smith to carry out archaeological researches in Nineveh, which resulted in the discovery of the missing fragments of the cuneiform account of the Deluge. In co-operation with the New York Herald it equipped H. M. Stanley's second great expedition to Central Africa (1875-1877). Another feat was the exploration of the Kilimanjaro, by Sir Harry Johnston, in 1884-85.

Irish Emigration Drops.

Official figures of Irish emigration for 1915 are the lowest on record. Excluding the emigrants — about 3,000—to Great Britain, most of whom went there for work in the munition factories, the total number of emigrants from Ireland to all parts of the world was just over 8,000. The yearly average for the last 15 years was more than 34,000.

The change is due in part to the war, and also partly to the gradual amelioration of conditions in Ireland, owing to the remedial legislation. The figures show a drop of 57 per cent. below those of the previous year, which were unusually low. There has been for some years a steady diminution in emigration.

Ulster heads the list of emigrants, with Leinster next, Connaught third, and Munster last. In 1914 the passages of 3,752 emigrants were paid for by friends in the United States. Last year the number of passages paid was only 396.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Easily Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm tickle out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its cure, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds.

Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FAT AND FORTY.

Some Hints For Stout People Who Wish to Reduce in Weight.

Getting fat means that there is, physically speaking, either an excessive income or a deficient outgo, or both. From this the remedy would appear simple. Theoretically it would be either to limit the income of fat producing foods or, once they are eaten, burn them up and get rid of them, or both, and presto the change is made! In practice, however, after certain habits of eating and living have been indulged in for from thirty to forty years it is not always the easiest thing in the world to form new habits. Only those with abundance of will power will succeed. Jellyfish, with jellyfish backbones and jellyfish determinations, will usually go on resembling more and more the proverbial jellyfish or mack of meal in figure. There is little hope for them.

For those who mean business, however, there is much hope. Much can be accomplished and much more prevented by observing the following suggestions: Drink three glasses of hot water, to which has been added half a lemon, half an hour before eating breakfast.

For breakfast indulge sparingly in baked apples, stewed prunes or similar fruit, omitting cereals, sugar and cream. Let dinner consist very largely of salads and vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes, turnips, cabbage, greens, spinach, celery, etc. Let supper consist largely of the same things, being careful to avoid cakes, sweets, nutshes, bread, especially fresh bread, or soggy biscuits. Hard toasted graham wheat bread may be tolerated in small amounts.

For the best results it is highly essential that bulky rather than nourishing foods and laxative rather than constipating foods be eaten.

By all means live, work and sleep in the open air. Burn up all excess avoirdupois possible by breathing exercises, by walking and by exercising rather severely every day. Get up "a good sweat" every day. Avoid a sluggish, indolent, indifferent life and disposition. Be active mentally and physically. In other words, keep busy.

Best Advice.

When General Beck was a young lawyer a man was arraigned for murder and had no counsel.

"Mr. Beck," said the presiding judge, "take the prisoner into that room at the rear of the court, hear his story, and give him the best advice you can."

Accordingly Beck disappeared with the prisoner, and in half an hour's time returned into court—alone.

"Where is the prisoner?" asked the judge.

"Well," replied Beck, slowly, "I heard his story, and then I gave him the best advice I could. I said: 'Prisoner, if I were you I'd get out of that window and make tracks.' He slid down the water-pipe, and the last I saw him he was getting over a stone wall half a mile away."

Victoria Stamps Invalid.

Postage stamps bearing the likeness of Queen Victoria, were rendered invalid by law at the end of last June. They might be redeemed by exchange up to the end of 1915. They are now definitely out of use.

German Nobility's Losses.

The new "Almanach de Gotha," just published, shows that in the first ten months of this year there have been killed 186 German counts, 458 barons, 692 members of the old nobility, and 552 of the later nobility.

Putting Him in His Place.

John Morrison, an elderly Scot laird, had an ancient valet named Gabriel, whose petulance and license of speech went so far as to be intolerable. One day at dinner Gabriel took the liberty of calling something which his master said "a great lee." "Weel," said the laird, really offended and rising from the table, "this will do no longer. We must part at last."

"Hoot, tout!" replied Gabriel, pressing his master into the chair. "Whaur wad her Honor be better than in yer ain house?"

WAR'S GRIM TOLL.

England's Nobility Hard Hit by Devastating Conflict.

Robbed of the means for obtaining comfort to which their toil in scenes of present needs, had justly entitled them, for use in their declining years; in addition to the far greater loss of those most near and dear of the household, the common people, of those countries still savagely tearing at each other's throats have suffered beyond the power of men to comprehend. In no less degree, also, the people higher up in the social scale have been hard hit by war's grim toll. The recent appearance of a volume listing the men of title in England's aristocracy discloses the awful gaps that have been shot out in the last 18 months of armed conflict, and were the figures available it would be found that the other nations engaged have suffered no less severely.

These months of war have brought sad changes in most of the families referred to in the list mentioned, for "the response made by members of the titles and untitled aristocracy has been both spontaneous and patriotic in the extreme, involving corresponding sacrifices and losses in the ranks of those—heroes all—who have placed, and are continuing to place, their services so freely at the disposal of their country in the national emergency."

A full "roll of honor" of those who have been reported as killed in action, or as having died of wounds since the commencement of the war, forms a unique, interesting, and instructive list of 500 names. An analysis shows that it contains the names of 1 member of the royal family, 6 peers, 16 Parsonets, 6 knights, and 7 members of Parliament, while no less than 164 companions, 25 sons of peers, 52 sons of baronets, and 54 sons of knights had fallen up to the date of compilation.

It is noted, too, that the death of Lord Worsley affects succession to three separate peerages, the Earldom of Yarborough and the baronies of Faucomberg and Conyers. Among them, too, will be found 51 heirs to hereditary titles, and it may be said that, as an immediate result of the war, either the succession has been unduly precipitated or the normal descent has been changed in more than a hundred instances since hostilities commenced, owing in the former case to the premature death in action of the actual holder of the title, or in the latter case to the death of his immediate heir or even of successive heirs.

In several instances the peerage or baronetcy in question, being now without heir in remainder through the sole heir having been killed, is threatened with possible extinction unless the royal prerogative is exercised in their favor.

Science, music, art, literature, sculpture, painting, the professions —all have suffered terrible depletion of their ranks as a result of this damnable war and no country engaged is exempt from the awful toll exacted. An ocean of the best blood has been shed. Hatreds which will not die out in generations have been shot into the minds of the combatants. Burdens of debt will continue to bow the backs of enslaved toilers for years and years to come. The utmost grief human hearts can know has already saddened millions of homes and shattered remnants of what once were men will drag out the remainder of their days in misery and despair.

To what great end? Will a single object be accomplished which could not have been attained through peaceful ways had common sense prevailed? Not one! Nor yet so much as the shadow of one! The tremendous sacrifice is for naught. Will men who toil and women who weep learn a lesson thereby for their future guidance? Will the next crowned head demanding war be promptly elevated on a spear at the gatepost of his nation in grim warning to the others, while the great world of sensible folk go on about their legitimate business of living and loving as becomes men and women of this age? God grant that this may be so!

"Labby's" Prank at Eton.

Thorold, in his "Life of Labouchere," tells this story of young "Labby" while he was at Eton:

"While the old chapel was being restored a temporary chapel of wood and iron was run up. The corrugated iron roof made the heat intolerable during the summer months, so Labouchere hit upon a plan to put a stop to the nuisance of 'chapel in the shanty.' One boy was to pretend to faint and four others were to carry him out. A fifth was to follow bearing the hats of the performers.

"The plan worked admirably. The service was brought to a temporary stop, and the boys as soon as they were outside scampered merrily off and procured some agreeable refreshment. The repetition of this comedy, of course, aroused the suspicion of the masters, but, nevertheless, like many of Labouchere's intrigues in later life, it produced eventually the desired effect. There was no more chapel during the hot weather until the restoration of the old chapel was complete."

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

An excellent way to clean carpets after you have rid them of all the dust is to get one ounce of, good soap, one pennyworth of ammonia, and two pennyworth of methylated spirits. Dissolve the soap in a pint of boiling water. After it is cool put in the ammonia and then the methylated spirits. Make the quantity up to one quart by adding cold water and wash the carpet well with the liquid. Leave to dry and you will be astonished with the results. This only costs a few coppers.

Paraffin applied on a piece of flannel will remove grease from gas cooker or range as if by magic. It can afterwards be polished in the usual way. Used in the same way it effectively cleans the sink "in the twinkling of an eye." A little in the water when washing linoleum removes the dirt and helps to preserve it.

The best way to remove iron mould from white linen or cotton articles is to pour hot water over the stain and allow to soak for two or three hours. Pour off the water and just cover the stained place with hot lemon juice and allow to stand for further two or three hours. Then wash the articles in the ordinary way.

When the woodwork of the kitchen or parlour looks greasy and dirty, it can be made just like new at very little expense. First of all wash it all thoroughly with soap and water so as to remove as much dirt and grease as possible, then allow all the wood to dry thoroughly. When perfectly dry take a soft piece of flannel and soak it with linseed oil, and rub it well into the wood and it will look just like having been newly painted. It will also preserve the wood. Also if leather chairs are rubbed with linseed oil it will keep the leather from cracking, and will take away the faded appearance.

SERBIAN MOTHER'S STORY OF FLIGHT

Incredible Hardships Endured Making Way Out of Country Over Frozen Mountain Trails.

Miss Helen Losanitch, who is a daughter of Professor Michael Losanitch of the University of Belgrade, and who is now in New York, received a letter from her mother in which Mme. Losanitch, who is among the Serbian refugees in Albania, tells a pitiful story of the flight of the Serb civilian population before the advance of the eutonic and Bulgar armies. The letter, dated Scutari, December 16, follows in part:

"These are the darkest days of our life, and I wonder why we still have hope, and where we expect help to come from. Your father and I left Nish, October 19, with the Government, and now for two months we have been groping blindly from place to place, all the time hoping something good will happen to Serbia, but good fortune is not for us now.

"We went from Nish to Kralievo, then to Rashka, Mitrovitza, Prisrend, and then past the Field of Kossovo, where our nation once was crushed and once had a wonderful victory. All the time of this wandering from place to place we were hoping for better things, but when we left Prisrend we were headed for a foreign country with sorrow and aching hearts. We started for Montenegro, and I cannot describe what we felt; when we left our country both your father and I were crying. We had started, but we did not know for what destination. We went to Jaconitas and then to Ipek, and after that our real suffering began. There we hired horses and started November 22. The sun was bright, but for us the day was dark indeed.

"We were a whole caravan of people—some in carts, some on mules, and most of us walking, bound no one knew whither. The first night we passed on a verandah. Of course, it was bitterly cold, and there was no sleep, as we had no blankets. I lay with my head on my little sack, thinking of our sad fate and of our country and wondering whether this was reality or a dream. I was thinking about you, my dear child, and then about my dear ones who stayed behind in Serbia—your grandmother, who is too delicate to move, and your aunt, who stayed with her—and all the sufferers lying near me. Not far from us soldiers had lit a fire and were warming themselves, poor, brave things! Now they are very silent. From time to time we heard talking, but no longer heard their gay soldier songs and flutes. Every one of us was silent, every one said and heart-broken, every one thinking of the fate of our unhappy country and of our poor soldiers. There is nobody we shall blame, but history will tell the truth to the world.

"Very early in the morning, while the moon was still shining I had to go to a little brook to wash before we started. We were walking now, climbing Mount Tchakar (6,000 feet). The whole way was covered with snow, but that was the only pass to Scutari. After climbing the mountain and descending on the other side, at the foot we found a village, and you can imagine how tired father and I were. We staggered into the first doorway, and, though there were only two benches in the room, it seemed Heaven, for there was a fire in the middle of it. I lay down on a bench and father made tea, which cheered us. We passed the night on the benches, with no covering but our clothes.

"The next morning we got horses and rode along the Iber, with the river on one side and mountains rising on the other, to Andreivatz. There were moments when the passage was almost too narrow for horses, and we walked much of the way. In Andreivatz we met M. Bop (the French Minister) and Mr. Milschovitch (the Montenegrin Minister), and we had our dinner together, and talked about the miseries of Serbia and her fate.

"The next day we had little mules. You can imagine me riding with no saddle, only a blanket, and we crossed mountains 5,500 feet high. The zig-zag trail was fairly good, except that the bridges were down and the fords were dangerous. The sun shining on the snow was beautiful, and the scenery was more than lovely, but none among us had the heart to enjoy it. We passed the night at a Turkish han (inn), and I shall never forget the distress of mind I felt when I woke in the morning and saw the snow falling, driven by a high wind, and I knew we must go on nevertheless! That was the worst day of all. We could not keep our eyes open, with the blinding snow in our faces, and we went on without a word, always hurrying. We sometimes walked and sometimes rode. About five o'clock we were stopped by a river which we could not cross. All were exhausted, and we took what poor shelter the rocks and trees offered, and passed the night with no sleep."

When the letter was written Mme Losanitch had been waiting in Scutari two weeks for a boat for Italy. She tells of the pitiful conditions existing among the refugees, and adds that many of these unfortunates had died of exposure and hunger.

"Be brave," the letter concludes. "Everything must be home. Pray God that better times will come for serbia. We shall meet again and all tell each other our experiences. But it is hard to be brave. Tell your generous and good friends in America what misfortune has befallen your dear country, and give my cordial greetings and heartfelt thanks for all their help, not only for Serbia, but to you in these dark moments."

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Home Health Club

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

Accidental Poisoning—It is only of recent date that I have fully realized the terrible danger that many people are constantly subjected to by reason of keeping poison in a medicine chest. There is, according to my belief, absolutely no good reason why any one, even a physician, should keep poisons in the family medical supply. I have always called it gross carelessness when I read accounts of how a doctor or a nurse, or even a layman, took poison by mistake for some harmless remedy, but I have changed my mind.

I am quite methodical regarding a place for everything and everything in its place, especially regarding toilet articles, clothing, home remedies and the like. I have frequently said that I could, in the dark, find any articles of my wearing apparel, my shaving outfit or my ome remedies, unless some one else removed them from their accustomed place.

In my home medicine cabinet I keep a lotion of glycerine and witch hazel for use after shaving. It is in a six ounce flat bottle. Right beside it stands a similar bottle filled with a saline antiseptic solution to be used as a mouth wash, after the tooth brushing. Recently when in a hurry I picked up the face lotion and even as I drew the cork, the thought flashed through my brain that the contents were darker than usual. Something else attracted my attention for the instant and I took a big mothful and began to rinse my mouth. Of course, there was no harm done as there was no poison in it, but if I had intended to swallow a dose it would have been down whether it was poison or not.

Many years ago when I was in charge of a city hospital we used many bi-chloride of mercury tablets and as familiarity leads one to overlook danger, I also kept a bottle of this at home, always, however, in a separate compartment, securely locked and with the key in a special place. One day I found my little boy playing with the key. I at once examined to see if he had opened the locked compartment, he had not, but I dumped the poison into the sewer and none has been in my house to this day.

"Errare est humanum" is a saying that is older than the English speaking race. "To are is human" holds good now and always will. Poisons as medicine or even as antiseptics are unnecessary. There are many non-poisonous remedies, enough for every human ailment. They may not produce such a profound effect as the poisonous dose, neither is there danger of killing you if the druggist or the doctor makes a slight mistake in putting it up or in the directions, or in case a child should get hold of it or you use it by mistake at the wrong time.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, colour or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinges of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

15 YEARS SUFFERING FROM PILES

Mr. J. McEwen of Dundas, Ont., writes:—"For fifteen years I suffered with Piles and could get no permanent cure until I tried Zam-Buk. Perseverance with this herbal balm resulted in a complete cure, and I have not been troubled with the painful ailment since."

Mr. Henry Fougere of Pesiemond, N.S., says:—"I suffered terribly with Piles and could find nothing to give me relief until I tried Zam-Buk. This cured me. I consider Zam-Buk the finest ointment on the market."

The above are specimens of the many letters we are constantly receiving from men and women who have ended their suffering by using Zam-Buk. Why not do likewise?

Zam-Buk is best for eczema, blood poisoning, ulcers, sores, cuts, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send this advertisement with name of paper and one cent stamp for free trial box.

MOTORS IN THE DESERT

Incidents of War in Desert of Mesopotamia

A British officer taking part in the Mesopotamia campaign, writing to relatives, says: "At Nasiryeh, they've been having lots of fun. Some piquet in the outpost line there is selected almost nightly for attacks, and bullets fly into the remotest corners of the camp. We have had a certain large and fairly powerful Arab tribe, led by a celebrated cut-throat of the name of "Jamie" (at least that is exactly how his name is pronounced), and they are responsible for these little excitements. We went out two or three days ago and burned a couple of their villages, but haven't yet heard whether this has had a salutary effect or not. They did rather an amusing thing one night. They got into the slaughter house, where there were about 300 sheep, in the dead of night, cut their tails off, and got away with the tails without anybody knowing anything about it till the next morning. After that the entrance to the slaughter house was mined, and a couple of nights later, when, I suppose, they were trying the same game on again, they exploded the mine, and I bagged eight of them. Since then they left the slaughter house alone.

"Our latest attack was not made until we had everything absolutely ready, and when once launched there was no going back on our side. The Turks fought amazingly well up to a certain point, but when full of a sudden, crumpled up, and next moment were in full flight with our cavalry and armored motor cars in pursuit and them. Their defeat was, as usual, were the most up-to-date description, elaborately laid out and pulled to every little detail, but no use to them in the long run. There seems to be something irresistible about the forces in Mesopotamia."

Holy War in Egypt

The only place where the Turkish Jihad might have made some impression in the present war, perhaps, was in Cairo and Alexandria, among the mobs of those cities. Even there the agitation is of political rather than religious origin; being the work of the Denounced Young Egyptians, who are playing more than a second edition of the Young Turks of Constantinople, and the leaders are for the most part Turks, not Arabs, who have resided in Egypt since the Turks were in power in Northern Africa.

TURCO-GERMAN HOLY WAR ONE OF HISTORY'S JOKES

Day of Its Declaration Was Testing Time of a Great Plan That Proved a Fiasco—Years of Plotting

The fact that the Turks put their lot in the balance with the Germans was due chiefly to two main causes. First of all, the Turks having their military instructions from German officers, and some of the Turkish officers, as for instance, the present War Minister, Enver Pasha, having himself resided for a time in Germany they were acquainted with the German military conditions and had formed a firm belief in the strength of the German army and their preparedness. In the second place, the Germans had well persuaded the Turks of the possibility of a revival of Mohammedan religious fanaticism of olden times—a kind of re-institution of that Islamic power that in the past had partly encircled Europe in a crescent shape. The Young Turks, as the old Turks of Abdul Hamid's time, cherished at the bottom of their hearts the great idea of creating a panislamic world under the auspices of the Khalifate of Stamboul. The emissaries of the Young Turks, by well-thought-out methods by the Germans for the last four or five years before the war had gone forth from the Ottoman capital to Northern Africa, to Egypt, to the Caucasus, Persia and India to make world-wide propaganda for the cause of Islam.

To Divide the World

Before the outbreak of the war German representatives approached the Turkish leaders and put the question of a general religious war against such Christian powers as were in conflict with Germany. Their arguments were not enforced with mere words; they promised men and money, and, to start with, $2,500,000 was deposited in the German banks in Constantinople, with which the Mohammedan chiefs were to be won. England, France and Russia had most of the Islams under their yoke, while Germany had none, and the Turks were told that all their co-religionists were to be liberated from the Christian yoke and united with the Osmanli, thus creating a great and powerful Mohammedan Empire in the East, while the Germans, through the strength of their arms, were to subdue the whole of Europe and remain the only dominant Power in the West. Hence Turkey in the Orient and Germany in the Occident were to have the realm of the world in their hands, very much like the plan of Napoleon and Alexander, when they agreed at Tilsit to divide the world a century ago.

Gun Wasn't Loaded

Paradise was promised to the Turks, and they believed they could get it and anything else they wanted. As obedient pupils of the Germans, they followed them, were caught by the bait, echoed their call, and declared the Djihad! Sherif (Holy War of religion). But, as the Oriental proverb says: "The bargain made at home has no value in the bazaar"; so, whatever they had on paper, whatever they had in mind, did not work in reality, and things did not turn out as rosy as they had imagined. After years of war they have learned that the times of religious war have gone, and it is the money and the gun that speak the last word.

PALESTINE AND SUEZ

Germany Wanted a Land Campaign Against Egypt

Germany's object in the Moslem world may have been to embarrass colonial governments and hold large garrisons away from Europe, but the grand object has been always and is still the Suez canal. Since England abandoned the Cape route with its great waste of time the Empire has pinned its faith to the canal, a much shorter if more vulnerable route. The vulnerability did not appear until it was found that the German explorers and tourists and concessionaires in Palestine were building barracks and strategic railways through the Holy Land, and all pointing towards the desert of Sinai and the canal beyond. When their raiding cruisers were caught and their Grand High Seas Fleet bottled up in the Kiel canal the Germans, essentially land fighters, saw their chance in an overland attack on the Suez canal, the Cape route being beyond them.

EAT WITHOUT FEAR OF INDIGESTION OR SOUR, ACID STOMACH

Instant Relief! "Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Your Stomach Trouble Forever

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so nicely and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's unnecessary.

KAISER AND SHAH

Present War and Intrigue Decide Fate of Persia

One of the richest prizes of the present war is Persia, where for years the diplomats of Russia, Great Britain and Germany have been struggling for the ascendancy. Shah Ahmed Mirza, as a boy of 16, was elevated to the throne of Persia in the summer of 1914. The petroleum of Persia is coveted by Germany, and ever since the war began the agents of the Central Empires have been carrying on a diplomatic warfare against the Russians and British. It was once reported that Germany had won, and that the Shah had made a secret treaty with Emperor William whereby he virtually became Germany's ally. Later reports from Teheran stated that the Shah announced his friendliness for Great Britain and Russia, and admitted that he had been offered every inducement to join Germany.

While the Persian Shah is described as a very intelligent boy, and a student and linguist of unusual ability, it is practically certain that he has no real influence on affairs, and that all his words and actions are dictated by his council of ministers. The semblance of independence which Persia has maintained in recent years has been due only to the jealousy of the great powers. The country which was the seat of one of the greatest empires of the ancient world is likely, after the war, to pass under the suzerainty of one or another of the great nations of the west. The fate of Persia will be decided on the battlefields of Europe.

A Declining Population

The present population of the Basra region, of which Ctesiphon is the centre, is no more than 1,500,000, Bagdad included. It is said to have once been 10,000,000, but the decrease has in no way affected the strategic importance of the district.

According to palmists, short hands denote impulsive judgment without analysis, while long hands denote capacity for detail.

BRITISH CAMPS WERE ATTACKED BY A SQUADRON OF GERMAN AVIATORS

Invaders Were Engaged by British Fliers and Chased Back to Their Own Lines---Berlin Makes No Claim of Damages Inflicted on British Positions---German Train Bombarded By French Artillery.

207 CANADIAN BATTALIONS ARE AUTHORIZED

BERLIN, via Wireless, Feb. 8.—A German air squadron attacked the railroad station at Poperinghe and British camps between Poperinghe and Dixmude. The Teuton aviators were attacked by British fliers and engaged in several combats, but returned safely to their own lines.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—(French Official Communique)—French artillery successfully bombarded a German train south of the Somme. In the Argonne region French sappers blew up a mine near St. Hubert, and three others on the Vaquois Plateau.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Russian torpedo boats sank forty Turkish sailing vessels in the Black Sea and bombarded three naval construction yards along the Anatolian coast, according to despatches received here to-day.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Royal Commission to-day warned the people of the United Kingdom that they must use less sugar in future. It was announced that the order restricting the importation of sugar due to lack of sufficient ship tonnage, will go into effect at once.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Daily News correspondent at Rome says Germany is apparently determined to resort to reprisals as well as intimidation in order to prevent Rumania's intervention on the side of the Allies, realizing that only the greatest effort will prevent Rumania's stand with the Allies.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 8.—Prof. Reithdorff, formerly German instructor in Woodstock College, in a statement issued to-day, blames W. G. Weichel, member of Parliament for North Waterloo, for conditions in and around Berlin, Ont. He claims rank pro-Germanism exists, that pro-German papers from across the line are allowed to circulate freely, that no Lutheran churches opened its doors to recruiting officers, and that Weichel made no recruiting addresses. Professor Reithdorff plans to take this matter up at Ottawa.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Wm. J. Bryan is under the ban of the British postal authorities. Several thousand pamphlets printed in Germany, containing Bryan's speech on British rule in India have been seized by the British navy. They will never reach the United States or South American neutrals, for whom they were intended. England is slaughtering thousands of books, pamphlets and newspapers, printed in Germany and shipped by the Germans to the neutral countries.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, was again being mentioned to-day as a possible successor to Lord Kitchener if K. of K. steps out of the War Office. Lord Derby, who directed the recent recruiting campaign, was another civilian whose name was connected with the position.

No confirmation of rumours of Kitchener's impending resignation was obtainable from any authoritative source.

Two Scotchmen, it was pointed out to-day, are now directing the chief operations of Great Britain's armies. Sir William Robert Robertson has taken over Kitchener's most important task that of directing all military operations, and Sir Douglas Haig only recently became commander-in-chief of the British forces in France.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—The Royal Commission into the Parliament fire held a preliminary meeting this morning in the Court House here and will get down to business in earnest about the middle of the week. Judge MacTavish and R. A. Pringle, K.C., are organizing and mapping out the programme of investigation. Another extra matter for consideration will be that of the looting which has taken place since the fire.

The restaurant was broken into and the till robbed. Countless cigars also were stolen. Silver and bric-a-brac were taken from the Speaker's Chamber, and cheques and other documents stolen from members' rooms. The Commission has wide powers of enquiry.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, stated this morning that up to the present time two hundred and seven Canadian battalions of infantry have been authorized.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—President Wilson and Secretary Lansing a few minutes before ten o'clock to-day, took up the consideration of Germany's latest proposal to dispose of the Lusitania case. Their conference was held in the President's private office in the White House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Final settlement of the Lusitania negotiations is now up to Ambassador Von Bernstorff. Administration leaders are "hopeful" that a satisfactory settlement would be reached within twenty-four hours, and probably at a conference late to-day between Secretary of State Lansing and Ambassador Bernstorff.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing to-day passed on the memorandum which was submitted by Von Bernstorff last week, and this afternoon Lansing will tell Von Bernstorff just what this Government has decided.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—President Wilson and Secretary Lansing planned to-day to submit Ambassador Bernstorff's last memoranda on the Lusitania case to the Cabinet. But there was no indication during the forenoon that consideration of what German representatives have called Germany's "last concessions," already twice postponed, might not again be put off.

Some of the optimism which has pervaded German official circles, and congressional circles close to the President received a set-back to-day when a high State Department official was told that German officials have stated in all sincerity their certain belief that the United States would be completely satisfied with the latest proposals.

If the President holds to his intention to discuss the latest proposals at the Cabinet meeting, it is expected Ambassador Bernstorff will be called to the State Department this afternoon or to-morrow to hear the result.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 8.—Knud Rasmussen, Danish explorer, who has travelled much in Arctic regions, is negotiating with the Canadian Government with a view of exploring the remote sections of British America in 1917, it was learned to-day.

WANT GERMANY TO PAY FOR SALONIKA DAMAGE.

ATHENS, Feb. 7.—A Greek special commission has submitted a long report relative to the damage caused to the town of Salchika by the recent attack of Zeppelin airships. A recommendation is made to the Greek Premier that a demand be made on Germany for indemnity.

DANES HOLD 400 FINNS AT RUSSIA'S REQUEST.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A party of 400 Finlanders, en route to America, has been detained at Copenhagen, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of the Morning Post, at the request of the Russian authorities, despite their protests that they had been declared unfit for military service.

THE BELMONT CLUB TO ORGANIZE THE 52ND BATTERY

Twenty-Five Members Have Already Signed Up and a Committee Has Been Appointed to Complete the Preliminary Work

CAPT. SHAW COMING

A meeting of the Belmont Club was held last evening when the proposal to organize an overseas battery was discussed. It was decided to form a battery under club auspices. Twenty-five members signed up and many more have signified their willingness to join. The organizers feel confident that they will be able to get one hundred and fifty men to complete the strength of the proposed battery.

Captain Shaw of Kingston, who is to command the 52nd Battery, C.F.A., will arrive in the city this evening and will take charge of the work. Capt. W. O. Ackerman of the 24th Field Battery, was in attendance last night and referred to the correspondence he had received from headquarters. He congratulated the members upon the originality of the proposal and offered to assist the movement in any way possible. A committee was formed, composed of F. F. Pigeon, H. Cook, A. N. Allison and W. Regan to complete the preliminary work.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served. There will be a meeting at the Belmont Club rooms this evening to consult with Captain Shaw.

The Battery will be the 52nd Battery, C.F.A.

All Peterborough young men who are interested in the movement and who wish to join an artillery corps, are invited to attend to-night's meeting in the Belmont Club rooms over the Red Mill theatre.

STUDENTS WHO WERE SUCCESSFUL

In the recent examinations of the Toronto Conservatory of Music Miss Edna Stewart of Fraserville, and a pupil of Miss L. Tate is among the successful students. Miss Stewart secured honours in Primary Theory, (rudiments and harmony), and also passed the Junior Piano examination.

PTE. P. TUCKER OF 93rd BATTALION HAS PASSED AWAY

Member of No. 6 Platoon, B Company, Falls Victim to Pneumonia---Funeral Will Take Place To-morrow Morning Under Military Auspices---To-day's Military News.

The second death in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion since its organization occurred this morning at Nicholls Hospital, when Pte. Patrick Tucker of No. 6 Platoon, B Company, passed away, following an attack of pneumonia. Pte. Tucker was a bright young soldier, well liked by his comrades, and the news of his death caused deep sorrow, especially among the men of No. 6 Platoon, by whom he was well known.

The late Pte. Tucker was born in Ireland, but had been a resident of Canada for a long period, and was well known in this district. For a number of years he had been working in Norwood. About three months ago he enlisted with the 93rd Battalion.

Some time ago he was taken ill with measles and pneumonia followed. His only relative in Canada is a sister, Miss Mary Tucker, residing at Burk's Corners, North Nations Hills, Quebec.

The funeral, which will be under military auspices, will be held to-morrow morning, at 8.30 o'clock. The Battalion will escort the remains to the cemetery and a firing squad will fire three rounds over the grave.

Requiem high mass will be sung at St. Peter's Cathedral, at 9 a.m. and interment will take place at St. Peter's Cemetery.

Lieut. Percy Might, a well-known Peterborough boy, who has been principal of the Lansdowne School, Toronto, for some time, has been attached to the 93rd Battalion.

TORONTO, Feb. 8. — R. Gordon Myles and George B. Elliott, two well-known Toronto amateur horsemen who have enlisted as privates in the 47th Battery, C.F.A., were tendered a dinner by a few of their friends at the Albany Club prior to their putting on khaki. Both on account of their knowledge of horses, have been assigned posts as drivers. Pte. Gordon Myles, who is aged 20, is a son of Major Myles, and has done a considerable amount of riding both in horse shows and races here. He was one of three Canadians selected to ride at the last Olympia show in London, when he finished second in the high jump, open to the world. He is a member of the Hunt Club and Military Institute. Pte. George Elliott is 25 years of age, and is a son of the late John Elliott of Green Bush Farm, Newtonbrook. He has ridden Major Kilgour's Sunnybrook Farm horses for the last three years, and has ridden in 18 winning hunt teams. He is a member of the Hunt, Victoria and America Clubs.

Official announcement was received to-day of the wounding of Private Edward Doleman of the 21st Battalion. He received a gun shot wound in the back and was admitted to No. 5 Field Hospital on January 18.

The Lindsay Warder says: Lt.-Col. Fee was agreeably surprised when he received word that the popular 109th Battalion, of Victoria and Haliburton counties, had been presented with a field kitchen by the Toronto gentlemen, namely, Messrs. Bredin and Diver. Mr. Mack Bredin is the head of the Bredin Bread Co., and Mr. Fred Diver, Sr., is an associate.

This magnificent gift, which was no doubt secured through the instrumentality of their sons, who are members of the 109th Battalion, will be greatly prized by the officers and men of the Battalion. It will cost about $1,200. Efforts will be continued to secure three more field kitchens, thus having one for every Company.

The good news for the officers and men is shared by the citizens of Lindsay, who will no doubt appreciate the fact that the Battalion is so highly thought of outside of the county.

According to the latest order from the Department of Militia, officers and non-commissioned officers taking a course at the School of Instruction will in future wear a distinguishing uniform. The order states that they jackets will be of red serge and the trousers blue. Khaki greatcoats will be worn, and infantry forage caps.

Major Watt and Lieut. Matthews held a recruiting meeting in the Bonner Worth Company's factory at noon to-day. The officers were given an earnest hearing and good results are expected from the meeting.

Lieut. Frank of Peterborough, who has been appointed to the Canadian Dental Corps, leaves to-morrow for Halifax, where he will be stationed.

The following divisional order has been received at local headquarters:

No. 85. School of Instruction for members of Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force:

In connection with schools of instruction for members of the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force the following memorandum which will shortly be issued in the form of a Militia Order, is now published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

1. With a view to providing qualified officers and non-commissioned officers for the units of the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force, 3rd Division, an Infantry School of Instruction will be established at Kingston.

2. Members of the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force of whatever rank or service will be permitted to attend; provided they are recommended by their Commanding Officers or other proper persons and that there is room for them.

3. The staff of each school will consist of a Commandant and of as many instructors (Officers and N. C. O's.) as circumstances justify.

4. Candidates (hereinafter described as probationers) will join weekly and will undergo a progressive course of instruction.

5. The duration of the probationers' course will depend on the progress he makes and on the rank for which he seeks to qualify.

6. Boards will assemble for the periodical examination of probationers; and subject to the exigencies of the service the President, and Members will be officers of field rank.

7. A probationer will not be allowed to present himself for examination unless recommended by the Commandant of the School which he attends; but he may request a special examination if for any reason he deems himself overlooked.

8. For cause a probationer is liable at any time to be removed.

9. Probationers whatever their rank or service, will draw the pay and allowances of a private soldier in the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force.

10. They will wear a special uniform which will be furnished to them free of cost.

It is desired that every effort be made by Commanding Officers to ensure the success of these schools and that wide publicity be given to the fact of their being in existence, especially as civilians are eligible for qualifying certificates.

The Estimates Will Be Referred Back

Council See Possibility of Reducing the Estimates for the Police Department—More Foot Work Recommended for Chief of Police Thompson—Men Invited to Enlist.

THE CONVENTION

Last night's meeting of the City Council was not without its special features. One of these was an extended reference to the Police Department. It happened near the close of the session which had been somewhat colourless except for a sporadic attack on the Fire Department estimates. Alderman Weir felt in his pocket for the aluminum comb that usually serves him as a wand with which to extinguish imaginary obstacles whenever the excitement becomes tense. About the time, Alderman Stratton rose to his feet the press was engaged in sharpening the tools of their trade while the face of Alderman William Galbraith registered puzzled expectancy.

"Like His Worship Mayor Duffus, who is a member of the Police Commission, I feel that the estimates for the Police Department are too high," began Alderman Stratton. "Sometime ago a man was added to the force to replace one of the regular men who was temporarily incapacitated. This man was subsequently taken on the strength of the force. I think this man could be dispensed with, also one other man."

Military Force.

Alderman Duncan—"I think you are right. Besides we have the military police."

"I am glad to know you are of the same opinion," continued Alderman Stratton. "I have gone over the estimates carefully and think they might be reduced considerably. Last year the estimates amounted to over twelve thousand dollars. This year they are over fourteen thousand dollars; an increase of over two thousand dollars. While we may have no supervision over the estimates we have to pay the money and should at least have the privilege of asking the Police Commissioners to reconsider the estimates, and if possible, reduce them. The salaries of Detective Meagher, Constables Reid and Kidd, have been increased, and one new man added to the force. Sergeant John Brown is drawing nine hundred dollars a year and is what they call room-sergeant. This work could be done by a probationer at less cost to the city. The late Police Constable McGinty who looked after that work did not possess much education, yet he looked after the work and did it well. Sergeant Brown never appears on the street and has no active police duty to do.

Chief Thompson.

"Chief of Police Thompson, is a good man," said Alderman Stratton, "but I don't think he should confine himself entirely to his office. He does not take enough exercise to keep him in good physical condition. Besides he seldom appears in uniform. If he conducted his department like his predecessor he would have his office downstairs and would be able to do a large part of his own office work.

"We have thirteen men on the force which is a very unlucky number. I would suggest that we reduce this number to ten or possibly eleven men. In these strenuous times we might let at least half of them go. I understand that about six of them would be willing to enlist, but Chief Thompson objects upon the grounds that it would spoil his force. If the Germans come to Peterborough the whole force will be spoiled. We will have Huns for policemen. We could

PTE. THEODORE (BARNEY) QUINN.

One of the few Peterborough boys who left with the 1st 57th contingent who is still on duty with the 2nd Battalion. He has been at the front for a year. Pte. Quinn will be remembered by hockey fans as the left wing of the Y.M.C.A. City League teams.

MEYER PLEADED GUILTY AND HAS MADE APOLOGY

Pleaded Guilty to Seditious Statement But Appeared Penitent in Court To-day

SENTENCE THIS AFTERNOON

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 8. — Walter Meyer charged with sedition before Mr. Justice Clute this afternoon, pleaded guilty to the charge through his counsel, who asked for a remand for sentence in view of the fact that Meyer, though of German descent, is Canadian born and has offered a full public apology to Lieut.-Col. W. M. O. Lochead, commanding 118th battalion here.

Meyer said to Pte. W. Stewart, who had enlisted in the 118th battalion: "So you are another fool who has enlisted. They are all bums and loafers in the army; you'll get beaten to a pulp when you get to the front."

In the local papers last night Meyer said he didn't intend to cast reflection on the British cause and he pleaded guilty in a penitent spirit.

Mr. Justice Clute's sentence will be given later this afternoon.

93rd Battalion Band in Attendance

The ice at Brock St. Rink is in fine condition for to-night. Owing to hockey matches Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night of this week, to-night and Saturday night will be the only nights for skating.

There will likely be a good number at the Rink this evening on this account.

WHICH?

The electors of Peel have a chance to show whether they regard patriotism as a principle or as a Fallacy.

IMMIGRATION.

A return made to Parliament shows the immigration into Canada in the years 1914 and 1915. Naturally the war has affected the inflow of immigrants. In 1914 the total arrivals from British and foreign countries totalled 166,930, and in 1915 the number sank to 48,446. As to nationalities, in 1914 the number of Germans entering Canada was 3,008, and of Austrians, including Polish Austrians, 2,139. In 1915 no Austrians entered the country, and only 34 Germans—according to the immigration returns. But there is reason to believe that a great many Germans who are not desirable additions to our population, have entered Canada. We have evidence of their presence, and we do well to employ the greatest watchfulness to guard ourselves against the result of their depredations.

HOME RELIGION.

We may pose and be taken as pious and religious, before the world; but it is the intimacy of home that tests our religion. A story is told of Moody, the Evangelist, to the effect that in answer to the claim of one of those moral impossibilities, a perfect man, who said he lived every day without sin, he said: "Well, I can't admit your claim till I have asked your wife." The home is not only the best place to test our religion, but to teach religion. The Examiner has received from the publisher, H. S. Hallman, Berlin, a copy of his beautiful "Gospel Text Calendar," an ornament, in appearance, to any wall. Above the calendar with its plain, distinct figures, are printed illuminated Scripture texts—one for each day of the month, with reference to Scripture readings of cognate character. This calendar can be made a splendid medium of religious teaching in the home. If a child is made to commit to memory, each day, a Scripture text, it will, with proper, concurrent review, have fixed in its memory, at the end of the year, three hundred and sixty-five apposite texts of Scripture, constituting an inestimably valuable moral treasure. In these days of refined Sunday School teaching, we have little memorizing of the Scriptures, such as obtained in the old days. The committing to memory by children of texts from the Bible may be regarded as the accumulation of so much religious lumber. So it may be for the moment, but it often happens that some text of Scripture, semi-dormant for years, may, in adult life, rise up with its warning or encouragement at some moment of temptation or stress and be a shield against a contemplated sin or a "sure refuge in time of trouble." We can't know, or carry with us, too much of Holy Scripture if we would make our lives a reflection of the religion we profess and should practice.

FUTILE "FRIGHTFULNESS."

In their childish rage, incited by their spirit of desperation and diabolism, the Germans are playing a costly and unprofitable game. The despatches tell us that in the recent Zeppelin raid upon England the forty-five German bombs dropped in Worcestershire, did damage to property to the amount of $25.00. The bombs thus wasted no doubt cost many thousands of dollars. But if they had done damage to the extent of $25,000 or more, the Germans would have gained nothing in the way of military advantage. If the money spent in building Zeppelins had been put into the form of shells to be used to storm British trenches, a gain of even a yard would have been a military advantage. When the gods would destroy they first make mad. And the gods have filled the Germans' neck-full with the insane spirit of destruction. Germany is rapidly enough nearing bankruptcy without speeding up the process by wanton waste of money in the attempt to do wanton destruction. The German policy of destruction and frightfulness is child's play so far as results of military gain are concerned, but devil's play in the matter of destruction of property and life and human suffering. This destruction and suffering will continue till the enemy's power to do evil is destroyed. It needs men and munitions to accelerate the destruction. We are supplying munitions in a fairly good way, but are we providing as many men as are needed to make munitions effective? Every man who joins the ranks is a big help in destroying the German power for evil. Every man who enlists is a factor in destroying the spying and outrage that are making themselves felt in Canada. So every man who enlists is fighting for his home and the dear ones and dear things of home.

A GOOD NAME.

The Scriptures tell us that "a good name is better than riches." A few Germans have learned the truth of that to their cost, and all Germans will sooner or later learn it to the bitter limit of its significance. When the British trawler came across the wrecked Zeppelin air ship in the North Sea, and refused to rescue the sinking crew, we may think the skipper and crew of the trawler were guilty of inhuman heartlessness. But they were obeying the first law of nature—self preservation. The crew of the trawler was unarmed, while that of the Zeppelin, three times its number, was armed to the teeth. The Captain of the trawler felt, and believed, and was right in so feeling and believing, that if he went unarmed to the help of the Zeppelin raiders, that the moment they set foot safely upon the trawler they would either shoot down or throw their rescuers into the sea. The Germans, on both sea and land, have pursued a policy so utterly treacherous and lacking in good faith that they cannot be trusted. The pledge of the captain of the Zeppelin that they would be good, could no more be depended upon than a rotten reed. The skipper of the trawler, in the interests of the safety of himself and crew, could not go to the help of the enemy. He did the next best thing—went in search of some ship that could safely undertake the rescue. If when rescue came a storm had sunk the Zeppelin and its crew, they were only themselves to blame. In so far as they had contributed, or were associated, with the bad name for utter untrustworthiness the Germans have earned for themselves, the crew of the Zeppelin committed suicide. If Germany and the Germans have a name for cruelty and untrustworthiness they have brought it on themselves. In all this war, in all the ocean outrages the German pirates have committed there is no case on record of them having saved a single innocent life of woman or child in the course of their destruction of shipping. So that, if on no other ground than the lex talionis, the skipper of the trawler was justified in refusing to rescue the Zeppelin crew. Germany has won a name for unlimited deceit and unfaith. This is the only thing she has won in the war that will endure, and this bad name will stick while history lasts. German unfaith will go down in history as a companion phrase of punica fides. She began this way with a breach of faith, held a solemn treaty as a "scrap of paper," and all through the war she has been consistent with the perfidy of its beginning. Germany has gained a bad name and shown herself completely unworthy of trust. The world will know her and her opponents will regard her as not to be trusted by the Mading force of any treaty—only to be trusted when she is crushed—in a military sense—and impotent to break her plighted word.

In all this there is a lesson to the youth, as well as manhood and womanhood of this country—an instrument to drive home the great truth—tremendous in its bearing and significance in private and national life—that a good name is better than riches; that a moral character that renders a man's word as good as his bond, is a priceless possession. In these days of venality, of making the pursuit of profit the chief aim of life, the value of honour and honesty, the chief things the world is fighting for on a score of battlefields to-day, should be pressed and driven home. The strength of Britain to-day is the fact that she is true and trusty in her national and international relations. We, in Canada, share this renown, but shall we deserve it if our public and political life is not a reflection of the individual honesty, uprightness and trustworthiness of our people? Only when we teach our children, in our homes, and in our schools, both by precept and by the example and by the practice of our own lives the duty and value of rigid honesty and good faith—only then can we dare to cast the first stone at Germany.

Recruiting Is Stimulated By Striking The Right Note

Major Boehm is a Canadian of the fourth generation, and he set out in the work of recruiting the 39th Battalion by making a special effort in enlisting native-born Canadians as far as possible. It was a proper purpose and Major Boehm has worked at it resolutely. He entered many factories and secured large bodies of men. He was determined to arouse native sons particularly to enlistment, and he talked to them in plain terms. He has been vigorous, aggressive, very much in earnest in a good cause, and, in the course he followed, had, we believe, the full approval of the military authorities.

The figures of the enlistments so far in the 39th show that the battalion has grown with unusual rapidity. By Friday last there had been 884 men enrolled, and they are described as an exceptionally fine lot. But what of their nationality? The Canadian-born are 29.5 per cent.; those of Old Country birth are 54.5 per cent. Before this battalion started recruiting we believe that the records of the Recruiting Depot would show that the percentage of native-born enlistments in recently formed battalions had been running from 20 to 30 per cent. of Canadian born.

In other words, the figures seem to show that the aggressive campaign to crowd the native-born into enlisting has resulted in a smaller percentage than usual of them being enrolled, and a larger percentage than usual of British-born. And why?

Perhaps the result does not need to occasion surprise. The men who were reproached, reproved, chided, held back; the British-born who were praised and commended, stepped forward, further illustrating, amid applause, all that had been said in praise of their willingness as a class to enlist.

Whatever may be the right to rouse the Canadian-born to rise up in multitudes and enlist, the use of censure and reproach is quite manifestly the wrong way.

There is another feature of it to be considered much as we sympathize with the desire of Major Boehm and others to recruit large numbers of our native born, and that is the fact that even if only 20 or 30 p.c. of all the enlistments in Canada have been of men who were born here, yet even that percentage of 250,000 men would represent from 70,000 to 100,000 native-born Canadians already under arms, and they and their people do not like to hear the sons of the soil reproached as a race, because a few particularly slow-in a shop or in a theatre-do not enlist as they should and as better men have done and are doing every day.

It is true tens of thousands of young Canadians who have enlisted or whose conduct should be emphasized and whose example should be held up to others. They heard the call of the race, they responded to the spirit of the times of them, and one of these days when war becomes less of a waiting game than it has too long been, a flame will run through this country that will light the imagination and fire the sentiment until all who are wanted will come forward to go.

It is not facts and figures, it is not arguments hammered home, nor is it reproaches that those they are addressed to feel to be unjust—it is not any or all of these that influence our young men to enlist.

What they listen for is the call they know. Of the recruiting sergeant they know nothing. They want the popular leaders, the men of the hour, to rise up and show them the way, the few who speak what all mean, and voice what all feel, until there is set in motion a national force that nothing can stay.—Toronto Star.

A CONUNDRUM OF THE DAY.

Should the chief intelligence officer of the war department of Canada be a German, with brothers in the German army?

Should there be other Germans in the government service here? A number there are.

Is Canada at war with Germany or playing marbles?—Ottawa Journal (Conservative).

THE SLACKER—TWO KINDS.

The young men who are not enlisting have come in for criticism more or less free and perhaps often undeserved. What about the older men who could pay and do not? As between the young slacker and the man whom age does not permit to enlist, but who has acquired a competence, or whose position is such that he can pay without sacrificing anything that is material, which has it?—London Free Press.

"DOWN GLASSES."

"Down glasses" is the effective catchword under which The Spectator is fighting for prohibition in Britain as a war measure. But it is anxious to have people understand that its campaign is merely to help win the war, and in marshalling the prohibition forces it accepts only new recruits who favour it as a war measure but who are not necessarily in sympathy with the temperance reformers. People who are thoroughly intoxicated with the war spirit do not need other kinds of spirits.—Springfield Republican.

EQUAL TO PAYING BLACKMAIL.

In slaughtering non-combatants at sea Germany has been exercising no right. If Germany should pledge herself to end such slaughter, she would be yielding no right. For undertaking to abandon inhuman privileges she is entitled to no return. In private life the man who pays a reward to a criminal as an inducement for that criminal to stop committing a crime against him is said to pay blackmail. To act as Germany's agent in securing a lightening of the blockade against her as a reward for the discontinuance of practices which were not only an outrage upon us but upon all humanity would be tantamount to paying blackmail. We cannot believe that the administration contemplates doing anything of the sort.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Breach of Promise Case

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Good morning, Mr. Beasley," she said cheerily.

"Mornin', Mrs. Chambers," replied Beasley.

"Well, rather," said Beasley. "That smile is capable of hurtin' over a hull regiment o' men."

"How does she do it?"

"Just smiles at 'em; that's all she does. She don't appear to give 'em no encouragement, though Ed Stumps declared she give him a lot of it. He come to me not long after she lighted here and told me that he was goin' to sue her for breach o' promise. I told him not to make a fool of himself, but he wouldn't listen to me and went down to the county seat and put the case in the hands of an attorney.

"About time I met the widder after Stumps sued her for blightin' his affections I reckoned when I seen her comin' that she'd look kind o' serious, but she didn't. I said good mornin' to her and asked her how her suit was comin' on, and she said it was interestin'. The women generally used the men for breach of promise, and she reckoned she was the only woman in the state that had ever been complimented that way.

"By crackey! She seemed to be proud of it. I asked her if she wasn't afeared of havin' to pay a big sum, and she said she'd be very much mortified if the jury stuck her for a little one. Funny creatures women are, aren't they?

"When the trial come around I went down to the courthouse. She was there takin' care of her own case. She examined the men summoned for jurors herself, and you'd ought to heard the questions she asked. It was like this: 'Are you married or single, Mr. Jones?' (with that smile o' her'n). 'Oh, a bachelor, eh? Were you ever in love, Mr. Jones? Have you a proper reverence for our sex? Do you think that if you were jilted you'd consider money an equivalent for your broken heart? Mr. Smith, you say you are married. Happy match? Does your wife ever git jealous? How much do you think would have repaid you if she had refused to marry you after you had courted her?

"And all the time she was talkin' she just sot there and smiled, showin' her white teeth between her rosy lips. Some on 'em she turned down, and some on 'em she let through, but she didn't take any time about it, which-ever way she decided. Nobody could tell from her questions whether she was goin' to turn a man down or let him on to the jury.

"When the twelve jurymen were ready for work they was the most self satisfied lot o' men I ever see together. They all settled themselves down in their chairs as if they was goin' to have the time o' their lives. The judge, he looked cheerful too. The plaintiff's counsel apologised to the defendant, but conscientiously worked for his client. Whenever he said anything about the widder's ropin' him in she just laughed as though she thought it very funny. And when he read some soft soddер she had written the plaintiff she sat lookin' at the jurymen with that smile o' her'n on her lips, and it seemed to me that every one of 'em couldn't help thinkin' that she was sayin' it to him specially.

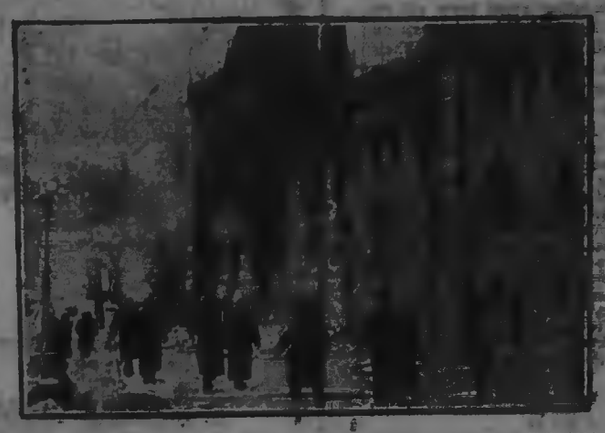
"When the lawyer got through the widder arose to make her defence. 'May it please the court,' and she smiled at the judge. When she said 'Gentlemen of the jury' she spoke the word gentlemen as though every one on 'em had been born in an alabaster palace with jewelled doors and windows. She said she'd have to throw herself on the court's mercy, because Mr. Stumps was so nice to her she just couldn't help sayin' nice things to him too. She was awful sorry about it all and really thought he ought to have a consid'able verdict. In fact, if she'd been rich she'd 'a' paid him a large sum, seein' she couldn't love him, without compellin' him to take his case into court.

"Reckon this puzzled the jury some. They didn't seem to know which way to bring in the case to the widder's satisfaction. If they allowed Stumps the $20,000 damages he claimed the widder would have to pay it. If they found for him with a few cents damages it wouldn't be complimentary to the widder. So when the judge gave 'em the case they retired to the jury room to talk it over. They all agreed on favorin' the defendant, but didn't know how to favor her most. At last one on 'em, an oldish married man, hit the nail on the head, and they all went back into the courtroom feelin' first rate.

"'Your honor,' said the foreman, 'we've found for the plaintiff with $100,000 damages, but owin' to extenuatin' circumstances recommend the defendant to mercy.'

"The recommend was all the judge wanted. He remitted the damages and discharged the defendant with the injunction that she git married and stop stirrin' up the men.

"Bessie says she's goin' to take the judge at his word. Anyway, he's been courtin' the widder ever since. But you never kin tell about what wimmen are goin' to do."



ECHOES OF THE BIG FIRE ON PARLIAMENT HILL, OTTAWA—The Duke of Connaught and staff inspect the ruins.

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Fesirs, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

A GRANT FOR THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Deputation Waited upon the City Council with aRequest for a monthly Grant in the Interests of Suffering Humanity

A deputation representing the Peterborough Health Association waited upon the City Council last evening with a view of obtaining a monthly grant towards the maintenance of the work undertaken by the Association. The speakers for the Association were Rev. Father Phelan, Dr. G. S. Cameron, Dr. F. P. McNulty, Mr. E. A. Peck and Mr. W. H. Dunsford. It was pointed out that the yearly expenditure in connection with this work was in the neighbourhood of twenty-two hundred dollars. If the City Council made a monthly grant of one hundred dollars, the Association would undertake to raise the reminder. Last year the Council made a monthly grant of fifty dollars.

Rev. Father Phelan alluded to the detailed statements concerning the work that appeared in the public press some weeks ago. In many instances the patients would have to be treated at the city's expense if they were not looked after by the Association. Two district nurses were employed all the time. In addition to this the Association provided for the free distribution of milk, eggs and other necessities.

The Council agreed that the cause was worthy of more than ordinary consideration and decided to refer the matter to the Finance committee.

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

SELEUCIA-CTESIPHON

Remarkable Population of These Ancient and Storied Cities

Seleucia and Ctesiphon, under the Persians, were the jewels of the Tigris Valley, materially and intellectually. The fertile soil of the district yielded crops in profusion, and in the city carpet weavers, gold and silver smiths and armorers were thriving in prosperity. Though Persian in religion, the people were under the influence of the later schools of Greek philosophy. Seleucia and Ctesiphon were built to take the place of Babylon, which latter city fell rapidly into decay after the death of Alexander the Great.

Seleucia itself was founded by Seleukus, son of Alexander's favorite general, Antiochus. The building material was furnished by the ruins of the wonder city, Babylon. For many years the left bank of the Tigris, opposite Seleucia, was the site of splendid gardens and fertile fields. Meanwhile the Parthian dynasty of the Sassanides had again made Persia into a powerful state. Seleucia lay on and commanded the main road from Syria to Persia and India, and the Sassanides therefore decided to counteract the existence of its very important strategic base by taking the left bank of the Tigris and founding there the city and fortress of Ctesiphon.

The new city grew rapidly. It is said that when Hanel took it, it had over a million inhabitants, while the population of the territory, north, east and south of it, numbered no less than 3,500,000. Plenty of water from the Tigris and a most fertile soil, two essentials which in the hot climate of Central Southwest Asia, produced great agricultural wealth, made this aggregation possible.

Prevailing Weather Conditions In Ontario and Western Canada

Report Issued By the Toronto Observatory Gives Some Interesting Data —Rainfall in All Parts of Ontario Was Considerably in Excess of Previous Years

A report issued a few days ago by the Toronto Observatory gives some official figures and interesting data regarding the weather conditions prevailing throughout the Dominion since the New Year. It shows that the conditions in the Northwest Provinces have been unusually severe, while in British Columbia all records for snow and cold have been broken. Over much of the Pacific Coast Province the temperature has been from 25 to 30 degrees below the average.

A line drawn north and south through the middle of Lake Superior is very nearly the dividing line between mean temperatures above normal in the east and below normal in the west. From Manitoba westward the negative departures increased rapidly from 5 degrees at Winnipeg to 24 degrees at Medicine Hat, and nearly 30 degrees in the Upper Mainland of British Columbia, and thence lessened again to 10 degrees near the coast. These negative departures in British Columbia and Alberta are the largest on record. The largest positive departures ranging between 6 and 9 degrees, occurred in Southern and Eastern Ontario, where they diminished eastward to the Maritime Provinces, where the temperature was very nearly normal.

Precipitation was below the normal in British Columbia and in the Maritime Province, while in all parts of Ontario and Quebec it was considerably in excess. The greatest positive departures were in Northern Ontario and in the vicinity of Winnipeg, where there were some unusually heavy snowfalls. The largest negative departure was in Cape Breton, where the total fall was only about one-third of the average for January. The snowfall has been excessive in British Columbia, especially near the coast, where the ground had an unusually deep covering on the 31st, which has since been greatly augmented. An unusually large amount of snow also covered the Prairie Provinces, the depth ranging from about 7 inches in the vicinity of Calgary, to over two feet in many parts of Eastern Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The frequent very strong winds caused considerable drifting and the roads and trails in many places became heavy and rather difficult to travel. In Ontario the snow was from two to four feet deep over the Thunder Bay, Rainy River and Algoma Districts, and in the Upper Ottawa Valley it was from eighteen to twenty-four inches, while in the peninsula and the counties contiguous to Lake Ontario the ground was entirely bare. In southwestern Quebec there was very little snow at the close of the month, but in the counties to the northward of the Ottawa River and farther east in the province it was quite deep, amounting to two feet or over. In the northern interior counties of New Brunswick the snow was also quite deep, and Prince Edward Island was covered to a depth of six or seven inches, while in Nova Scotia the ground was bare in many places and traces remained in others.

Special Reports.

British Columbia—The month of January is not unlikely to go down in history as the coldest month ever recorded in this province. The change from the normal conditions of December occurred during the first days of the month, but it was not until the 13th, that the weather became really severe. Since this date quite with heavy snowfalls have been frequent, and perhaps unprecedented, and by the close of the month traffic both in the mountains and near the coast has been greatly impeded by the drifts.

Western Provinces — Extremely cold weather prevailed in the western provinces practically throughout the month, the only relief being a short period of relatively mild conditions from the 17th to the 21. The lowest temperatures occurred between the 15th and 16th, during which period on the morning of the 15th, thermometer readings ranged between 40 degrees below zero at Winnipeg and 48 below at Battleford. The snowfall was everywhere above the average, and occurred at intervals, especially during the last week.

Ontario.—Lake Superior was approximately the dividing line between the abnormally low temperatures of the west and the relatively high temperatures of Ontario and the Eastern provinces. The Thunder Bay and Algoma districts had decidedly cold spells, notably that centering about the 14th, but there were also many mild spells, and an excessive snowfall especially west of Sudbury. In Southern and Eastern Ontario there was but one really cold period which occurred between the 15th and 20th; rain fell on many days and there were no heavy snowfalls. During the spring like weather conditions which prevailed in the vicinity of Toronto almost without interruption from the 20th to the end of the month, when there was much rain, frankincense occurred and the rivers were open free of ice. On the 31st, when it was unusually mild, many people might be seen basking in the sun upon the eaves of the various parks, and in their stead plates many small insects were seen upon the wing. During this period the snow was quickly melted and by the 31st the ground was quite bare.

WILL SHORTEN SESSION.

Month or Six Weeks May See Parliament Prorogued.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—There will be business as usual in the House of Commons this afternoon, although the disarrangement due to the fire has unquestionably had an unsettling effect. The day will be devoted to private members' resolutions and motions. The Senate, which has been enjoying a rest of a fortnight, resumes tomorrow.

The proposal for the extension of Parliament by one year was to have come up to-morrow. Very probably it will be deferred till later in the week, when things become more settled. That the fire has taken the heart of any fighting spirit of Parliament is generally conceded. Every item in the sessional programme will be carried out, but it is believed that a month or six weeks will suffice for that purpose.

Hold on to your temper when you are excited, or angry, or others are angry with you.

Hold on to your good character, for it is and ever will be your best wealth.

"TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET—AH!

"Tiz" is Grand for Aching, Swollen, Tender, Calloused Feet or Corns

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, aching, tender, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." "Tiz" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think of it.

JAPAN'S PARTICIPATION IN WAR NOT INCREASED

So far as can be learned, the sinking of the Japanese steamer Yasaka Maru by a submarine in the Mediterranean sea on December 21st is not influencing Japan to take a more aggressive part in the war, as has been thought in some foreign countries. As a matter of fact the incident has been received in Japan very calmly and so far as the newspapers are concerned there has been practically no expression of opinion.

Such sentiment as has been publicly voiced is confirmed to two points, first the futility of wasting time on unimportant internal political quarrels in the present world's crisis, and second, the necessity on the part of Japan's allies to obtain a stronger command of the seas.

"The sinking of the Yasaka Maru," wrote the editor of the Japan "Times," "is a timely reminder to this country, which has almost become oblivious of the war, being engrossed in political disputes which are of small national concern except for party purposes." The writer pointed out that is agitation occurs in the countries of the Allies it is always in connection with the war, whereas in Japan the questions between the government and opposition are such as could be very easily settled "if only the parties would subordinate their narrow and selfish contentions to the larger problems of the empire's needs that are growing more and more complicated as the great war extends its sphere of operation."

"We say the 'Yasaka disaster is a warning to the county, lest it find itself confronted by greater surprises nearer home by the conscienceless and vindicative enemy. The empire demands that politicians pay more attention to the war than to their mean and exaggerated grievances."

The increased menace to shipping in the Mediterranean which may force the numerous Japanese steamers to send around the Cape of Good Hope and vastly increases the expense of navigation is made the theme of an article in the conservatively inclined "Kokumin" which incidentally expresses its regret to see the Allies always standing on the defensive in various theatres of war. "Now that the Allies have given up the attack on the Dardanelles," the newspaper says, "the enemy will doubtless gradually make his way toward Egypt and this means a gradual increase of danger to navigation through the Suez canal. Things have come to the pass when it is absolutely necessary for us to change our shipping route. It is the height of absurdity to rely upon Great Britain's command of the sea."

AN APSLEY EXPLANATION

To the Editor of The Examiner.—

Dear Sir.—In your issue of The Examiner dated January 27th, 1916, I see that a Ratepayer of Burleigh or Anstruther had a complaint to make. Very good—when things do not feel comfortable and things do not go as expected the right way is, Complain, and it will be seen into; but before one complains he should find out for a fact there is something to complain about. However, as I am the party referred to I will deal with the so termed complaint about the caretaker's appointment.

Now, misstatement No. 1 is to the effect that a caretaker of the hall was appointed on the 15th of December last year. This is a miserable misstatement because by the minutes of the said meeting NO such appointment was made. Is that clear to the complainer?

Misstatement No. 2 is that the Hall not Ratepayer received any benefit from the $10.00 paid to the caretaker. The fires were lit before the council sat and the hall was cleaned, consequently the hall derived benefit from being cleaned and the ratepayers and the councillors by having a warm room.

Allow me to tell this grumbler that the sole part is not in the caretaker at all, but what the caretaker did with his salary; and that is none of his business and nothing to do with him, as in previous years Mr. Gallon, the former clerk, has been paid for the care of the hall. Can Mr. Gallon deny this? On the other hand the late clerk, Mr. Gallon, was never appointed during his term of office by the council (neither was his predecessor) as the minutes of the council will show, but yet Mr. Gallon drew the money. I took over the work from Dr. Sheppard, who was appointed. This grumbler must be pretty well up in knowledge and very clever, or shall I say he lives in a "glass house and should not throw stones. What about blunders? Where were they? The grumbler is right, when he considers by saying that experience is the best and makes perfect; he has evidently had the experience of grumbling but he must benefit more and have something to grumble about. Then possibly he will have something to grumble about. Then, possibly he will become a perfect grumbler by experience. I will ask, How do our councillors of this municipality become "City Fathers?" Where is the city? When did it become a city? Again, what does he mean by dipping deeper? Next time that he writes let him speak plainly, and sign his name. Perhaps Ratepayer is in the habit of dipping down deep himself "Tout soit qui Mally Pense."

Ratepayer also complains that I live six miles from the village. Is that any of his business where I live? If the council had done anything wrong how was it that the ratepayers at the last election returned the present reeve, Mr. Leary, by a larger majority than ever over his opponent, the same councillors also being elected by large majorities, so the majority of the ratepayers must have been satisfied with the proceedings of the council for the past year?

Your obedient servant,
Charles H. D. Booth,
Clerk Township.

Germany Says Negotiations For Peace With Belgium Are Now in Progress

LONDON, Feb. 7.—There is much speculation here regarding the reasons underlying the visit of Earl Curson and General Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France, to Albert King of the Belgians, which was announced by the Official Press Bureau.

Almost coincident with the official announcement comes a despatch from The Hague forwarding Berlin advices regarding negotiations said to be in progress between Germany and King Albert for the signing of a separate treaty of peace between Germany and Belgium. These negotiations, the Berlin advices are quoted as saying, have made important progress in the past ten days. In spite of denials they add, King Albert has consented to consider tentative peace proposals if such proposals contain guarantees for the complete restoration and independence of Belgium. The Dutch correspondent understands that Germany is willing to make these concessions if the negotiations can be concluded before Spring. Time is made an important consideration in the discussion.

Nor is Germany unwilling to make even further concessions in order to obtain Belgian neutrality, according to the reported current opinion in Dutch diplomatic circles. Diplomats at The Hague have obtained from sources, the reliability of which they do not question, the information that Germany is willing to restore the destroyed Blegian cities and to pay a large sum of money to the Belgian Government for the further restoration of the country on the condition that the word 'indemnity' shall not be used in connection with such payments.

Speculation in London.

In the absence of any explanation from official British sources regarding the visit of Lord Curson and Gen. Haig to King Albert speculation based on the Dutch despatches is being indulged in here without restraint.

The original report that Germany was considering such a move for the neutrality of Belgium, thus making it impossible for the allies to take up an offensive against Germany in the Spring or at a later time, through Belgium without ranging that much-contested country on the side of Germany as the invasion of the Germans ranged it on the side of the allies, became public a fortnight ago. At that time it was said that Germany had offered separate terms of peace to Belgium, by these terms promising to restore all the occupied portions of the country—practically all the territory of the nation—to the Belgians on condition that they would not give permission to the allies for an attack on Germany through Belgian territory. At about the same time the Frankfurter Zeitung printed what appeared to be an inspired article suggesting the desirability of such an arrangement. The report was denied by Belgian officials at Havre, and for the time was dropped from active public discussion.

The departure of Lord Curson and Gen. Haig for Havre, however, has lent a new importance to the Dutch reports. A conference between Gen. Haig and the Belgian King would arouse little discussion since it might mean only the discussion of military problems by the active heads of two armies operating in the same theatre of war. But such an explanation for the present conference does not apply as well to the presence of Lord Curson, who is purely a civilian member of the Cabinet. Lord Curson is at present Lord Privy Seal and it is pointed out here, is one of the most able men in the cabinet whose portfolios do not demand their continued presence in London. No matter what the juncture it would scarcely be expected that the Premier, Mr. Lloyd George, or one or two others of the stronger men in the present Ministry could leave their posts at the present moment to conduct negotiations even of the greatest importance.

Much has been said in the German press of the necessity for Germany retaining Belgium. At the same time much has been said in the same press of the desirability of an early ending of the war. And, as an answer to both statements, there have been plenty of expressions from both France and Great Britain to the effect that the restoration and independence of Belgium was a cardinal principle for which the allies are fighting.

The Paris Journal's Geneva correspondent says:

German finance is again exerting stronger and stronger pressure on the Imperial Government through the presentiment of a formidable economic crisis. The leaders of finance insist that Germany will relinquish the idea of territorial acquisition and accept the status quo except for an autonomy in Russian Poland under some form of German suzerainty. This campaign of German finance is finding powerful support, even in the Imperial Chancellery.

HER DADDY COULDN'T COME.

"Somewhere in France" there is a wooden cross at the head of a soldier's grave, and on the cross is fastened a post card. It reads:

"Dear Daddy: It is my birthday today and your little daughter is six years old. She is having a little party of her friends to tea and mummy and I want you to come. Please ask your officer if he will let you. From your little Daughter."

The day the post card was taken from the sack of mail that had reached the front "Little Daughter's" daddy was carried back from the firing line fatally wounded.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

Today it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Then later you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hannaman, 33 Spruce Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into complete loss of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I returned work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

"MAKING THE DUMB TO SPEAK" IS ONE OF WAR MIRACLES

Almost Daily Performed By Italian Army Surgeons, Says Correspondent

ROME, Feb. 7.—Making the dumb to speak through mental suggestion and the power of will is one of the miracles almost daily being performed by Italian army surgeons. The well substantiated stories of what these men are doing rival the miraculous events chronicled in the Book of Books. The story of the Loaves and Fishes and the raising of Lazarus, the widow's son from the dead, contain little more to marvel at than these every day battle front wonders of 1915.

Hypnotism and mental suggestion are being successfully employed by the surgeons of the Italian army in helping soldiers who have lost the power of speech to recover that faculty. Experiments are also being made to see if the method cannot be employed with equal success on blind soldiers and deaf men. These experiments apply only to those cases where the nerves of sight and hearing have been shocked and not destroyed.

First Experiments.

The first successful experiments with dumb soldiers were made in the military hospital at Ancona, but have since been repeated at Cava dei Tirreni and elsewhere. Dr. Gustav Modena is the originator of the method. In his first successful application Dr. Modena had for his subject the soldiers Guiseppe Valeri and Nazzareno Aquillini. Neither man had spoken a word for six months. The first day Dr. Modena subjected the men to an electrical current and to the mental suggestion that they must speak.

Twenty-four hours were allowed to elapse that this suggestion might work in their minds. The second day the doctor again applied the current, and ordering the patient to look him squarely in the eye, exerted all of his hypnotic and will power in imposing on his patient the command to speak.

Almost instantly Valeri, the first subject, began to mumble inarticulate sounds. A little later he formed the first two words every child speaks—Mamma and babbo (papa) —and finally began speaking almost with the same degree of facility he had enjoyed previous to his injury at the front. Equal success was met with in the case of Aquilini, the second patient. The method now is generally employed in Italy.

Experiments looking toward the restoration of sight and hearing in the same way have not met with a full degree of success, but encouraging progress has been made.

THE WEATHER

After several weeks of mild and springlike weather, we have now a cold snap with us. Lowest temperature last night, 6 degrees below zero. This was accompanied with a driving breeze which made the low temperature severely felt.

POPULAR PRICE MUSICAL COMEDY

Felix Martin and Clever Company Open a Five Day Engagement To-night

The Strand Musical Comedy Co., open a five-day engagement at "The Grand" to-night in "The College Widow." Heading a company of twenty people is Felix Martin and Rose Emmett, two clever comedians who will keep the audience in constant laughter. Many catchy songs are introduced during the action of the play. Popular prices of 15, 25 and 35c will prevail for this engagement, and good houses for all performances is assured.

GERMAN PREACHERS' VIEWS OF THEIR ENEMIES

In the Methodist (England) Times the Rev. Wm. Burgess of Rome, General Superintendent of the Wesleyan Methodist Missions in Italy, contributes a translation of passages taken from the sermons of German preachers which have recently appeared in German newspapers. Mr. Burgess thinks there is no better way of getting an insight into the strangely perverted attitude of the German mind touching the present war than by reading such extracts.

Pastor Toebel, speaking in the great Lutheran Church in Leipsic, referred to the "German guns beating down the children of Satan," and to German submarines as "instruments to execute the divine vengeance, to send to the bottom of the sea thousands of the non-elect. "There ought," he said "to be no compromise with hell, no mercy for the servants of Satan; in other words, no pity for the English, French, and Russians, nor indeed, for any nation that has sold itself to the devil. They have all been condemned to death by a divine devil."

Professor Rheinold Seeby, a teacher of theology in the Berlin University, preaching in the Cathedral of the city, said that in killing their enemies, burning their houses and invading their territories the Germans simply performed a work of charity. Divine love was seen everywhere in the world, but men had to suffer for their salvation. Germany loved other nations, and when she punished them it was for their good.

Pastor Fritz Philippi of Berlin, preaching from his Protestant pulpit on the divine mission of Germany, said that as the Almighty allowed his Son to be crucified that the scheme of redemption might be accomplished, so Germany was destined to crucify humanity in order that its salvation might be secured. The human race could only be saved by blood, fire, sword. "It is really because we are pure that we have been chosen by the Almighty as His instruments to punish the envious, to chastise the wicked, and to lay with the sword the sinful nations. The divine mission of Germany, brethern, is, to crucify humanity. The duty of German soldiers, therefore, is to strike without mercy. They must kill, burn and destroy, and any half measures would be wicked. Let it then be a war without pity. The immoral and the friends and allies of Satan must be destroyed, as an evil plant is uprooted. Satan, himself, who has come into the world in the form of a Great Power, must be crushed. The kingdom of righteousness will be established on the earth and the German Empire, which will have created it, will remain its protector."

CANADIAN REVENUE.

Increase in January of Nearly $3,000,000 Over January, 1915.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—The net debt of Canada at the end of January totalled $327,400,000, an increase of $12,344,000 during the month of January, and of $132,110,000 during the twelve months. War expenditure for the month of January is given in the monthly financial statement as $12,237,788, and for the ten months of the current fiscal year $97,886,696.

Revenue for January totalled $17,922,600, an increase of nearly eight millions as compared with January of last year. Of this increase a little over five millions comes from customs receipts. For the ten months of the current fiscal year the total revenue has amounted to $109,880,000, an increase of a little over thirty millions as compared with the corresponding ten months of 1914-15. According to present indications the total revenue for the fiscal year should run between $166,000,000 and $170,000,000, or about $40,000,000 more than last year. Total expenditure on revenue account for the ordinary expenses of administration will probably run up to about $145,000,000, or a little over ten millions less than last year. Capital expenditure apart from the war will probably reach in the neighbourhood of $40,000,000.

The deficit between the total revenue and total domestic expenditure, which last year amounted to $68,000,000, will this year be only about half that amount. The decrease of the deficit represents approximately the revenue from the war taxes imposed last session.

PURSE OF GOLD TO AN OUTFALL SEWER MAN

Mr. John Simpson Quits the Pick and Shovel for the Trenches

An interesting event came off on Saturday last, when the workmen on the outfall sewer gave one of their number a hearty send-off, as he was leaving to join the 93rd Battalion. Mr. John Simpson, who is giving up a steady job, and throws down the pick and shovel to take up arms in the defence of his country, was presented by his fellow workmen with a purse of gold. The foreman of the works, Mr. John Firstbeck, made the presentation, and prefaced his remarks with a spirited tribute to Mr. Simpson's courage and loyalty; and the sacrifice he was making in leaving his wife and family to fight for the Allies. The occasion was another example to encourage all who can to don the khaki and stand up for Canada and the Empire.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The Stock Market looked to Washington to-day, opening irregular and with no definite tendency while traders awaited news on the Lusitania case.

U. S. steel was up an eighth at 84 1-4. Crucible lost at 89 and Lackawanna and Baldwin Locomotive each gained a half point. In the railroad list Rock Island sold upward and Goodrich led rubber stocks with a gain of five-eighths.

New York, Feb. 8—It was waiting market during the entire forenoon. Prices held steady in spite of the dullness. At noon, after an announcement that the Lusitania situation was satisfactory, had come from Washington, a few gains had been made. Steel was quoted at 84 against 84 1-4 earlier in the day. Crucible was half a point under the morning's high, at 89. American Beet Sugar was strong at 70 1-2, and Colorado Fuel and Iron, which had sold at 48 7-8, had eased off a point.

The Estimates Will Be Referred Back

get six men to take their place at soldier's pay. These men might have some slight physical defect that would prevent them enlisting.

Morality Department.

"In looking over the estimates I find there is an item of sixty-two dollars for telephone service. There is also an item of one hundred dollars for scrubbing the Police Station. That means that scrub woman earning one dollar a day spends one-third of the whole year scrubbing the station, yet when you ask how often the station is scrubbed, the reply is—'once in a while.' The morality department is very ably represented by Mrs. McElhiney. She receives a salary of three hundred dollars a year. Added to this item is another hundred dollars, yet when a cab is wanted to take a female prisoner from the "clink" to the gaol, the cost is charged to the miscellaneous account. What are they going to do with all the money. Start a private bank? Then there is the sum of one hundred dollars for convention expenses. This is no years for conventions. We have deleted this item from the Fire Department estimates, and why not cut it out of the estimates for the Police Department. I would suggest that Chief Thompson get a few magazines on police work and stay at home. Finally we have an item for incidentals. Looking over the list of incidentals I find that nothing has been missed.

Resolution Adopted.

"We have Judge Huycke and Mayor Duffus going around the country telling the young men to enlist. We might prevail upon them to let six members of the police force enlist. We have Magistrate Dumble, another member of the Police Commission, who is always kicking about the high tax rate. According to Mr. Dumble there never was a Council that was not more extravagant than its predecessor."

Alderman Dobbin—"Hear, hear."

On motion of Aldermen Strattou and Dobbin, the City Council will request that the Police Commissioners reconsider the estimates as presented to the Council and endeavour, if possible, to reduce them by twenty-five hundred dollars. Also reduce the force by two men and allow as many of the men to enlist as were willing. This resolution was carried unanimously. The Council also decided to have a representation of the Finance Committee wait upon the Board of Police Commissioners in connection with the matter.

Alderman Dobbin—"I am given to understand that the number of arrests have decreased fifty per cent. Surely there must be less to do."

Alderman Stratton—"We can get men to do the work at soldier's pay until they return from the front. If necessary I'll take Brown's job myself."

Alderman Edgar and other members of the Council commended Alderman Stratton for the able manner in which he had presented his arguments, while the entire Council pledged their support.

"NO REPRISALS!" SAYS LORD BRYCE

LONDON, Feb. 7—Lord Bryce, once Ambassador to the United States speaking at Bedford College, London, condemned the policy of reprisals against Germany, which since the last Zeppelin raid, has gained many advocates.

"We stand in this war for justice and right," Lord Bryce said. "We stand for humanity, and from that position we must not depart. I don't myself believe for a moment that we shall gain anything by departing from it.

"If it came to cruelty against cruelty the enemy would always win. I see no reason to think that any recourse to inhuman practices that are shocking to philosophy and morals, which the enemy has adopted, would have the slightest effect on him or promote in any way our military success. We would not gain and we should certainly lose, because there is nothing that has won us more approval and sympathy of all that is best in the neutral nations than that we have championed the cause of justice and humanity. That is what has nerved our arm and has created a unity never paralleled in any previous crisis of our history."

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT LEAGUE MAY BE FORMED IN PETERBORO'

Matter is Brought to the Attention of the City Council and Referred to the Committee on Railways—Mile-a-Minute Street Car Service on Park Street is Not Appreciated by Ald. Stratton—Land Mark Belonging to the G.T.R May Be Removed.

Last evening the town clock was pealing out in sombre tone, the eleventh hour, just as that venerated body known as the City Council was preparing to adjourn. By the judicious use of the gavel, that symbol of order and majesty, Mayor J. J. Duffus was able to limit the session to the time allotted by the constitution. This despite the fact that Alderman Dobbin pulled a manuscript on the Council that was big enough to choke a horse. It dealt with the recent jaunt of a civic deputation to the jungles of Ottawa. While in the Capital City, the deputation attended a meeting of the Civic Improvement League and as a result came home enthused with the idea of converting this city into an earthly paradise. The Railways Committee of the City Council was invested with the responsibility of ascertaining the potential need for a civic improvement league in Peterborough. Alderman Dobbin's report of the meeting in Ottawa contained special reference to a number of sections of the city that might receive attention from such an organization.

Judge Huycke's Report.

The report of His Honour Judge Huycke concerning the investigation into certain matters relating to the Board of Education, will be turned over to that body. As one of the aldermen remarked the Council had no particular interest in the matter and was in a sense an unwilling victim of the investigation.

Alderman Edgar expressed surprise that the report should have been made public before being submitted to the City Council. Alderman Duncan replied that it was the Mayor who authorized the publication of the report, whereupon Alderman Edgar became apologetic.

Street Car Service.

A letter was read from the Peterborough Radial Railway Company requesting permission to stop their cars before passing intersecting streets. As it is now all cars stop after crossing intersecting streets. The first method is more general throughout Canada and minimizes accidents, as it gives the motormen a chance to see that the crossings are clear. The matter was referred to the Committee on Railways, also the question of inaugurating a better street car service in the west end of the city. To reach some points in the West Ward it is necessary to transfer three times. Alderman Langford said that the cars travelled as an excessive speed on McDonnel street from the boundary line, east to Park street. He recalled an instance where the car travelled several hundred feet past the crossing. The conductor admitted that it was impossible to stop the car at the crossing, and said the excessive speed was necessary in order to make connections. Alderman Stratton said the company gave a mile a minute service on some parts of Park street. "They are endeavouring to give a ten-minute service," observed Mayor Duffus. The matter was left to the tender mercies of the Committee on Railways.

The Estimates.

Estimates for the various departments of the city will be submitted to the Committee of the Whole Council for final approval. The first to meet this fate is the estimates for the Fire Department.

Snow-Ploughing.

Complaints were heard regarding the accumulation of ice and snow on the Smith Street Bridge. It was pointed out that no arrangements were made for the removal of the snow when the contracts were let for the removal of ice and snow. The Council decided to have the trouble remedied.

Was Re-elected.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood was re-elected to the Peterborough City Trust Commission for a period of five years.

A by-law to aid the Peterborough Metal Products Company by granting the usual exemption of taxes for a period of three years, was passed, also a by-law to authorize a fixed assessment of twelve thousand dollars for a period of one year to the Campbell Milling Company. This represents the unexpired portion of the fixed assessment granted to the Central Milling Company, ten years ago.

Want Roundhouse Removed.

The Committee on Railways will be asked to wait upon the Grand Trunk Railway authorities and dilate upon the advantages that would accrue to the city by the removal of what is commonly known as a roundhouse. This is located on Bethune street just south of the G.T.R. station. Failing this a German spy will be engaged to remove the landmark with the aid of a stick of dynamite.

Pigeon Creek Bridge.

Alderman Stratton made a verbal report upon the efforts of a civic deputation to secure Government aid towards the construction of a new bridge to replace the present Pigeon Creek Bridge. The deputation which waited upon Premier Borden received a very courteous hearing and was instructed to secure more detailed information concerning the need.

A Voice from Wescott Street.

Alderman Edgar presented to the City Council a petition on behalf of the residents of Wescott street in which a claim was made for grading and better drainage facilities. The matter was referred to the Board of Works with instructions to act.

City Engineer Parsons will be instructed to look into the advisability of dumping surplus ashes in the vicinity of Bonaccord street bridge, and report at the next meeting. In the meantime an attempt will be made to have Sanitary Inspector Spence and Mr. K. Graham, the present garbage contractor, present at the meeting, and an amiable arrangement arrived at.

A CALL TO DUTY

Hark, aloud the cry is ringing
Through our Empire far and wide
Gathering strength and rolling onward
Like an overwhelming tide.
Men are wanted, men of valour,
Men who will not fear the foe,
Men who'll gladly do their duty
Men who'll cry I'll gladly go.
Men in hundreds, men in thousands,
Men in millions pass along
Swift, erect, all clad in khaki,
Men whose mouths are filled with song.
Youths with fresh and rosy faces,
Men with visage stern and set,
Millions armed and marching, drilling,
Still the cry is more men yet.
What has caused this great commotion.
Why this stir, and why his strife,
Causing men from peaceful living
To accept the soldiers' life?
Hast thou not heard of German brutur,
Hast thou not know the fiendish breed
That drove their hellish way through Belgium
And to neither sex or age gave heed?
Hast thou not heard of Edith Cavell,
Whom Germans murdered in cold blood?
Who bravely stood with face uncovered
And gave her spotless soul to God?
Her only faults were deeds of mercy
Which she e'en with the foe did share,
Yet 'spite of this, these brutal soldiers
The English nurse did murder there.
Hast thou not heard of murdered babies,
Methinks their death cry now I hear,
As soldiers without thought or feeling
Them from their mother's arms do tear,
The outraged wife, the ravished maiden,
My God, the thought's too much to stand
Of all the grim and bloody picture
Portrayed upon this prostrate land.
See, see, then, ships now cross the ocean,
But not on lawful battle bent,
But to a small defenceless harbour
That's where the German squadron went,
Poor Scarboro's folk had scarcely 'risen
But just about their morning meal
Ere shot and shell came o'er them flying
Causing their little homes to reel.
Hark, now the clock is midnight striking
When from the sky so clear and bright
Is hurled the bomb upon the helpless.
Their aim to kill, maim, and affright.
What shall I say of murdered Poland,
Of little Serbia, stern and brave,
Or of the good ship Lusitania
The Huns did sink beneath the wave?
They're fighting not as men with nations
Who had on certain laws agreed,
But as the fiend incarnate leads them
To do each dark and devilish deed,
And shall these monsters be our masters,
Our necks beneath their iron heel,
And shall we run to do their bidding
Just like a dog, afraid to squeal.
No, no, a thousand times the answer
While British blood flows in our veins
No foreign lord shall be our master
No foreign king shall over us reign.
This is the reason men are wanted
And this is why, the cry goes forth
Where'er the British race has settled
Through every land around the earth,
That cry now comes to you who hear me
To all who own our good king's sway,
Then do not while he's calling, tarry,
But hurry up, 'list and obey,
Hurry up, the call is urgent
Do not let it sound in vain,
"Do your bit" and do it quickly
Deny yourself, and share the pain,
The glorious cause of freedom's worth it,
A freedom which the world shall share
A freedom wrested fro mthe tyrant,
Bought by the blood of those who dare.
Up Britain's sons are waiting yonder
Australia's colours fly there too,
With all the children of the Empire
Oh do not let them wait for you.
The British fleet will guard you over
And comrades' hands will grip yours there,
Come, wait no longer, give your answer,
That you'll be one to do and dare.

Music & Drama

Seldom have the people of Peterborough had such an opportunity of seeing as fine play so beautifully acted as was afforded last night when Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the distinguished English actress and her original English company, appeared at the Grand in George Bernard Shaw's romantic comedy, "Pygmalion." From the celebrated star down through to the smallest parts the presentation was a refreshing demonstration of historic ability—clean cut, clever and natural and widely different from the work of some of the American companies with which we are at times "favoured." "Pygmalion" shows Shaw at his best. Rich in epigram, abounding with wit and humour, and with lines lavish in sarcasm, the cleverness and brightness of the comedy was refreshing and invigorating. Mrs. Campbell, playing for the first time in her career a comedy part, was delicious as Eliza Doolittle, the cockney flowergirl who is raised from the gutter by Henry Higgins, professor in phonetics. Her cockney dialect in the first two acts was not any more clever than her struggle to speak good English in the third or her finished speech in the two closing acts. She had her audience with her from her first appearance. A most finished performance was that given by Mr. J. W. Austin, who made of "Harvey Higgins" a natural likeable part in spite of the cynicism and abruptness of the role. The work of Mr. H. Conway Wingfield as "Alfred Doolittle," a representative of the "undeserving poor," upon whom is forced "middle class morality," was delightfully clever. Each of the other rolls was artistically played, and the whole performance was a delight.

WITH THE STARS

Mr. W. E. Harper, B.A., of Ottawa, to Visit Peterboro'

Mr. W. A. Harper, B.A., of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, is to lecture on the subject, "Nebulae" on Thursday evening, Feb. 10, in St. Paul's Sunday School room.

Many of the large observatories are at present devoting considerable time to the study of the filmy shreds and balls of cloudy material among the stars known as nebulae; seeking to give them the proper place in the universe.

Mr. Harper will tell in simple language what is known of the wonderful objects, with particular reference to the discoveries of the past few years. A number of lantern slides of nebulae will be shown, made recently from the best photographs obtained with the 60 inch reflector at Mount Wilson

The lecture will be given in the St Paul's Sunday School room on Thursday, Feb. 10th. Admission free. No collection.

A TELLING ILLUSTRATION

Last Sunday morning at Murray Street Church, Rev. J. R. Webb, speaking on "The Demands of a Reputation," spoke words that should go home to all who call themselves Britons. Having commended those who have offered themselves to the 83rd Battalion he told of a man who some years ago belonged to "the fringe" of his congregation in Montreal, and whose life had become anything but helpful to himself or his family. After having interceded for him with his employers on different occasions, the speaker had found him intoxicated again and absent from his work. When asked what the long-suffering employer would say now, the poor weakling replied: "He will likely be easy with me for the sake of the Missus." Surely, said Mr. Webb, there are no men here who hope to enjoy the protection of others and to have ease, comfort and safety under the aegis of the British name while they do nothing to deserve it. Surely all will want to play their part in whatever way they can rather than to depend upon the charity of a long-suffering nation whose people for the most part are willing to fight for her, work for her, live for her, and even die for her.

Baby Afflicted With Eczema Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured

The Family Doctor Tried in Vain to Heal the Sores—Another Tribute to This Great Healing Ointment

It may be interesting to note that Dr. Chase's Ointment was originally compounded to cure a case of eczema on a child. The disease had spread almost over the entire body and defied all the regular treatments for such troubles. The doctor was perplexed, but finally on the formula of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and, as many say, "it worked like a charm," healing up the nasty sores and leaving the skin soft and smooth.

That was a good many years ago, and since then many thousands of cases of eczema, both in children and adults, have been cured, until to-day Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognised as the standard cure for itching skin diseases.

Mrs. Geo. McNair, River Charlee, N.B., writes as follows: "We use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home, and would not wish for anything better for cuts, burns and bruises. A few years ago a friend of mine, whose baby was terribly afflicted with eczema, had her child treated by their own family physician, but the little one got no better. They tried several remedies, but they all proved useless in this case. Upon the advice of a neighbour, they got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and before the first box was used the child was completely cured.

"I can also recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to suffering friends, who I know will be glad to learn of something to relieve their nervous trouble. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

So soothing and healing is Dr. Chase's Ointment that relief from itching and burning comes almost as soon as the ointment is applied. The sores are cleaned by the action of this treatment, and the process of healing is soon begun. By persistent use of the ointment cure is affected. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRADE TO-NIGHT

There will be an open meeting of the Board of Trade in the Council Chambers to-night at 8 o'clock to discuss the recent activities among German sympathizers and agents in Canada, and to obtain suggestions as to the methods to be adopted to check further attempts and to consider the question of better protection against forest fires and other matters. All citizens interested are requested to be present.

FUNERAL OF MRS. E. BURNS

The funeral of the late Mrs. Eliza Burns took place this morning from the residence of her son, J. Burns, Brownton. She was born in Ireland but came to Canada at the age of 22 years. She was the daughter of the late Patrick McGarrity. She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Miss Margaret of Toronto, and Mrs. Noel Guerin of this city; also John and Arthur of New York city, one sister, Mrs. D. Cushing, and one brother, Bernard, of Saginaw, Mich. The late Mrs. Burns was well known and highly respected by all who knew her.

Aroused By An Explosion and Munition Plant in Flames

GALT, Feb. 7.—An Austrian, giving his name as John Schmidt, is under arrest at Hespeler on suspicion of being responsible for the fire which on Saturday destroyed the shell department of the A. B. Jardine foundry in that town. It is learned that he has been recently employed in munition plants in Galt, Berlin and Hamilton.

What may prove an important clue is the story told by Ernest Radkie, who, with Charles Markle, was last to leave the plant. This was at 12.30 p.m., they having remained after the others in order to do some repair work. Radkie states that earlier in the day he saw a man enter the shop carrying a grip, apparently in search of a job. Later, after the man had gone, Radkie noticed that the grip still stood beside the rosin tank. He believes the grip contained a bomb, the explosion of which brought Watchman Loveday from the meal he was eating in another part of the shop to the shell department, which he found in flames. Loveday states that he distinctly heard an explosion and this statement is corroborated by others who also heard the report. The time was then 12.30 and Loveday at once turned in an alarm. The firemen succeeded in confining the blaze to the section of the plant in which it started. It is estimated the damage will amount to $50,000 or $60,000.

Spiked Clubs Now Used By Soldiers On Both Sides

ATHENS, Greece, Feb. 7.—At last the warriors have got down to using clubs; just ordinary clubs, for brawling men. The Austro-German soldiers are supplied with bludgeons and on parts of the British front the ally soldiers have been furnished clubs covered with spikes. These British clubs look much like the big stick American cartoonists used to picture T. R. using. The clubs are for use by troops entering the trenches on the sly and slaying noiselessly so that the men in other parts of the trench don't know what is going on.

One of the newest missles in the great war is a huge shell the Germans throw at the Dardanelles. Only air guns could throw the shell without exploding it, and these new air guns must be ten inches in bore and many feet long. One of these big shells which fell in the British line unexploded has been taken apart by experts. It was ten inches in diameter and fifteen inches high, made of sheet steel with wooden plug discs at each end. This big steel can contained seventy-six pieces of scrap iron and twenty-five pounds of tri-nitro toluol. The missle weighed 51 pounds. The firing of the big shell must have been touchy work. Imagine a fire cracker ten inches thick, that would blow a hole in the earth six feet deep and ten feet in diameter. Imagine yourself facing the duty of lighting the fuse on this fifty-one pound cracker and then, while the fuse was sputtering, placing the cracker in the mouth of a giant air gun and firing the gun in time to get the cracker out of your neighborhood before it went off.

Most hand bombs don't go off by contact. They must be lighted first and then thrown. Sometimes the lighting is done with a match or a cigarette; other times by pulling a little string which rubs two strips of sulphur together somewhere in the handle of the bomb. Both sides is the great war have bombs of various sorts for various needs. If the enemy is oncoming, for instance, you must have a bomb that will explode quickly; if you're rushing toward him you need a bomb that you can throw far ahead and that will have done its job by the time you reach the scene.

The French have the fastest hand-bomb known. The thrower wears a leather thong on his wrist and a hook on this thong is attached to a hook on the bomb. The act of throwing lights the fuse, which is so short and so quick burning that the explosion is almost immediate.

The slowest bomb, perhaps, is the Servian. It is shaped like a pocket whisky flask, neck stopper and all and is of iron and brass. The thrower unscrews the brass top, hits a firing pin on a stone or the butt of his rifle, and then, after a space of seven seconds, throws it. The bomb throbs in the man's hand just before it is due to explode, giving him warning. If he throws the bomb too soon the other fellow may pick it up and throw it back at him. Bomb experts figure that any soldier can pick up a lighted hand-bomb and throw it away from him if he has five seconds to spare.

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen, and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.

Potatoes are best kept in storage at a temperature of 32 degrees to 36 degrees. Thirty-two degrees will spoil pototoes for seed use, but not for eating. Apples keep best at 34 to 36 degrees.

New Wash Crepes, 15c
In this most popular material are shown about 50 designs, a range from among which anyone can be suited, and the entire lot are old qualities and fast washing colours. To-morrow, yard..... 15c

Prints of All Qualities Here
Although indigo prints and other colours are impossible to procure to-day in the old fast dyes, our stocks are most complete. Hundreds of pieces were purchased when we found out the seriousness of the dye situation and now that these are impossible to get from the makers, our stocks are complete. These may be purchased from us with all assurance as to the washing.

Fine Irish Poplins, 39c
These may be selected in all the good shades, such as Tan, Navy, Grey, Mauve, Belgian Blue, Pink, Black or White. The weave is a very fine cord, in soft, rich, bright, silky finish. Choose now while the good colourings may be secured. Special, yard..... 39c

Palm Beach Weaves, 35c
These are shown in double width and in the real Palm Beach weave, which is made of a heavy round thread in bright mercerised finish. The colours are pink, navy, saxe blue, white and sand. On sale to-morrow..... Per yard 35c

New White Vestings, 19c, 25c and 29c
The range and good values in White Vestings will be found here just the same as in previous seasons and if anything the patterns are daintier. First showing to-morrow.. 19c, 25c, 29c

Civic Deputation Attended Meeting of Improvement League During Recent Visit to Ottawa

Result of Trip is Embodied in Report That Was Presented to the City Council—Summary of the Proposed Act—Peterboro' is Looked Upon as a Shining Example in Municipal Activity.

The appended report concerning the recent visit of a civic deputation to Ottawa, was presented to the City Council last evening by Ald. F. H. Bobbin:

Your deputation named to join with representatives from the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough proceeded to Ottawa, and there by appointment had an interview with the Premier, Sir Robert Borden, making request that the Department having such matters in charge, consider and make a grant in aid of the re-building of the bridge at the crossing of Pigeon Creek. The deputation was received and heard and statement to that effect has already appeared in the local press. Additional information was asked for, in addition to that which was supplied by those who addressed the meeting. Specific statement as to the degree to which the lands adjoining the creek were flooded, consequent on the erection, some time now past, of the dam at Buckhorn. The premier admitted that he viewed with the contention of the deputation with interest, and possibly favourably, when he was advised that the department had previously made a grant in favour of the work on the Chemong Lake bridge, under almost similar conditions.

Civic Improvement.

Taking advantage of being in Ottawa, the day following, the Mayor and members of your council attended the sittings of the Civic Improvement League of Canada, held in the Railway Committee Room of the House. The meeting was very largely attended, several coming from as far west as Winnipeg and Moose Jaw.

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, the Governor-General formally opened the sessions. His address was brief, but expressed views thoroughly in accord with the movement. He spoke of what had, to his own observation, been accomplished in parts of England. He hoped to find under new auspices that the essentials of a decent public life would be extended to all parts of Canada, both to cities, towns and villages, but to suburban localities as well. What was looked for was to confer on each the desirable attributes of health, convenience, and a fair measure of beauty.

Municipal Activity.

The address of Mr. Thomas Adams, of the Town Planning Branch of the Commission of Conservation, Ottawa was one replete with the most practical suggestions for municipal betterment. Mr. Adams has had a most extensive English experience, and is the foremost authority in his profession. He discussed some problems of municipal activity, municipal government finance, unemployment and the betterment of living conditions, instancing what had been accomplished in localities where the outlook had seemed almost hopeless. He pointed out the need for action to conserve the lives and health of Canadian citizens and physical, industrial and natural resources of our municipal areas, the desirability of securing higher living conditions as greater industrial efficiency. He discussed more in a provisions of the New Town Planning Act, which it is proposed to present and have passed at the present session of the Ontario Legislature and closed with an appeal to the meeting to further the proposition as one in the best interests of Canada.

Civic Problems.

Dr. J. W. Robertson, Mayor Waugh, Winnipeg, Mayor Walters, Hamilton, Mrs. Adam Shortt also spoke on kindred topics. At the luncheon in the Chateau Laurier, Hon. J. W. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, spoke on "Civic Problems in Ontario," discussing the need for larger municipal cognizance of the conditions needful to ensure a vigorous, healthy life among the people and the bearing that a well nurtured, comfortably housed happy people had on the question of civic progress and individual happiness. He referred to conditions as we now find them, and afterward sketched out ideal conditions and the probable results.

Proposed Act.

It is interesting to note briefly some provisions of the proposed Act and the bearing its operations would have on the conditions in this or any other municipality undertaking to build up and improve in accordance with suggestions and directions. It is essentially an act to and with respect to planning and regulating the use and development of land for building purposes in cities, towns and rural municipalities. Practically the authority is manifested in much the same way as is now seen in the operations of the Provincial and Local Boards of Health. There will be a Department of Municipal Affairs. A local board is constituted, consisting of the Mayor and two other members of the Council (ex-officio) and not less than two ratepayers to be appointed by the local authority, for three years.

The local Board approves all new development. Laying out of streets, etc. No property shall be sub-divided and placed on the market without the consent and approval of the board. Nor until in the opinion of the board that there is real necessity for such allotment and that adjoining and intervening sections already on the market have been sufficiently built upon and settled. This provision will at once do away with the placing on the market of suburban tracts at the will of the speculator in lands and lots. The lessening of municipal expense for consequent sewers, sidewalks, drainage systems and other outlays made at the public expense.

Acquire Lands.

Should it be necessary for the municipality to acquire lands or properties for purpose of improvement, the procedure of so acquiring is simplified. Expensive arbitration are almost nullified. Property benefitted by means of municipal improvements becomes assessable for a share of the added value resulting to adjacent properties from the works or improvement.

Two illustrations of the operation of the Act may be instanced. Under its provisions a general cleaning up of dead ends can go forward. The objection of the owners, who may long have stood in the way of improvement does not count. All over the city are spots that are very much in need of betterment. Let us consider the state of the block of land, in the heart of this city, and bounded by Aylmer, Brock, Murray and Bethune streets. That property is in such a state today as it was sixty years ago. It is a dead end. The appearance is repellant to civic improvement. It discounts the neighbourhood, a wet blanket on individual progress so far as individual properties are concerned. It is bisected by the creek. From time immemorial the rights of the owners of the banks of the creek have prevailed. Now under the new act all is changed.

Tree Planting.

Should the local Board decide that it is time that, in the interests of the neighbourhood and of civic credit that this should be changed it may take possession of the land with the object of improvement in view. Say it decides to deep the water course, at this point, narrow its width and confine the flood and flow by a concrete wall, which may well be done. Filling in the excavated material on the banks of the stream and spreading it over the lot to raise the level. Plant a row of trees, if you will, along each side. When finished the owner views the result with satisfaction. Certainly his property is improved. The frontages along Aylmer and Murray streets are now first-class building property. Citizens seek to buy as the position is quite a satisfactory one. There is an increase in value. Then the board is entitled to recover from the owner one-half of the increased value over the avrage assessed value for the last three years. The amout realized defrays, or helps to defray, the cost of improvement. In case the owner declines to sell any part of the property, so improved, then the assessor levies on the whole property, so held, double the ordinary taxable rate.

Let us assume that such an improve as a drive-way, or boulevard, say around the shore of the Little Lake, is contemplated, along the eastern margin, from Burnham street to the Locks bridge, a very desirable and seemly civic improvement. Indeed an offer was made to the city, or the necessary right of way if the city would undertake to grade, lay out and embellish the driveway. It would occur, that having laid out and constructed such a boulevard that the property fronting on the driveway would form very eligible and desirable residential property. So it would. But the local board steps in. A municipal improvement has here raised the value of the lots. So the Board expropriates so much as 200 feet back from the driveway, paying the owners the average of three years' assessment cuts up the property, if you will, and sells the lots and pays for the improvement out of the proceeds.

The possibilities for civic improvement under the Act are very good. The municipality can be consolidated. Streets and public service expense reduced or confined in a definite growing area. Dead ends cleaned up. Sore spots healed. Disfigurements wiped out or concealed. A fair start made for something of civic beauty and such steps taken as will foster a commendable civic pride.

Local Utilities.

In closing it is due our city to say that so far as the observation of the members of the delegation would permit that Peterborough is eminently well served in its local utilities. Our water, hospital, light (the latter so far as cost of light is concerned), municipal service, fire protection, police protection and other activities are quite abreast of the best. There seems little lacking in any of these forms of our public service, as compared with those supplied in other municipalities. Mention was deservedly made of the most excellent service given by the City Clerk, who is esteemed as one of the notably efficient municipal officers in many respects. Numbers of those present were fairly familiar with the general situation at Peterborough and congratulated members of the delegation on what they named as the fortunate position of this city, but were reminded that what seemed to be the outcome of fortuitous circumstances was really an evidence of the diligence and efficiency and public spirit of its people. It was admitted that the city was progressive in the acquirement of its major utilities and in things making for a decent public service and general good.

In particular it was remembered and mentioned that Peterborough had both in the extent of the enlistment for overseas service, in extent of population and in raising funds for patriotic and war purposes, done remarkably well, the enlistment being the largest in proportion to population east of Winnipeg, in Canada. Your delegation felt that in being representative for the time being of your city that they and the city were as conspicuously notable in the list of Canadian cities as any mentioned in debate or instanced as examples of progress in municipal activity.

The Tragedy at Ottawa

The destruction of the Parliament buildings at Ottawa caused a thrill of indignation in this country because of the moral certainty that the deed was due to German conspirators. Indeed, the Providence Journal informed the Department of Justice of this country three weeks ago that this building was to be destroyed, and that Rideau Hall and munitions plants would follow, and that the arrangements were being made through the German Embassy.

It is not the custom in this country to jump at conclusions and yet the case resembles the operations which were fastened to Captain von Papen and his superiors in connection with other outrages in Canada.

"When Germany is at war she stops at nothing. No moral or spiritual law serves as a check. Terrorism and frightfulness go hand in hand with smiles and purrings. "Holt" placed the bomb which exploded in the Capitol at Washington. "Holt" fired the shots at Mr. Morgan, but to this day there is a deep conviction that there was an influence behind "Holt" which forced the fugitive murderer on and which at the proper moment furnished him with the opportunity to commit suicide in true German style —New York Herald.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—The editorial in last night's Examiner merits the serious consideration of all who have at heart the welfare of our Empire and the victory of our arms. It refers to what is, and what is not, legitimate work on the Lord's Day. It raises a number of questions, the answer to which involves a much more direct relation to the subject of patriotism and the winning of the war than many suppose. What is the relation of righteousness to patriotism? What is the relation of a nation's morality at home to the efficiency of its army on the field of battle? Is God merely on the side of the strongest battalions, or the side which can produce the most munitions?

Many of us believe that one reason why victory is so long deferred is that the moral conditions of our Empire are such that God cannot grant us a victory. Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty believes this. His words of a few days ago have been quoted in all the papers. Here they are again: "England still remains to be taken out of the stupor of self-administration and complacency into which her flourishing condition has stooped her. Until she can be stirred out of this condition, until a religious revival takes place, just so long will this war continue."

In my sermon on the day of prayer for our Empire I spoke as follows: "We are praying that Britain may be victorious in this struggle. Do I shock you when I say this morning that I hope she is not victorious for some time to come? Britain is not yet ready for victory; she has not set her house in order. Our boys have gone to fight for the Empire. For what Empire are they fighting? The Empire which was, and is, with all its worldliness, its worship of wealth, its love of luxury and ease, its vile slums, its indescribable misery, due to drunkenness and lust? Is that the Empire we have sent our sons to fight for? I would not spill one drop of my blood to prolong the life of such an Empire by a single day. Or, are we fighting for the Empire that is to be, the Empire that is to rise out of the ruins of the old, cleansed and purified by the fiery discipline of war, cleansed and saved from the sins which have been the explanation of the decay of Germany and which sap the vitality of nations and disintegrate Empires."

May it not be in our desire for victory we are defeating the very end for which we labour, by our disregard of prayer and worship and the sanctity of the Lord's day? May not one of the chief sins of our Empire be our growing forgetfulness of the purpose for which God gave us a day of rest? The great masses of the British people have drifted away from the churches. It is difficult to see how men can remember God if they fail to see the day in the way of His appointment, or if through greed of gain they are denied the use of the day for the purpose for which it was given. Are we not, therefore, but piecing guilt upon guilt when we run our factories on the Lord's Day? And are we not postponing—rather than hastening—of which the Lord said: "Remember the the day of victory by working on the day Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Lloyd-George has found out what many have known all along that it is an economic blunder to work a man seven days a week. It does not pay. Men cannot produce as much working seven days a week as working six. That has often been demonstrated. And so Lloyd-George has proved it out in his munition factories and has ordered them to remain closed in future on the Lord's Day. But let us hope that that great Christian statesman has been actuated by moral and spiritual motives for his action as well, such motives as led Sir Admiral Beatty to write "as he did; and that he sees what prophets of God have been telling us all along that only as we return to God, repentance of our sins and turn to God, reverence His laws and His day, can we hope to see the forth putting of His almighty hand on our behalf, and a speedy and a triumphant end of this awful struggle.

Yours very truly,
R. FORTH.

MR. H. O. FISKE DISLOCATED AN ARM IN A FALL AT THE CURLING RINK

Mr. Homer O. Fiske, superintendent of the Peterbrough Utilities Commission, fell on the ice at the curling rink last night and dislocated a shoulder. It was learned that he was standing with his back toward the length of the ice watching the end. When one stone was played it struck another, which in turn shot toward Mr. Fiske. He fell on one side and across another stone, thereby throwing his arm out of joint. It was a regrettable accident and one that fortunately doesn't occur frequently. Mr. Fiske, like other business men, finds curling a recreation and exercise and he has been playing a good game all season. It is hoped that he will not be long rejoining his rink.

Kaiser Inspects Fortifications on The Danube

BUCHAREST, Feb. 8.—The Journal Des Balkans gives the following particulars of the German Emperor's recent visit along the Danube.

"After leaving Nish the Emperor proceeded to Semlin, where he passed the night in the Imperial train. The next day he embarked on an Austrian torpedo boat with his suite of 12 officers and went to Orsova, the torpedo boat being convoyed by a flotilla of gunboats and monitors.

"Archduke Joseph Ferdinand of Austria, accompanied by his military suite, met Emperor William at Arsova late in the afternoon, the party then going to Mehadia, where they passed the night in a hotel. The following day the Emperor inspected the Roumanian frontier flotilla and continued the journey downstream, proceeding through the Iron Gate.

"Opposite the Island of Simian the procession halted while the Emperor and his party inspected the Roumanian fortifications at Palota. The party then returned to Semlin, where the Emperor ordered a train to continue his journey home."

PROF. STEPHEN LEACOCK TO GIVE ADDRESS HERE

On Thursday, February 17th on Behalf of Red Cross Society and Belgian Relief Fund

Professor Stephen Leacock of McGill University has very generously offered his services free of charge to the local Red Cross Society for a lecture to be given by him on Thursday evening, 17th February.

This offer by Professor Leacock has been gladly accepted by the Society and his visit will be eagerly looked forward to by the citizens generally.

Professor Leacock needs no advertising to a Canadian audience; his books are ever appealing to a larger and ever increasing circle of readers, and his clever, wholesome humour has beguiled many an hour for us. Professor Leacock has been giving most liberally of both his time and strength, and has lectured in most of the principal cities in Ontario with tremendous success, and has been the means through his lectures of raising a large sum of money for the benefit of the Red Cross Society and the Belgian Relief Fund, in both of which he is deeply interested.

Professor Leacock makes no charge whatever, even paying his own expenses, so it is earnestly desired that the Peterborough public will show their appreciation of his generosity by turning out in very large numbers and welcoming one of Canada's clever and loyal sons. Remember Thursday, 17th February.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

GREAT INTEREST IN TO-MORROW'S GAME

93rd Battalion and Electrics Will Clash at Brock Street Rink in First of Two Games For the District Championship --Lou Marsh Will Referee the Game Which Promises to Be the Most Exciting of the Season.

Fast ice is assured for to-morrow night, which was the only thing needed to guarantee that the play-off clash between the 93rd Battalion and the Electrics will be the most exciting battle of the year. The teams meet on Wednesday and Friday nights in home-and-home games, goals to count and the series promises to be the cream of the hockey offerings of the year. There is confidence in both camps. The Electrics will have Spratt back in harness after an absence from the last two games, but may be without the services of Lornie Rose, the Junior Captain, who was spiked in Cobourg last week. If he is unable to play to-morrow night Fred Graham, the speedy little rover of the Juniors will replace him. The Electrics are fortunate in having a crop of good juniors to fall back on, and are well fortified in substitutes, as has been demonstrated in the last two games in the district race, when, without Spratt, and with Rose on only five minutes in the first game, they won two hard battles away from home. The Red, White and Blue team are in good shape, and are determined to show the soldiers that a real hockey struggle is on. Up at the Armouries the 93rd team and supporters are supremely confident. They claim their team is improving every time out. The soldiers will likely have the same line-up that represented them in the last three games unless they are reinforced by Jack Lavis, the Cobourg rover who is talking of enlisting in the 93rd. Lou Marsh will referee the game, which is called for 8.30 o'clock. The Soldiers will have the 93rd Band and their Rooters' Club in line, and there promises to be all kinds of excitement around the old Brock Street ice box to-morrow night.

BELLEVILLE JUNIORS WON AT LINDSAY

LINDSAY, Feb. 7.—In a fairly fast but clean game Belleville defeated Lindsay in the first game to break the tie for group honours. The final score was 3 to 2; first period, 2 to 1; second period, 2 to 2. Lindsay plays the return game in Belleville Wednesday night. The line-up:

28 RINKS AT OSHAWA BONSPIEL TO-DAY

Twenty-eight rinks are entered in the Oshawa Bonspiel which opened this morning. Two of them represent the Peterborough Club with Mr. Robert Hicks skipping one of them and R. M. Waddell or George Giroux the other. Their complement is L. Bowes, Percy Fitzgerald, H. R. Martin and R. Hicks, and R. M. Waddell G. H. Giroux, Jack Read and John Brightman.

Four rinks go to Bobcaygeon on Thursday to play the first section of the Fitzgerald-Bottum games.

The big scores on No. 2 ice leave the impression that it is the "Jonah" sheet. Harry Foote got two lone points last night against Jim Connal, and this is but one of a succession of wide margins that have appeared on that particular board lately.

Britain Soon May Mobilize Doctors

With the growing numbers of wounded from the front as Britain's army expands and the spheres of operations increase, this country is faced with a dearth of doctors, and the strain on the medical men left to look after the civilian population is becoming heavier every day.

Seeing that the needs of the army must be attended to first, this strain is bound to increase, and a movement is now on foot to get Lord Derby to assume the organization of the civilian medical service so as to free more doctors for the army by promoting greater efficiency and better organization at home.

The scheme, which is supported by a great many leading men in the medical world who see that much energy is wasted by its being directed into wrong channels, is to divide the entire medical strength of the country into groups, somewhat on the lines of Lord Derby's system of recruiting. It is proposed to divide the doctors into the following three groups, according to age and physical fitness:

A—For service with the army and navy abroad.

B—For service with the army at home.

C—For civilian and public health, asylum and prison duties.

In group A it is proposed to place all those under 35 years of age, who are physically fit for service with the army in the field; in group B all those under 45 years of age, and in group C the remainder of the medical profession, including women doctors.

It is now very generally recognized that the haphazard enlistment of skilled engineers of all sorts in the British army was a mistake and with much delay and trouble skilled engineers were brought back from the firing lines to serve their country not less bravely but certainly more efficiently in the munition factories. There is only a limited number of skilled engineers and it is essential that each be placed in the post where his skill can be employed to the best advantage.

Exactly similar conditions apply in respect of medical skill available for the army and the civilian population. The strength of the medical profession in the British Isles is known. There are about 30,000 medical men on the register all told, and these 30,000 include the men who have retired from active practice. On them has fallen the responsibility of serving the sick and wounded from armies now to be raised to 4,000,000 men, and at the same time providing for the needs of the civilian population of the British Isles of about 40,000,000 souls.

At least one-half of the entire body of the medical profession has now been called for service with the army and navy. The strain on the half left to look after the civilians has been carried to the limit, and it is recognized that the only way in which further relief can be obtained for either service is by improved organization in the use of the men available.

Asked whether he thought there was any possibility for such reorganization, a high officer of the royal army medical corps characteristically answered, "Is there any department connected with the war that does not need reorganization?" Officers of the R. A. M. C., all officers of the royal medical corps, are fully qualified medical practioners—state there is very much waste in men and want of skill and consequent loss of life and limb. The following is a characteristic example: A young Harley street specialist, one of the leading young men in London, volunteered for military service. He was sent to the front and found himself ticking names off a list of wounded. Meanwhile operations requiring the highest expert knowledge and experience were being performed by men who were beginners at the work, and who knew very little about expert surgery.

The superintendent of one of the large London hospitals put the case as follows: "The mistake has been made to rush off all the doctors to the base hospitals, distributing them on the old system of a unit to each regiment, and depleting the service at the place where it needs to be strongest, namely at home. A specialist who joins the Royal Army Medical Corps is no longer regarded as a specialist; he is just a 'qualified man.' He may be an eminent pathologist, or an aural expert, or an authority in any other branch of medical science, but to the war office he is just an army doctor.

"The base hospitals, moreover, are not the place for other than emergency treatment. In difficult cases the critical surgery begins at the home hospital, and it is just here that we are severely overtasked and under-staffed. At this hospital for example—and ours is just a typical case—we could not carry on our work at all if it were not for former members of the staff who have come back to give us a hand in the emergency. They are elderly men who cannot stand the strain of the night and heavy work. All our senior surgeons went off to the front earlier, and we are left with the juniors, and these returned veterans.

"The situation grows graver inasmuch as we are getting no young students in their first three years who are coming along—they are all enlisting instead. The war office gives us no assurance that what has to be recognized is that for hospital purposes we want the real experts, the best men here in London. We might organize emergency corps from London to go to particular points on the front, like Neuve Chapelle or Loos, to meet special calls."

The doctors now want Lord Derby to step in and evolve order out of this chaos, and they believe that he is the man to do it.

OUR NAVY'S REPLY TO THE HUNS' BARALONG RAVINGS—British sub. crew rescuing German sailors from the sea. This is a way they have in the British navy—this actual photograph shows two of the gallant crew of a British submarine, in perilous danger themselves on the slippery outrigging of a submarine, hauling in by means of a life line, one of the drowning German sailors from a Kaiser warship sunk somewhere in the North Sea. In the foreground, holding on to another rope is a German sailor, just rescued, watching some of his comrades who are still in the water. This photo is proof of the way the British navy carries out its humane traditions, even when fighting such a dastardly foe as the Hun.

ARABS ARE ROBBERS

Despise Town-dwellers Whose Power Ends at the Desert

The most picturesque visitors to Bagdad are the Arabs: the Bedouin, with his keen eyes fixed from long habit on the horizon; the grave sheikh with his staff, his long grey beard and steadfast gaze, and turban bound with the black agal. The Bedouin distrust the Turks, and their antipathy is seasoned with contempt. Outside the city they were free as the wind. There was no armed control beyond a gunshot from the walls. The sheikhs of the tribes were subsidized to let the camel-post go through to Damascus, and the Turkish Government had no hold on them unless one of their number came into the bazaars of Bagdad for supplies. I made the journey across the desert with an old haji, who guided himself by the stars. Twelve days on a fast dromedary, riding eighteen hours at a stretch with two short halts for meals, and the beast had only one drink between the Euphrates and Damascus. I was held up and robbed a day and a half from Hitt, and owed it to the haji that I got through alive.—London Mail correspondent.

STAGING OF THE JIHAD; EVEN HUNS SENTENCED

The truth is at last out concerning the farcical declaration of the Kaiser's own Holy War. The declaration of jihad in Constantinople was nothing more nor less than a comedy, writes a neutral correspondent. The Turks have no religious ceremonies, nor any special ritual for such occasions. The Sultan, the Sheik-ul-Islam, the Fetva Emini, attired in newly-invented uniforms, walked in processions, with Ministers and Hadjas, with the soldiers and people of the Mosque of Santa Sophia, opened for the first time as the cathedral of the Mohammedan world, and there, with prayers and reading the Koran, the Fetva of jihad was signed by the Khalif, by the Sheik-ul-Islam and by the Fetva Emini, and then proclaimed. Next morning dancing dervishes made a procession in the main streets carrying before them the ancient flag of the Sultans of Iconium, given to them by the Khalif. The Turkish papers published inflammatory editorials and ready-made sensational news of a general Mohammedan rising all over the world. They said that the Ameer of Afghanistan was marching with 300,000 soldiers to India, where all the Islams had enlisted in the jihad, and were driving the "hateful and tyrannical" English out of the sacred lands of India. The Caucasus was of course in revolt, and the Muscovites were evacuating Tiflis. Odessa was in flames. The Arabs of Northern Africa, and Egypt had raised the green flag—the emblem of holy war. At last the time had come.

But with the exception of a few murders in the provinces, committed by a class of fanatics against the native Christians, no sign of any religious excitement was shown. Besides, the Turks as well as the Germans found that they had made a mistake. A declaration of jihad meant war against the Germans, Austrians, native Christians and all the neutral Christian nations. Consequently by publishing a second Fetva all the faithful were warned against any injury to friendly Christian nations. The distinction destroyed more than half the fervor for the jihad in the Moslem mind.

Another fact made the jihad simply ridiculous. The real Moslem religious war of olden time meant that every faithful Mohammedan male should in such a case kill at first his wives and children, burn his house and property and then take up arms for the cause of religion. This is the promise of the Koran, and a real Moslem must obey its sacred orders and enjoy the promises on earth or in heaven. And nobody would obey!

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN SULLIVAN.

On Saturday the death occurred in North Ops of Ann Harrigan, wife of John Sullivan, aged 50 years and 7 months.

The deceased lady, who has been in ill health for some months, was well known to many in this district, and the news of her demise was received with regret. She possessed a kindly disposition and was a dutiful wife and mother, and the sympathy of all will go out to the family in their bereavement.

The late Mrs. Sullivan is survived by her husband, three daughters, Misses Elizabeth, Laura and Ada, and five sons, Messrs. Dennis, John, Walter, Thomas and Frank.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sullivan tok place this morning from the family residence to St. Mary's church where requiem smass was chanted by Monsignor Casey, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Joseph Meehan M. Dovey, Fred Harrly, W. Crowley, D. Scully of Emily, and Mr. McCarthy of Peterborough.

WM. SWAIN.

In the death on Saturday evening of Mr. Wm. Swain at his residence, Fair Avenue, Lindsay, a pioneer resident of Mariposa passed to his reward.

The deceased, who was in his eighty-eighth year, was a son of the late William Swain of Cavan. He was born in that township and settled in Mariposa in 1846. Three of his brothers also became residents of the township about the same time.

The deceased made his home near Valentia where he resided until about twelve years ago, when he moved to Lindsay. The late Mr. Swain was a man of splendid character, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of a wide circle of friends. He was a Methodist in religion and a Liberal in politics, and leaves to mourn his loss his wife (who was Miss Robinson of Durham County, three sons, Messrs. W. E., Manitoba, James and R. S. of Mariposa; also four daughters Mrs. Thos. Graham, Mrs. Wm. Bruce Mrs. David Weldon, Lindsay, and Mrs. Mat. Emmerson, Port Perry. Two brothers and a sister also survive. They are John and Robert of Mariposa, and Mrs. Smith of Rosetown, Sask.

MRS. JOHN D. SULLIVAN.

The many friends of Mrs. John D. Sullivan will be sorry to learn of her demise in the township of Ops on Saturday, February 5th.

Deceased was born and raised near Lakefield, being formerly Mary Harrigan. She was fifty years of age and her death was due to heart trouble.

She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, five sons and three daughters, Denis, Elizabeth, Loretta, John, Ada, Thomas, Francis and Walter, the youngest being nine years old, besides her mother, Mrs. Michael Harrigan and three sisters, Mrs. Denis McCarthy, Mrs. James Buckley and Mrs. Martin Coughlin of Douro.

Funeral took place on Monday morning to St. Mary's church and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery, Lindsay.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away February 8th 1919—Mrs. J. H. Buchanan.

"Mother."

"It is a wonderful thing, a mother. Other folks can love you, but only your mother understands. She works for you, looks after you, loves you, forgives you anything you may do, understands you, and then the only thing bad she ever does to you is to die and leave you.—Family.

Cottonseed Oil in Explosives And Shortening a "War Baby"

Shortening, a Substitute for Lard, is Practically as Dear as the First Quality—Potatoes Were Unprofitable This Year.

The ultimate ramifications of the war's effects seem to multiply daily. Last night's Examiner for instance, appeared in two shades of paper, one white and the other a near approach to yellow. The difficulty of obtaining the regular bleaching material explains the latter colour. This morning a grocer related the case of lard and shortening. Recently lard was advanced three cents a pound and shortening, which was a third grade, now approximates the price of pure lard. Shortening includes in its ingredients cotton seed oil, which also enters into the manufacture of explosives.

"I've been getting only 15 cents a pound for shortening ad we have been selling a lot of it," said the grocer, "but it costs me now practically the same as the best lard. At the very least I ought to get 18 cents for it." Cotton-seed oil is regarded in the stock market as one of the "war babies," not the flattest of the new breed but just the same a healthy, dependable, promising urchin. Its price has soared, especially during the past eight months and it was inevitable that the housewife's shortening should have gone up with the explosives.

A brief explanation of the difference between pure and leaf lard was also given by this grocer. Pure lard is kettle rendered, and leaf is steam rendered, the former removing the greater quantity of moisture, leaving a heavier residue of actual lard.

Potatoes Unprofitable.

Speaking of the unprofitable retailing of potatoes during the past year the grocer said he had suffered quite a loss as the result of the rot that greatly depleted the supply. One bin he recently picked over was reduced almost fifty per cent. when the unsound potatoes were thrown out. On this lot his profit was more than wiped out.

SUPPLIES OF SERUM.

Municipalities Appreciating Government's Offer of Preventatives.

Requests from one hundred municipalities throughout the Province have been received by the Provincial Board of Health for supplies of smallpox vaccine, diphtheria antitoxin, antimeningitis serum, tetanus antitoxin and anti-typhoid vaccine since it was announced a week ago that they would be supplied free upon application. The last mentioned vaccine has, of course, been supplied to municipalities for the past year free and especially has there been a great demand for it for the soldiers.

The amount of the supplies of the various serums sent out during the last week was about $4,000 worth. No regular weekly supplies are being delivered. When they are asked for they are sent. The fact that so many municipalities have applied for quantities of the preventative that the free supply by the Government is much appreciated.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to do a kind act.

Norwegian Historian Says Germany is Yearning For Peace

Germany Tries To Make Separate Peace With Russia

British Forces at Kut-El-Amara Are Still Intact and Can Stand Siege For Long Time Yet

Czar's Forces Have Captured Several Galician positions —Eighty Zeppelins are Now in German Forces —Fifteen Destroyed

ATHENS, Feb. 9.—The Allies are likely to assume the offensive near Salonika shortly.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 9.—A Norwegian historian, formerly pro-German, says the whole German nation is yearning for peace.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—It is officially announced that Germany tried vainly to make separate peace with Russia and Japan.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—British forces at Kut-El-Amara are still intact and can stand the siege for a long time yet.

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—Eighty Zeppelins are now in the German service. Fifteen have been lost to date.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 9.—The Czar's forces have captured several Galician positions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—It is officially announced that an agreement has been reached between the United States and Germany, re Lusitania.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

BERLIN, Germany, Feb. 9.—Reports circulated here that Americans have been advised to leave Germany were denied by the United States Ambassador.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The British steamer Argo, two thousand tons, was sunk with a loss of one life.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A high Washington official declares the United States has not conceded anything in the latest conference with Bernstorff.

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 9.—Walter Meyer, who pleaded guilty to sedition was released on suspended sentence by Justice Clute yesterday afternoon. The prisoner was bound over in a sum of five hundred dollars to make no more seditious utterances.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The term of Parliament was yesterday extended till October nineteen seventeen.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Reports that Germany has made offers of separate peace to Russia and Japan has been confirmed by Count Okuma, Premier of Japan. Both offers were peremptorily rejected.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Official announcement says General Townsend is holding Kut-El-Amara as a strategic point, and General Aylmer is supporting the operation. No withdrawal is contemplated.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Russians are on the aggressive in Galicia. Austrians were forced out of advanced positions near Tarnopol, but later were ejected. Heavy fighting continues.

BELGIUM HAS REFUSED SEPARATE TERMS OF PEACE OFFERED BY GERMANY

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Belgium has refused separate terms of peace offered by Germany, according to a Rome despatch to-day, quoting the Giornale D'Italia, as authority for the statement, which it is understood is to have been obtained through Vatican sources.

The Kaiser agreed to a complete restoration of Belgium if the Germans were granted certain privileges at Belgian channel ports. Germany further agreed to pay a large sum for the rebuilding of destroyed structures in Belgium in return for a pledge of Belgian neutrality for the remainder of the war.

King Albert, it was declared, indignantly rejected these terms and announced that he would consider no peace until the Allies were victorious and Germany beaten.

The Rome report, coming close on the heels of advices from German sources to the effect that new German peace efforts are under way, aroused greatest interest here. Despatches from The Hague Saturday carried Berlin reports that peace negotiations were progressing satisfactorily from the German standpoint.

Since the recent announcement that Sir Douglas Haig had gone to Havre to meet King Albert on a "special mission," no announcement has been made by the Press Bureau on the results of the trip.

ANXIETY FOR FATE OF TRANS-ATLANTIC PASSENGER LINERS

Is Felt Following the Report that a Big British "Orissa" Was Captured or Sunk by an Armed German Commerce Raider

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Anxiety for the fate of several large passenger-carrying trans-Atlantic liners is felt here to-day, following the circulation of reports that a big British liner, "Orissa," was captured or sunk in mid-ocean by an armed German commerce raider, possibly the same vessel that captured the Appam. There is no official confirmation of this loss, but New York branches of British Marine Insurance Companies to-day increased the rates of cargoes in the North Atlantic from 150 to 200 per cent. Commanders of all liners leaving Liverpool for New York and leaving New York for Liverpool have received instructions from the British Admiralty to keep a close watch for German raiders.

HEADACHE?

Thousands of persons who have never known a day's sickness in any other form are subject to frequent attacks of Headache that almost drive them mad.

Whatever the nature may be and the cause, the immediate condition that produces the pain is a congestion or filling up of the blood vessels of the brain with blood, thus causing a pressure on the brain cells and nerve filaments.

In treating all forms of Headache the first thing to do is to relieve the congestion of the blood vessels of the brain. Abbey's Effervescent Salt in laxative dose does this promptly.

Sold everywhere at 25c. and 60c.

Full blooded people who are subject to frequent attacks of Headache can be entirely relieved by taking laxative doses of the Salt every morning. CRUISERS WATCH FOR MORE PRIZES

British and French War Ships Off Virginia Capes Seek Other Ships Captured by Raider

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Feb. 9.—British shipmasters arriving here today reported that two allied cruisers —one British and the other French— are patrolling the coast off the Virginia Capes.

Since there is no probability the German prize Appam will put to sea in the near future marine men take the presence of the war ships to mean that the allied governments expect other prizes captured by the mysterious German raider to be taken to Hampton Roads.

Mr. Hamilton, Collector of the Port, said to-night he had received no word from Washington concerning the status either of the Appam or the thirteen Germans, formerly civil prisoners of Britain, who requested that they be allowed to land from the Appam. The Appam to-day was allowed to load 200 tons of coal for port use.

Transforms Complexion; Wins Social Favours

"Had I been unable to transform my complexion so quickly, so completely, by an unique process I had just learned of, I never could have attended the Charity Ball.' A certain social favorite, a picture of loveliness as the great event, told me this. 'I had been much run down," she said. "When I beheld myself in the mirror after a night's troubled sleep, I saw that I was becoming heavy eyed and pale. I could not take, and attend the ball, the long rest, my physician advised. A friend suggested I get an ounce of mercolized wax at the druggists' and use it as I would cold cream. I did—the result is apparent. In a week I had a new complexion. The wax took off the old skin so gradually, there was no discomfort. Now you see the fresh, bright, underskin, with its youthful glow and expression.

"The worry lines and wrinkles, which had become quite numerous, I removed very easily by simply bathing my face every morning in a harmless lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. You see the result—my skin is smooth and firm as a schoolgirl's."—Aileen in Town Talk.

The Appetite of Youth Quickly Restored

Appetite is useless unless digestion is good. Dr. Hamilton's Pills make tremendous appetite and keep digestion up to the mark as well. The liver, bowels and kidneys are stimulated, the stomach strengthened, and robust health quickly follows. Dr. Hamilton's Pills instill vigor and snap into the system, make folks feel youthful and happy. You'll forget you have a stomach, forget your days of sickness if Dr. Hamilton's Pills are used. Insist on having Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, no other medicine so good.

Kaiser's Son Is Wounded In Head

Shell Splinters Strikes Prince Oscar of Prussia While on Eastern Front

AMSTERDAM, via London, Feb. 9. —Prince Oscar of Prussia, fifth son of Emperor William, has been slightly wounded in the head and on the upper part of the thigh by shell splinters during the fighting in the Eastern war theatre, according to a Berlin official.

Prince Oscar was wounded at Virton, in Belgium, in September, 1914. He was ill for a long time and was declared to be suffering from an affection of the heart. He returned to duty in the field in November 1914, and narrowly escaped capture the following month during the fighting in Poland.

Suits for $2,000,000 Because Steamer Turned Back Are Dismissed.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 9.— The four suits brought by the Guaranty Trust Company, the National City Bank, and Charles W. Rantoul, jr., of New York, and Maurice Hansenns of Brussels, against the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, to recover more than $3,000,000 in damages because the steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie failed to complete its voyage to France and England, just before the outbreak of the war were dismissed.

RUSSIA NOT STARVING.

Outside of Petrograd There is Food in Plenty.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Commenting on the announcement that the Russian Minister of Agriculture has ordered two meat fast days weekly in Russia, despatches received from Petrograd say there is no serious scarcity of food in Russia generally, but only at a few isolated points, and that this is due largely to faulty transportation. Scarcity of provisions is peculiar to Petrograd, which must be provisioned by means of a single railway, which already is heavily taxed by war business. At Moscow the situation is normal, and everywhere else, both in town and country, there are ample supplies. The peasants are receiving about double the usual amount for their produce and labour, and cannot waste their means on drink. The only reason why the new fast days apply to the whole empire is a precaution to check the tendency to eat more meat than usual, and thereby cause a dangerous drain on the supplies of cattle.

FOOD FACTS

What An M. D. Learned.

A prominent physician went through a food experience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food; and I also know from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients that this food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and patients gain, just as I did in strength and weight, very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely and go to the mountains, but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well as when I left home. My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change.

"I began to use Grape-Nuts and in two weeks I could walk a mile, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts when the regular food does not seem to sustain the body will work wonders.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT STOP DUNDRUFF AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Hair Stops Falling Out and Gets Thick, Wavy, Strong and Beautiful

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, just try it.

Quarterly Official Board Met on Monday — Left for Western Canada

HASTINGS, Feb. 9.—Friends of Mr. V. Rusaw, of Percy, extend sympathy on the occasion of the death of his wife, which took place during the past week., Interment was made in the Merrill cemetery.

A fierce blizzard raged throughout Monday and only those on business bent, could be induced to leave the fireside.

Quarterly Sacramental Services were held on Sunday morning in the Methodist Church, the pastor, Rev. Isaac Snell in charge.

The Quarterly Official Board met on Monday afternoon to dispose of business matters of the quarter.

Kitchen Shower.

A large number of friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McColl, of Asphodel, on Tuesday night and treated the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. C. McColl, to a kitchen shower prior to their departure for their home in Western Canada. A merry time was the opinion of those present. A very important part of the proceedings was the abundant repast which was served, and which was enjoyed to the fullest extent.

Lieut. Walter Thomson is receiving the congratulations of his friends upon his promotion to the rank of captain. We are informed that Walter goes to Kingston at once to qualify. Lieut. Thomson is the son of Rev. D. A. Thomson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church here.

Is Recovering.

The many friends of Mr. Patrick Crowley are pleased to see him out again after his recent illness. Mr. Crowley has had a very severe attack of la grippe, and at the same time his wife, son, mother and sister, were lying in a similar condition. Latest reports say that all the members of the family are recovering.

Lieut. Dolman, of Campbellford, is filling the vacancy here caused by the removal of Lieut. Masson to Cobourg.

A rousing recruiting meeting was held in the Town Hall on Thursday of the past week, when several good addresses were given and some good music enjoyed. Chief among the soloists was Miss Dixon of Campbellford, who was much appreciated and rendered some well chosen selections.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor German were At Home to some of their friends on Friday evening, when a most enjoyable time was spent.

Those who attended the hockey match in Norwood on Monday night report a good game, although the weather was severe.

Mrs. J. Doherty has been visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mr. G. Staples spent Sunday with out-of-town friends.

A large crowd attended the public auction sale on the premises of Mrs. O'Shea and report some very keen bidding.

League Meeting.

At the meeting of the League on Monday night, the chief feature of the programme was a well written paper by Miss Ethel Collins, one of the papers given at the recent Epworth League Convention held at Stirling.

The standing of the entrance class for January is as follows: Everett Greenley, Jean Murray, Blanche Williams, Lomiel Anderson, Edwin Parsons, James Hornsel, (Reta Dodd and Christie Hatherley equal), Vera Hadlow, Beryl Montgomery, M. Orr. J. G. Staples, principal.

At the Manse on the 20th, Rev. D. A. Thomson united in marriage Miss Eva Patterson and Mr. Charlie Peters, of Dummer.

Mr. Anderson, of Campbellford, has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Gould.

Miss Flossie May, of Stirling, spent a few days recently with Hastings friends.

Mr. J. Thurston and son, of Western Canada, called on friends here during the week.

We are pleased to see Mr. Patrick Crowley around after being confined to his home for several weeks with "la grippe." Several members of the same family were stricken down at the same time, but we are informed that all are on a fair road to recovery.

Mr. Wm. Warner is still improving.

NO MEAT FOR RUSSIANS TWO DAYS A WEEK

Ministry of Agriculture Says Depletion of Cattle Stock Makes Fasting Imperative.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 9.—The Ministry of Agriculture announces that it is necessary that two meat fast days weekly be observed throughout the Empire if a ruinous depletion of cattle stocks is to be averted. The Ministry further proposes a reduction of the soldiers' meat ration.

Since the beginning of the war the herds of horned cattle in European Russia, then totalling 40,000,000 head, have decreased by 25 per cent, owing to the abnormal demand arising, not alone from military circumstances, but also from the augmented consumption on the part of the civil population.

TRAIL OF ZEPPELIN OVER EAST ENGLAND

Bombs Dropped on Home and in Residential Districts of Workingmen

LONDON, Feb. 4.—When one considers the fact that of the counties in which bombs wer dropped, three, at least, of the six enumerated—Norfolk, aLincolnshire, Staffordshire, Suffolk, Lincolnshire, Staffordshire, Suffolk, tain a considerable number of manufacturing towns, the material damage done by the dropping of 220 bombs was very small in extent and importance. As at the time of the attack on London in October, when most of the bombs which might otherwise have carved great loss of life dropped in the middle of broad streets, so, in the course of Monday's invasion many great projectiles fell harmlessly in fields, gardens, and canals. The fact that it required approximately two bombs to inflict one death or injury is pointed out as the measure of the futility, from a military point of view, of this random bombardment.

Scores of Workmen's Homes Wrecked.

In Staffordshire in one comparatively small area twenty-six persons were killed and ten injured. Scores of working-class homes were wrecked, but from a financial point of view the damage was inconsiderable. The houses are typical of thousands in this district and are packed together in small streets. The occupants are mostly engaged in coal mining and ironmaking, and pay a rental of 5 to 6 shillings a week. The cottages face one another, with a door opening on a narrow footpath on either side of a roadway barely wide enough for two vehicles to pass each other. Two separate visits were paid to this place by the Zeppelins, and in each case there was loss of life. The whole district reverberated with the shock of the explosions, which were heard miles away. In a neighboring town which was not reached by the raiders all lights were extinguished and traffic was stopped. Places of amusement were rapidly emptied, but, though there was plenty of excitement, there was no panic and the people found their way quietly home as best they could.

Whatever the conjecture of the Germans may have been as to the area they had reached, as soon as they started their bomb-dropping they went on with it very briskly. Some bombs found harmless billets in the canals with which this part of the country is largely intersected.

The district in which this particular attack was made is probably about six miles across. As a result of the first explosion thirteen people were killed and seven injured.

One bomb fell on a footpath in front of a house occupied by an elderly couple, their married daughter, her husband, and their child. At the time they were seated around the fire in a groundfloor room. The window was blown in, the place wrecked, and the whole family killed. All were terribly mutilated, and death was evidently instantaneous.

Hanging on the wall of one of the wrecked houses laid open to the street was a cage containing a canary which continued to whistle exuberantly as soon as the smoke and dust cleared away.

Barely had the dead and injured been removed from the scene of the explosion when two more bombs were dropped. One of the missiles fell in a field and did little damage; the other fell in the street in front of a hotel, which received its full force. Every door and window was smashed and the place was reduced to a complete ruin. In the house were the landlord, his wife and children, and his wife's mother. They had a miraculous escape, for, though they were cut and bruised by flying debris, no serious injury was done to any of them. Yet there was scarcely a whole piece of furniture left in the entire building.

In a place not far away no fewer than five bombs were dropped within a limited space. These fell in a canal and did no damage. Two miles away, however, a bomb dropped near a canal and killed a man who was walking along the path.

On its return journey (assuming that it was the same raider) the Zeppelin passed over——and liberated half a dozen bombs.

The principal damage occurred in a typical working class throughfare. There is a hole seven feet deep by ten feet wide in the middle of the roadway. In one house a family of five were all killed, and the house is to-day nothing but a heap of bricks and mortar. All the tenements in this street are now windowless and frequently roofless, and many of them will need rebuilding.

In addition to the family above referred to, six other people living in the same street were killed, and one man was seriously injured. Among the buildings partially wrecked were two public houses. Three and a half miles away one man was killed outright and another has since died from his injuries. Mrs. ——, the Mayoress, who was passing along the street, was struck by a fragment of a bomb and so seriously hurt that her life is despaired of.

In spite of the great loss of life occasioned by the first raid, the people were quite calm, but there was a feeling of intense anger when the second attack was made.

It was 8.25 p.m. when the inhabitants of another place in Staffordshire became aware of the presence of Zeppelins by the dropping of a bomb. Others followed in fairly rapid succession until something like twenty had been discharged. The airships were over the town for probably forty minutes, which included, however, an interval of quiet of fifteen minutes.

In a mission room in this locality a woman was lecturing when a bomb fell just outside the building, wrecking one side and instantly killing the lecturer and two women of her audience, and severely injuring another. In a street close by a house was wrecked and four persons were killed, and in another thoroughfare the backs of some houses were destroyed and a man killed.

An incendiary bomb fell upon the roof of a theatre, which was full of people. A play was in progress, and the audience, startled by the explosion rose to its feet, but the leading actor and his manager called to the people from the stage to be calm and started the national anthem. Everybody joined in the singing and then huddled in the darkened theatre until all danger had passed, when they dispersed.

The bomb rolled off the roof and dropped, flaming, into the roadway. Adjoining the theatre was a school hall, in which was an assemblage of children and adults. At the noise of the explosion some commotion occurred. The minister in charge, however, quickly gained control and led the audience in the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The effect was instantly calming, and soon afterward the assemblage dispersed quietly.

In a billiard parlor a man and a boy were engaged in a game of billiards when a bomb crashed into the room and wrecked it. The man was killed, but although the cue was knocked out of the boy's hand, he escaped without injury.

At midnight the raiders returned, but, after dropping a few explosives on the outskirts of the town, where they did no damage, they flew away in a northerly direction.

In Leicestershire two bombs were dropped in the lodging house district of a certain town. One of them killed a man and his wife and two other women. About 100 houses were more or less damaged by this explosion. A second bomb dropped 100 yards away at the back of a public house, doing great damage and smashing all the windows of a technical institute. According to observers, a Zeppelin hovered over the town for more than an hour and then made off in a southerly direction. A few minor injuries were suffered by people, who hurried out of a picture theatre when the first alarm took place.

The news reached London newspaper offices early in the evening that six or seven Zeppelins had been reported on their way, and, owing to the measures taken by the authorities such as calling out special constables and giving notice to fire brigades, practically all London soon became possessed of some information. The rumours followed through the natural tendency to exaggeration, and people were talking of a fleet of twenty or more Zeppelins. It was believed that the great raid on London which the Germans had been threatening had begun.

It was not until about 10.30 p.m. that reliable information reached London as to the direction of the raid. It was, of course, long after that hour before the general public became aware that the metropolis was no longer threatened. No measures are taken here, as in Paris, either to warn the public of an impending raid or to notify it that a raid is no longer probable. Many people remained up till the small hours of the morning, waiting for the Zeppelins that didn't come.

Despite the uneasiness which such rumors were bound to create, there was little palpable evidence of serious alarm. The streets were filled as usual, the theatres in the West End remained open and generally attracted their customary audiences. Passengers in trains which were kept standing at points where the orders for the cessation of traffic reached them retained their composure, and during a five hours' wait in complete darkness showed not the slightest trace of panic. Among them was a woman who was in a carriage by herself. She heard voices in neighbouring compartments and called out:

"Who is there?"

A voice responded from the darkness:

"It's all right, lady. There are lots of us; don't be afraid."

"I'm not afraid; I'm lonely."

"Right! We'll come in and keep you company."

Soon two soldiers made their appearance, walking along the footboard with the guard calling out to them to be careful, and for a couple of hours kept the woman entertained with stories of their fighting experiences.

NEW STRENGTH FOR LAME BACK.

Letter Tells of Long-looked-for Prescription.

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered form lame back and a constant tired, worn-out feeling. At times I was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on at first with crick in small of my back. I took one box of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets and my back commenced to get better soon after starting to take them. I did not have to walk doubled over as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

I hope those who are in need of such a remedy will give the "Anuric Tablets" a trial.

(Signed) A. G. DRAKE.

NOTE: Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Doctor Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic. Send 10 cents to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for large trial package.

At any rate don't give up hope of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "Anuric" have proven that it will make you feel like a different person.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

The Military Cross.

The Military Cross, designed expressly for the present war, is of silver and is 1⅝ in. square. The Imperial Crown is borne on each of the four arms, and His Majesty's cipher appears in the centre on a small raised cross surmounting the larger one. The decoration is a most effective one, different from any other in use, and most creditable to its designer, Mr. H. P. Burke, C.V.O., C.B., F.S.A., Norroy King of Arms.

It is suspended from a ribbon 1¾ inches wide, having a central band of dark purple with white on either side, and is intended for captains, commissioned officers of a lower grade, or warrant officers in the British Army or Indian or Colonial military forces. As in the case of other decorations, many of these crosses have been awarded for life-saving under the enemy's fire.

"All Modern Inconveniences."

The following copy of a notice posted in the dug-out he formerly occupied "somewhere in France," has been received by a wounded soldier now in a Welsh hospital:

In one of the Choicest Localities in Northern France.
TO BE LET.

6 Minutes from German Trenches.

This attractive and well-built dug-out, containing one reception-kitchen bedroom and up-to-date funk-hole, 4 ft. by 3ft. All modern inconveniences, including gas and water. This desirable residence stands one foot above water-level, commanding an excellent view of the enemy's trenches. Excellent shooting (snipe and duck). Particulars of the late tenant, Base Hospital.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MIRROR.

Rena Yeoff was to be married to Johan Tepbold. Rena was pretty as a picture and was the envy of all the girls of the village, and all the young men envied Johan his possession of her.

But on the day of the wedding as the young pair were leading a procession to the little church an officer of the law stepped up to Rena and laid a rough hand on her shoulder. She, the groom, the peasant attendants, stood aghast. But the officer, never faltering in his duty, led her away and locked her up in a cell.

Instead of becoming a bride Rena became a convict. Her lover, convinced of her guilt, turned away from her when the judge pronounced the sentence, and she went to her prison home without a word of either sympathy or reproach from him. Only her poor mother befriended her, wept over her, encouraged her.

Rena in prison fell into a stupor. She hardly knew when it was day and when it was night. She hardly thought. After awhile she began to realize her position. She raved and tried to dash out her brains against the wall of her cell. But a sudden thought came over her—a thought with which was allied a heaven born hope. Her beauty—would she destroy it? What was would it avail be to her? Then a possible future reunion with the lover who had come so near being her husband occurred to her. In ten years she would be free.

She knew that she was innocent, and she knew the girl who had committed the crime for which she was accused. But what could she, a prisoner, do to prove the real criminal? For ten years her hands would be tied. Then perhaps she could begin to weave the thread of evidence. And if she succeeded? Suppose Johan were still without a sweetheart? Ah, then she would need her beauty. She would not mar it by striking her head against the wall.

From that moment her looks were all to her. But there was no way of watching it to note if it waned. One article of toilet was denied the women prisoners, a mirror. Often they would plead with their jailers for the coveted glass, but it was never granted them. As the years passed Rena more and more longed to see a reflection of her features. She asked her fellow prisoners if her comeliness were growing less. The most kindly of them told her that she was every day more beautiful. A few inhuman beings told her she was growing homely. Which should she believe? Oh, for a bit of mirror, even the tiniest, to get one glimpse of her face!

Rena was seventeen when she was sentenced and had served nine years without ever having had that glimpse. Her hair had been cut when she entered the prison and was not long enough for her to see it. One day a hair came out in her hand. It was white. She pulled out another. It, too, was white. They were all white. A prison official came along the corridor. She stretched forth her hands and with streaming eyes implored him to bring her for just one moment a mirror. He shook his head and passed on.

The tenth year had half passed and Rena was looking forward to freedom and a possible vindication, when one day an official came to her and told her that the girl who had committed the crime was dead and before her death she had confessed all to a priest. As soon as the formal legal papers could be executed the innocent one would be permitted to leave the prison.

Then came word from Johan that he had loved Rena always, though he had believed her guilty. He had tried to conquer his love, but it had grown stronger each year. He would not be free to come to her till the next day, but he would come then.

Rena dreaded the meeting. When her lover would see that her beauty had gone, that her hair was white, he would surely turn away from her. She did not ask for a mirror now; she dreaded to see what her face was like. She would wait and note by her lover's expression when he saw her whether it was pleasing or disagreeable.

The hours till he came were hours of torture. She had but little hope that any of her beauty remained and believed that her face was as wrinkled as her hair was white. But wait. She would see what it was in Johan's eyes. She sent word to him to bring a mirror when he came.

Johan was there at last. A jailer came to Rena's cell and said she was wanted. He led her to a reception room, where she stood alone. A door opened, and a man with grizzly hair and a habitual melancholy stamped on his face entered. He stopped, looked at Rena eagerly as though confused between two pictures—pictures of the then and the now. Presently a pleasurable expression began to steal over his features as a pleasing dawn rises in the sky, and, starting forward, he took her in his arms.

"My—my"—she gasped—"is it all gone, Johan? For the love of God tell me, and tell me truly!"

"It is different, sweetheart. There is a splendid contrast of young face and snowy hair. Here, look for yourself."

He held up a mirror. Rena turned away her face.

"Don't be afraid. You will be pleased."

Rena turned and looked. For a moment she seemed stunned by her white hair, but gradually her face lighted with an expression of relief and satisfaction.

GRACE ETHEL WEEKS.

Lightning Strategy.

"Too many strategists," said a military officer, "jump to conclusions. They are too hasty. They begin a new movement before the old one is finished; hence all manner of errors.

"These strategists are like the floorwalker whom a married man, having got separated from his wife in the crowd, approached and said:

"'Excuse me, but I've lost my wife'—

"'Coffins,' said the floorwalker, 'ninth floor, back. Gents' mourning, eleventh floor, front.'"

Embarrassing.

The Squire's Pretty Daughter (examining the village school)—Now, children, can you tell me what a miracle is?

The children looked at one another, but remained silent.

"Can no one answer this question?" the new curate asked, who was standing behind the squire's daughter.

A little girl was suddenly struck with a brilliant idea. She held up her hand excitedly.

"Well, Nellie?" the squire's daughter asked, smiling approvingly.

"Please, miss," the small child replied breathlessly, "mother says 'twill be a miracle if you don't marry the new curate."—London Globe.

A House in the Air.

In 1863 a balloon of 200,000 cubic feet capacity was constructed at Paris. It was named the Giant and was intended to show the great possibilities of the air. The car attached consisted of a small two story house fitted with every modern comfort, lavatories, dining room, bedroom, kitchen, parlor, etc. Thirteen passengers made the first ascent, but the journey was of only four hours' duration. The last ascent was for seventeen hours and was abruptly terminated by a high wind, which, when the balloon descended, dragged the little house bumping over the ground. The remains of this giant of the air was for a long time exhibited in the Cyrstal palace in London.

VON HINDENBURG

Leading Hun General as Seen by a Hun Newspaper

The Deutsche Tages-Zeitung gives an interesting pen portrait of Marshal von Hindenburg, who is at present the hero of the war in Germany.

It is not only what he has done that makes the Field-Marshal the hero of the people. What they admire above all is his clever, purposeful, and determined character. Hindenburg has never set himself to win popular applause. He has never in his life taken the trouble to get himself talked about. Calmly and quietly he has done his duty. He knew and desired no other fame than the brave and faithful accomplishment of his duty. As all those who know him declare, he has worked unceasingly from his youth upwards to make himself master of the art of war, not for his own advantage, but for the good of his Fatherland. Work was, and is, the one aim of his life. In these years this accomplished General, whom age cannot bow, will reach the years of the Psalmist. And yet it can be said of him, as of few others, that he has never spared himself pains or trouble. The fruits of his labor have not fallen into his lap like ripe fruit. No one is born for the art of modern war. It must be acquired by hard labor. An attempt has been made to compare him with famous leaders in former times. Such attempts can hardly be successful. Other times required other men and other knowledge. Hindenburg must be judged on his own merits. But he may well be called the Blucher of this war so far as strong activity, his genius for strategy, and his personal popularity are concerned. One of his most charming traits is his modesty. He never takes praise for himself, but for his soldiers. And when he was recently asked what he would do after the war, he replied: "I shall live in my pension in Hanover."

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can discard them, with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once, at the Warne Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, catarract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and try it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Those saddle who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Talmo Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A Royal Tragedy.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keepers and, dabbling her clothes in blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost is believed to appear whenever the death of a member of a royal family is to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

His Practice.

"Mary Jane, why do you allow that young fellow to remain so long when he calls?"

"You see, pa, he's a lawyer, and no matter how I try to make him go he always manages when he comes to court to secure a stay."—Baltimore American.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AS FREDERICK PALMER SEES END OF THE WAR

Although the Allies May Never Actually Get to Berlin, Germany Will be Forced to Whine For Peace

Frederick Palmer, the American war correspondent, says: Is Germany winning? On the map she is. She has all of Belgium except a sliver; the richest portion of France; the best part of Poland, and Serbia is overrun. Except in her overseas colonies, the foot of no foreign soldier is on Germany's soil. This at the end of seventeen months! "Germany must be winning," says the wise neutral, thinking of the hordes of prisoners Germany has taken, and with his dispassionate eye on that map. But in this war the map is the greatest liar in the world. For Germany is not winning. The map is a liar unless it covers the whole world and includes the seas and continents. If it does, England is winning too—by the map.

In common with Germany, England has not a single foreign soldier on her soil. Her empire is intact. In order to win, all that England had to do was to hold what she possessed, while Germany, in order to win, must gain territory. It is really a war between England and Germany—on one side to hold, on the other to have. England holds. Germany does not have. She struggles for want of what England possesses. Take your map of Europe, extend the line from Flanders following the British blockade, to Iceland, and you have only half the map fact. That line from the Channel to Iceland is the most important of all. Yet none of the newspapers ever publishes it. Extend it across Italy, blockading the shores of Bulgaria, and Turkey to Suez, and you have more of the map fact.

The Only Chance

If Germany does win, it will not be due to her advance in France in the summer of 1914 or to her advance in the East in 1915, but to having brought Turkey and Bulgaria into the war. Her campaign in the Near East is her big card. The sick man of the East is the weight in the balance against the British and the Russian empires, the kingdom of Italy and the Republic of France.

While Germany is giving the impression to the world that she is winning, her statesmen and her staff have known from the 4th of August, 1914, that she could not win. From that day they were fighting to hold instead of to have, just as England was fighting to hold—fighting for the stalemate on European soil which meant that Germany was "held." England may be on the defensive, but when she went into the war she put Germany on the defensive also—and Germany's only successful defensive, as we shall see, must be a successful land offensive. England knew that she had her stalemate when the German attacks of a year ago on the Aisne line failed and when her naval superiority was definitely established.

Cracking Under Strain

Germany insists that she is winning. She tells her people that she is. But have you ever looked through the German papers for copies of letters by French or British soldiers, or of letters from the relatives at home, which suggested any thought of yielding? Yet with every batch of German prisoners captured scores of such letters are found in their possession. Their efficiency is decreasing; that of France and England increasing.

When Lord Kitchener told the Ministers of the British Cabinet that the war would be long they were sceptical. But now they knew that he knew what he was talking about. He counted upon winning the last battle. That is the battle that England has always had to win, and usually has won. The allied troops may never get to Berlin; they may never cross the Rhine; none of them may again enter East Prussia. But it will be Germany that will have to sue for terms because she is in a state of siege.

Germany is in the position of a man striking for want of air, for want of room. He lunges this way and that with the craving for breath for his lungs and space for his limbs. He pushes the wall back a little, but it is still there, dashing his own blood back in his face. He breaks through one door, but there is another beyond. The mental strain of such a battle is as severe as the physical.

VAUGHAN-LEE

Rear-Admiral Vaughan-Lee is the man who gives our naval airmen their orders. As head of the Royal Naval Air Service he has all the flying men and flying machines of the navy under his command. He is to the navy what Sir David Henderson is to the army.

When the war broke out Rear-Admiral Vaughan-Lee was in command of the Royal Naval Barracks, Portsmouth. Then, for four months, he flew his flag in H.M.S. Thunderer, from which he was given a good service pension of $750.

Born forty-eight years ago, he was present as a midshipman at the bombardment of Alexandria in 1882, and subsequently he became famed as one of the torpedo experts of the navy.

He is great on the scientific side of his work, and he takes such pains over everything to which he turns his brain and his hand that his motto might well be "thorough."

Although a theorist Rear-Admiral Charles Lionel Vaughan-Lee is anything but a dreamer of dreams, as his ability in reorganizing the work of the flying men in blue has amply shown

The Victoria Cross

The number of Victoria Crosses awarded in the present war to the end of 1915 was one hundred and thirty-eight. This is fifty less than the number awarded in the Indian Mutiny, although the forces engaged in suppressing the mutiny were so very much smaller than those at present engaged in France and elsewhere. The Victoria Cross was, of course, instituted by Queen Victoria towards the conclusion of the Crimean War, and during that war one hundred and eleven awards were made. The cross, which is made of bronze, carries with it a pension of fifty dollars per annum.

BISMARCK'S PREDICTION

Famous German Chancellor Had an Idea of Britain's Strength

Bismarck had a correct appreciation of our strength. He realized the tenacity of purpose of the British people, controlling even their governors. He once remarked—in the Reichstag, on January 19, 1886—"If we succeed in building up a navy as strong as that of England, we should still have to fear the alliance of England and France. Those powers are stronger than any single power in Europe to enter with." That opinion, says Mr. Archibald Hurd in the Daily Telegraph, was not formed on any estimate of the respective armies. Bismarck knew that the real force of England and France was on the sea, and that there any struggle would ultimately be settled. To-day Germany is opposed by five great sea powers. These nations can bring about the final downfall of Germany, if they act fearlessly and ruthlessly.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

GERMAN RECORD IN BRIEF

Achievements and Failures Listed by London Paper

The results of the war so far are summarized by the Westminster Gazette under the headings, "What the Germans Have Failed to Achieve." The first items are as follows:

1. Conquest of Belgium, including Antwerp and Zeebrugge.
2. Occupation of the northern province of France, including Lille.
3. Occupation of Russian Poland and the effective holding up of the Russian armies.
4. Destruction of Serbia and the establishment with the help of Bulgaria of a through route to Constantinople.
5. Check of the British attempt to pierce the Dardanelles.

The enumeration of what the Germans have failed to achieve is as follows:

1. Failed to crush the French armies.
2. Failed to crush the Russian armies.
3. Failure even to wound Great Britain.
4. Paris and Calais remain untaken.
5. Petrograd and Moscow are intact.
6. England's sea power unshaken; German submarine war dies down.
7. Failed to save her colonies.
8. Failed to stem the sure attrition of German strength in men and material.

WILL THE GREAT WAR SPOIL THE KIDDIES?

An Article Written by Correspondents Bearing on a Subject Recently Discussed by a Noted Writer

An article was recently published by the famous author, Mr. Pett Ridge. The writer spoke of the military spirit which pervaded children's games today, and said that no harm would result from this war spirit, as it would be forgotten when they had grown up. Some people disagree with this view. The following typical letters are from those received upon the subject:

The Cruelty of Children

May I be allowed to disagree with your eminent contributor, Mr. Pett Ridge, when he asks that children may be let play at war games, as they will feel no bad influence from doing so. Surely it is a generally admitted fact that the seeds sown in childhood bear fruit in later years.

I have watched little boys with their toy swords, taking a most unlovely relish in pretending that they were cutting off an enemy's head. Once I asked a child what he would do if he caught a German.

"I'd pull off his arms and legs, and then I'd pour boiling water over him!" he said earnestly.

Some children who were listening only laughed and suggested worse tortures. Now, I cannot think that these ideas of horrible, crude brutality can be good for a child to dwell upon. Most kiddies, especially boys, are instinctively cruel, and only gentle influences can combat this tendency.—D. J. (Warwick).

Stop War Games!

I cannot agree with Mr. Pett Ridge when he says "Life for them (the children) is nothing more than a game in a playground."

Now, remembering my child hood, I know that children are often very intense and feeling, and the things which seem to us tiny children incidents are very serious to the kiddies.

We take too little notice of the games our children play, or we should better know their characters and guide them. Certainly we should stop the war games, with their killing enmity.—S. D. (Leyton).

Why I am Self-reliant

Upon reading the article, "Will War Spoil the Kiddies?" I was reminded of an incident in my own childhood.

I was a weakly and timid boy, and would probably have remained so to this day if my mother had given sympathy to my timidity. I was always dogging fights, and allowing myself to be bullied, until my mother promised me a quarter for the first black eye I received in open conflict.

As pocket money was very scarce, I plucked up courage and tackled my next bully. The quarter was won within a week, and I have always held my own since.

I mention this to show that war games and the spirit of fighting will have a beneficial effect upon the children and will help them to push their way in a hard world.—L. D. (Bradford).

FRANCE HAS "BOY WONDER"

Young Pilot, of Scotch Extraction, Brings Down Five Germans.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Sergeant Pilot Guynemer, 21 years old, of the French flying corps, has just brought down his fifth German adversary and has been mentioned for his exploit in an official communication. Previously he had been decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honour, the war cross, and the military medal for other feats.

M. Guynemer was a lad in college when the war began and enlisted at once. He had never been in an aeroplane, but at the end of the seven days of training he made his trial flight for a pilot's license. Six weeks' training usually is required.

Sergeant Guynemer flies alone, as did Garros and Pegoud, but instead of a monoplane he uses a great biplane, on which he makes ninety miles an hour. He accounted for four machines in nine days.

Guynemer is of Scotch extraction.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

SHOESTRINGS ARE PRIZED AS LUXURY ON FRENCH FRONT

"Vivent les Americaines!" Cry the Soldiers on Their Way to the Trenches.

Even shoestrings are a luxury on the battlefields, according to letters written by Miss Mary Louise Rochester, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Rochester, who was prominent in society before she went to France last year to de relief work among the French troops. Miss Rochester was graduated from the Brierley school in Manhattan and soon after she completed her studies there made her debut in society.

Miss Rochester is accompanied in Europe by Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard, of No. 52 West Thirty-ninth street, Manhattan, who is chairman of the National Surgical Dressing Committee and who went to Paris to confer with officials as to the most practical way to aid in war relief work. Prior to leaving for Europe Mrs. Williard was instrumental in starting the American movement for supplying surgical dressings for the Red Cross work, and Miss Rochester went to her assistance.

"One of the most fascinating things I ever did," wrote Miss Rochester in a letter to her mother, "was going out to Isole, where we go every Friday to take presents to the soldiers. It is a depot about fifteen miles out of Paris, from which the soldiers are sent straight to the trenches after having been home on leave or finishing their convalescence or going to the front for the first time.

"Some of the poor things start off with only a little linen underclothing and, with no sweaters, so we take packages with a sweater, underclothes, a knitted scarf, socks and soap, comb, pencil and paper, chocolate, picture postal cards and leather shoestrings.

One day while there we saw them pack our little gifts in their knapsacks and march off to the trenches. It was the most thrilling thing I've ever experienced. Twice as they were leaving they took off their hats and quite spontaneously shouted 'Vivent les Americaines!'

"One day a poor fellow on his way back from the front for the fourth time showed us some pictures he had of his wife and baby before the war and another just taken. She looks twenty-eight in the first and seventy in the other. Everything you hear is absolutely true. None of the tragedies are exaggerated."

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

MONTREAL MAYOR IS FINED, BUT WON'T PAY

He Didn't Appear in Court and Was Convicted of Contempt

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—Accusing former Controller Herbert of "from a'l appearance trafficking in his support of the tramways proposition in consideration of a large sum of money," Judge MacLennan fined Hebert and Mayor Mederic Martin, the latter described by his lordship as the commissioner's "bold and willing abettor," $1,000 each for contempt of court.

The Mayor and the controller, since retired from the Board of Control, ignored an interim injunction enjoining them from dealing with a tramway franchise addition. Judge MacLennan said they had been guilty of a most deliberate, wilful and discreditable breach of the injunction.

"I will never pay a cent for it—not one cent, of it," said Mayor Martin, after judgment had been delivered. Waving his arms in support of his declaration, the Mayor vanished into his office, calling as he went: "No, sir, certainly not, certainly not; not one cent will I pay—not one cent will I pay."

VAST TERRITORY LOST TO GERMANY.

The Cameroon Protectorate has a population of 2,540,000, including 3,000 whites. The only other German possession in Africa not conquered by the Allies is the protectorate of German East Africa, which has an area of 384,000 square miles, and a population of 4,000,000. The area of the Cameroons is 191,130 square miles. The area of the German Empire is 208,780 square miles. For purposes of comparison it may be stated that the area of Texas is approximately 265,000 square miles.

AN UNFAILING WAY TO BANISH HAIRS

(Beauty Notes)

Ugly hairy growths can be removed in the privacy of your own home if you get a small original package of delatone and mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the hairy surface. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then removed and the skin washed and every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience can result from this treatment, but be sure you buy real delatone.

A Most Extraordinary Cure of Epileptic Fits

Mother Had Appealed to Three Doctors in Vain—Cured Four Months Ago By Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

This letter from Mrs. Noxel is endorsed by Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., as being true and correct. While it reports a most remarkable cure of epileptic fits by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, it only goes to corroborate similar cures reported by others.

Mrs. Hamilton M. Noxel, R.R. No. 1, Humberstone, Ont., writes: "I cannot help writing to you, as I want you to know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills have been to my boy. He was taken with very violent fits, would twitch all over, his eyes would turn towards his nose, his jaws set and his lips turn almost purple. He would clench his fists tightly, become unconscious and then go into along sleep. After several hours he would wake up sighing and so weak he could not stand. I was afraid he would die and took him to the doctor, who pronounced his case epilepsy. As his medicine was not effective and the fits continued, I took him to another doctor at Fonthill, but his medicine seemed to make him worse.

"As the boy's nerves were in such a state he could not sit down or lie down, and the fits continued, I took him to a third doctor, who said that he would not undertake to cure epilepsy, as no doctor could cure it. That night I went home very much discouraged, and when I took my dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I gave my boy a dose, and that was the first night in weeks that he slept well. I kept on giving him the Nerve Food three times a day and occasionally a Kidney-Liver Pill to keep the kidneys and bowels active. I can, with a clear conscience say that he has not had even one fit since beginning his treatment. I give him no other medicine. He looks and feels well, and as there have been no returns of the old trouble for four months, I believe he has been cured. I can never cease to be grateful to the manufacturers of these medicines, for I am sure I would have lost my boy if it had not been for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., writes: "This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. Henrietta M. Noxel, and believe that the statement she has made in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is true and correct."

BATTERING AT GALLIPOLI.

British Warships Have Not Forsaken Dardanelles Zone.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 7—The following official report has been issued at the War Office:

"Irak front—Situation unchanged.

"Caucasian front—Enemy attacks against our positions and again our outposts in several sectors have been repulsed.

"Dardanelles front—On Friday a Turkish aeroplane, piloted by Lieut. Kronhais, pursued a British biplane. The latter was shot down between the Island of Imbros and Gabatepe on the Gallipoli Peninsula and fell into the sea. Two cruisers bombarded Tekke Burnu and the vicinity of Seddul Bahr. Our Anatolian batteries replied and the cruisers withdrew after firing thirty shells. On Thursday two enemy war vessels fired forty shells on two villages in the Bergama sector in the Gulf of Smyrna."

A Sunday School teacher rightly describes this incident as "worth telling." "We came to the passage, 'Beware of false prophets,' and I asked my boys if they could tell me what a false prophet was. One boy, 14 years old said. 'Yes, the weather man.'"

EAST PRUSSIA'S BIG LOSSES

Total War Damage Now Estimated at $375,000,000.

BERLIN, Feb. 9. — Detailed estimates of what East Prussia has suffered by the war—with its two invasions by the Russians — have been compiled, and they surpass even the guesses that, earlier, were thought to be wild and sensational and were discounted even by the East Prussians themselves. As the result, the East Prussian damage as quoted from the German statistics is:

Entirely or partly destroyed, 24 cities, 600 villages, 300 estates, and 34,000 buildings.

Plundered, 100,000 residences.

Killed or seriously injured, 2,000 civilians.

Carried off to Russia, 30,700 persons.

Fugitives who had to leave home, 350,000 to 400,000.

Killed or carried off by Russians, 135,600 horses, 250,000 cattle, 200,000 hogs, 50,000 sheep, 10,000 goats, 600,000 goats, 600,000 chickens, and 50,000 geese.

The investigators who have compiled these statistics made it clear that "only a portion of this damage may be laid directly to the Russians' vandalism" and that a part of it is chargeable to the inevitable ravages of war. This is particularly true of that portion of East Prussia which the scene of the first invasion. Practically all are agreed that the Russian forces the first invasion were soldierly and orderly and that most of the acts of violence, plundering, murder and wilful arson and destruction occurred in the second and longer invasion.

The total damage caused, both by legitimate war losses and by devastation, the statisticians estimate at $375,000,000. They place this as the lowest figure and believe that eventually it will have to be revised upward. The $100,000,000 voted by the Prussian Diet for the relief of the provinces is melting fast away, and the work of rehabilitation has been really only just begun.

To meet the lack of farm animals with which to carry out agricultural rehabilitation, oxen have been imported and captured Russians horses not available for military purposes, and German military horses unfit for further service, are being used. Efforts are being made to restore the thoroughbred horse breeding industry to its former high standard.

Was Troubled With BOILS ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Germans Claim Another Success Against the French in the West

Berlin Statement Claims That Germans Captured First Line French Positions West of Virny Over a Front of 800 Yards---French Statement Says That the Germans Were Afterwards Expelled By Counter Attacks.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—The capture of first line French positions over a front of 800 yards to the west of Vimy was claimed by the War Office to-day.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Paris despatches this afternoon confirmed the report that the Germans had penetrated the French front west of La Folie, but declared the Teutons were afterward expelled by counter-attacks. The Germans claimed the capture of 100 prisoners and five machine guns.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—In an official statement from the Greek Island of Corfu, the first issued by the Serbs for several weeks, the Serbian War Office says: "Serbians and Albanians encountered an Austrian force February 2nd near the Albanian village of Blama. The bloodiest fighting occurred. The Austrians were initially successful, but later the Serbs were reinforced and a night attack regained positions and routed the Austrians who left the battlefield covered with dead."

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Governmental machinery for the enforcement of the Conscription Act was set in motion to-day. The King's proclamation calling upon all eligible bachelors between the ages of 20 and 30 years to report for service beginning March 3 was placed in the mails and those who failed to enlist voluntarily will receive copies to-morrow. In London alone 40,000 copies of the proclamation were distributed.

Simultaneously large posters with final recruiting appeals appeared in Trafalgar Square and other prominent places in the city. They read:

"Will you march too or wait until March 2?" The day was marked by the lessening of activity among recruiting sergeants. The big Strand recruiting office near Charing Cross was crowded at noon, and a padlock placed on the door.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—No early ending of the war is indicated in the figures regarding Germany's strength compiled by Colonel Repington, military expert of the Times, who first exposed British ammunition shortage. Germany has now a fighting reserve force of about two million men, wrote Colonel Repington to-day. Until these forces are exhausted the strength of her armies will not fail her.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—An Amsterdam cable to-day says that two German Zeppelins were brought down by the French over Belgium this week, and destroyed with entire crews.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—General Sir Sam Hughes is something of a democrat on the subject of salutes. A private, he said this morning, is as much entitled to a salute from an officer, as an officer is entitled to one from a private. Why I salute scores of them every day. Complaints have come from different parts of the country about a few young snobs who persist in calling down men for not saluting them when they themselves have neglected to salute. We are eliminating a few of those young gents from the service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—It was pointed out that possibly the Orissa encountered a severe storm and was badly crippled, delaying her arrival at Lisbon. She carried probably not more than sixty passengers said the officials. Most of the crew were British.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—On complaint of British Ambassador Spring Rice several secret service men have been sent here from Washington to investigate the alleged headquarters here of German plotters and spies engaged in blowing up munition plants in Canada and the United States, and various public buildings.

The Regulations Must Be Enforced

Provincial Board of Health Will Not Agree to Removal of Quarantine Regulations as Applied to Measles

Some days ago Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, wrote to Dr. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health for Ontario, respecting the hardship that is inflicted on a number of local people by reason of the quarantine regulations as applied to measles. In many cases whole families are isolated for a period of three weeks. Dr. Amys pointed out that the danger from contagion arose after the infection was manifest on the patient.

In reply Dr. McCullough informed the local Board of Health through Dr. Amys that the regulations would have to be adhered to unless the Provincial Board of Health saw fit to change them which was hardly possible.

BELGIAN RELIEF MEETING TO-NIGHT

Meeting for Organization Purposes

A meeting for all those interested in the Belgian Relief Campaign is called for to-night at 8 o'clock. The meeting was originally called for the Council Chamber, but owing to a previous engagement has been transferred to the T.A.B. Hall. The Belgian Relief is an important work and the meeting to-night should be well attended.

NO ACTION BY BOARD OF TRADE

Discussed Important Current Problem Last Night

A drastic resolution pertaining to the problems of dealing with aliens in this country was discussed at a meeting of the Board of Trade last night. Pending the probable action of the government in this matter it was decided not to pass the resolution for the present.

Mr. B. D. Hall presided, and with other speakers, including Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Mr. F. D. Kerr, Chief Howard and others, expressed strong opinions of the necessity of preparedness, watchfulness and caution. At the same time the resolution presented was suspended for the time being, and may be further considered if it is deemed necessary. The meeting was not largely attended and business men were conspicuous by their absence.

BAND INSTRUMENTS WILL BE PRESENTED AT BIG CONCERT

Grand Opera House Will Be Scene of One of Most Enjoyable Events of Season on Friday, Feb. 18th

A GRAND PROGRAMME

The presentation of the new instruments to the Band of the 93rd Battalion, which takes place at the Grand Opera House on Friday, Feb. 18th, will be made the occasion of one of the most enjoyable concerts of the winter. Mr. J. H. Renwick is arranging the details of the programme which is a guarantee that the event will be above the average in every way. The Band of the 93rd under Bandmaster Hughes will offer a number of choice selections including the overture to "William Tell." Arrangements are being made to have some prominent figure in Canadian national life deliver an address. The proceeds will be devoted towards purchasing drums for the 93rd Bugle Band, and cases for the Brass Band. A programme of unusual excellence is being arranged. The admission will be twenty-five cents.

SAYS ROON IS CAPTURED

New York Globe Claims the Battleship Drake Has Bagged the German Warship Commerce Raider

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The New York Globe declared this afternoon that it has received a code message from Bermuda, stating that the German warship "Roon," alleged commerce raider, has been captured by the British battleship "Drake" after a three-hour fight, two hundred miles north east of Bermuda.

Two merchantmen, one of them armed, were captured with the Roon, it was stated.

The Globe said it was unable to make public the source of its information, but quoted the following message, said to be from Bermuda:

"Drake here to-day towing the Roon. Took her two hundred knots east, northeast Bermuda, three hours' running fight. Lost Danforth, eighteen men. Her losses about one-third. Two merchantmen with her, one armed. Took both. Brought here. Seagrave, on sighting Roon, said 'Please God, to-day I will avenge Craddock.'" (Admiral Craddock, whose squadron was destroyed by the Germans). Roon badly knocked about by 9.2 guns, 32 officers and 170 men taken in three prizes."

"Seagrave," according to the Globe, is probably Captain Seagrave, who was with Admiral Craddock, but later was in command of the Bacchante.

"Danforth," the Globe says, probably is a torpedo lieutenant.

Naval registers show that the Drake is a 14,100 ton cruiser, built about fifteen years ago, and carries as her heaviest armament two 9.2 inch guns —the calibre mentioned in the despatch the Globe says it received.

ITALY EXPECTED TO DECLARE WAR ON HUNS

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Italy is expected to declare war on Germany and to announce plans for participation in the Allied campaign in the Balkans as a result of Premier Briand's visit to Rome, Paris despatches asserted to-day. The French Prime Minister was scheduled to leave for the Italian capital to-day.

93rd BATTALION PAID FULL HONOURS TO DEAD COMRADE

Funeral of Pte. Patrick Tucker Carried Out With Military Ceremony This Morning---Three Volleys Fired Over the Grave--To-day's Orders and General Military News

Accompanied to the grave by his sorrowing comrades the remains of Pte. Patrick Tucker of No. 6 platoon, B company of the 93rd Battalion, were laid to rest with full military honours in St. Peter's cemetery this morning. The funeral cortege was formed at the armouries at 8.30 o'clock, and headed by the firing party in charge of Sergt. Hartshorne, marching with arms reversed and the band of the 93rd with drums muffled, playing the Dead March in "Saul," proceeded to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem high mass was sung. The whole battalion marched in the funeral procession, A and B companies the signallers and machine gun sections being well represented. The officers of the battalion marched at the rear of the corlege.

After the funeral service at the cemetery the firing party fired three volleys over the grave, while the impressive "Last Post" was sounded by the buglers.

Requiem high mass was sung at the Cathedral by Rev. Father Phelan, who also conducted the services at the grave.

The Cathedral was crowded for the impressive requiem mass, sung by Rev. Father O'Brien.

The pall-bearers were Ptes. H. O'Keefe and A. Tobin of the Machine Gun Section; Ptes. F. Smith, A. Millgate, B. Rippingale and C. Harris.

of the 254th battalion. The new regiment will be recruited in Beauharnois, Terrebonne, Laprairie, Montcalm and L'Assumption counties, and it is expected that the headquarters will be in Montreal.

Authorization for the naming of the 199th battalion, recently formed under Lieut.-Col. Trihey, the "199th Battalion Irish-Canadian Rangers, C E. F.," came from Ottawa to-day.

Last week's official despatch from the Canadian Official Eyewitness, in France, mentioned the daring bravery of Lieut. S. S. Burnham and Lieut. B. O. Hooper. Lieut. Sidney S. Burnham is a son of Dr. Burnham, eye specialist, Toronto, formerly of Peterborough. On the night of January 24th these two officers cut a path through the German wire up to the enemy's parapet.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8.—A new overseas regiment for Ottawa and Carleton County, the 207th battalion was authorized to-day by Maj.-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. Maj. C. W. McLean, of the 13th Scottish Light Dragoons, of Waterloo, Que., who has just returned from the front, has been appointed commanding officer. The 77th battalion, now stationed here, will proceed to the front shortly.

A French-Canadian battalion is also to be raised here, and Capt. Rene de Salaberry, a descendant of the famous de Salaberry, of Chateauguay fame, has been appointed commanding officer. He also is being returned from France to take the command.

NEW QUEBEC BATTALION.

Montreal, Feb. 8.—Another French-Canadian battalion, the 206th, was authorised to-day for overseas service and it will be organised by Lieut.-Col. Tan. Pagnuelo, a former commander.

The following lines to the First Canadian Contingent were written by Lance-Corp. A. E. Smith:

Here's to the gallant Canadians,
The boys who are always true;
They started out to fight for right,
And fight they sure can do.
At "Neuve Chappelle" and "Langemark,"
They fought like heroes brave;
Each man that fell at "Neuve Chappelle"
Has earned an hero's grave.

And then they fought at "Festubert,"
'Twas in the month of May;
Ne'er was there such a battle fought
As the Canadians fought that day.
They beat them at "La Bassee,"
And at "Langemark" too;
They gave them hell at "Neuve Chappelle"
And fought like Canadians true.

That was the first Contingent,
And they sure have made a name;
They fought and died for Britain,
New they're od the Scholl of Fame.
There still are some of them out there
Who never did get hit;
They still keep up their courage,
And still they do their bit.

And here in dear old England
There are quite a lot,
Who were out there and got wounded,
But they're proud of what they got.
And some there are who'll ne'er come back,
Because they fought and fell;
But they'll never be forgotten,
For the work they did so well.

Side by side they fought and died,
Each man out there that fell
Was fighting for England's glory,
And that they did right well.
Now here's to the first Contingent
Who did their duty do,
And bravely did go under
As many more will do.

The 45th Chapter Daughters of the Empire were the hostesses at an informal but delightful reception to the 93rd Battalion at the recruiting rooms Simcoe street, last evening. A large

GRAPHIC STORY OF THE RETREAT FROM SERBIA

As Related by Miss D. M. Newhall Sister of Detective Newhall of This City!— Was Decorated by King Peter of Serbia—Seven Members of the Newhall Family in the Present War.

THE STARVING SERBS

No one, perhaps can claim to have realized the horrors of the world-war to a greater extent than Miss D. M. Newhall, daughter of Mr. J. Newhall, of Comberbach House Northwich. Miss Newhall is the youngest sister of Detective Sam Newhall of the Peterborough Police Department. Detective Newhall has four brothers and three sisters in the present war. A fifth brother is employed in the manufacture of munitions.

For nine months, Miss Newhall nobly did her duty as a nurse in Serbia under such conditions that it is marvellous how she has survived the ordeal.

Miss Newhall presented a strange appearance when she reached her home on Christmas morning, clad only in the scanty garb which she wore on her exit from Serbia after the great retreat. She arrived in London, after an adventurous journey, on Christmas Eve.

Needless to say it was a great home-coming, and since then Miss Newhall has enjoyed a well-earned rest, before again going forth on her mission of mercy.

A few days ago a "Guardian" representative saw Miss Newhall, when she was in Northwich with her father and she related a thrilling story of her flight from Serbia.

It will be remembered that some months ago we published an interesting account of camp life in Serbia, written by Miss Newhall, in which she gave a graphic description of her experiences as a nurse with the Serbian Army. At the outbreak of war Miss Newhall held the position of health inspector to the Beckenham Town Council, and she immediately volunteered her services as a nurse. For about seven months she was engaged on the staff of one of the base hospitals near Bologne, and later proceeded to Serbia as a member of the Hon. Mrs. Stobbart's nursing staff, under the Serbian Relief Fund.

First Field Hospital.

In the course of a brief interview on Tuesday Miss Newhall told our reporter that theirs was the first field hospital in Serbia, and they had all their own tents. The hospital was situated at Kragojevatz, a little old-fashioned town, consisting of a church and a few so-called small shops.

"In addition to wounded soldiers, we nursed cases of typhus, and indeed, any other cases that were sent on to us. We had about 250 patients in the hospital. On October 1st we were joined to the Shumardin Division. Our staff consisted of two lady doctors and four nurses, and we had six Englishmen with us as chaffeurs to drive the ambulance cars. I was with the army during the whole of the retreat, attached to the Shumardan Division, and the guns shook our tents both night and day. We slept in the roads night after night, amongst hundreds and thousands of of troops, cattle, pigs, camp fires and guns. It was no uncommon thing to be awakened during our slumbers by huge bullocks blowing down our necks, or pigs being killed at the side of our camp bed, and blood flying over us, and then, having them roasted on a stick stuck through the whole carcase. The rain poured on us, and the mud was up to the bottom of our beds. Any minute we were called up to dress the wounded, or bury the dead in the mountains or at the roadside.

MANY RECRUITS ALREADY IN LINE FOR NEW BATTERY

Belmont Club Met Again Last Evening and Completed Arrangements For the Formation of 52nd Battery

ADDRESS BY CAPT. SHAW

About thirty-five men have already signified their intention of joining the 52nd Battery, C.F.A., which is being formed in Peterborough under the auspices of the Belmont Club. The first batch of men may be ready to leave for Kingston on Monday next. A meeting of the members of the Belmont Club together with a number of their friends, was held last evening in the club rooms. Capt. E. V. Shaw, of Kingston, addressed the gathering. Capt. Shaw, who has spent a couple of days in the city in the interests of the 52nd Battery, will return to Kingston to-morrow. The work of recruiting men for the new unit has been assiged to Major W. C. Ackerman. The Belmont Club will serve the purpose of a recruiting station. All Peterborough men who wish to join the new overseas unit are asked to report as soon as possible.

THE OAK HALL CLOCK STOPPED AT 8:20 A.M.

Ceased Ticking This Morning and Goes to Mr. Thos. O'Brien

The Oak Hall Dollar Day clock stopped at 8.20 a.m. to-day and becomes the property of Mr. Thos. O'Brien, 271 McDonald street, whose estimate was Feb. 9th at 10 a.m. Mr. Walter Burns, 457 Aylmer street, won the tie offered to the first person announcing that the pendulum was at rest. It had lost 20 mins.

Mr. M. J. Maher gave the following report of the results:

The nearest estimates to the winner, Mr. Thomas O'Brien who figured Feb. 9th, 10 a.m., were as follows:

Mrs. Fred Erskine, Lakefield, guessed Feb. 9th, 11.20, but did not state a.m. or p.m. However, Mr. O'Brien was the nearer, even if a.m. was meant.

Francis McGrath, 275 Romaine, Feb. 9th, 12 a.m.

Geo. Trauter, Feb. 9th, 5 p.m.

A number guessed Feb. 10th at various hours.

2 guesses for Feb. 11th and one guess for Feb. 13th, 12.30 p.m.

The contest was not without humour, however. One wrote, "When it stops ticking."

"I hereby certify that Mr. Thos. O'Brien, 271 McDonnel street, estimated that the clock in Oak Hall would stop at 10 a.m. Feb. 9th, and is the closest estimate to the correct time, which was 8.20 o'clock a.m. Feb. 9th, as was advised by Mr. Walter Burns, 457 Aylmer street, and therefore Mr O'Brien wins the clock, which was offered as the prise by Oak Hall.

Mr. Burns receives the prise of a necktie for being first to notify Mr. Maher that the clock had stopped, I have checked over the tickets with the sales and find the contest has been conducted entirely fair and satisfactory.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 9, 1916

GOOD NEIGHBOURS.

Our thanks are due the United States authorities for their friendly promptitude in initiating punitive action against persons charged with bomb plots and plans for the armed invasion of Canada by pro-German citizens of the United States. A man named Bopp has been indicted in San Francisco for conspiracy to set on foot military expeditions "against a friendly nation"—Canada. Indictments have been entered against others, also, especially one Kaolbergen, now in jail in Canada, who has confessed that he was employed by German Consul Bopp, to dynamite bridges in this country. It is not from lack of will that the German and pro-German element in the United States would refrain from invading Canada in military force; but the danger of such an invasion will be greatly lessened by the friendly vigilance of our neighbours—combined with our own. There may or may not be danger, but it is our part not to neglect any precautions or relax our watchfulness, but to keep our eyes open, and keep on the constant alert.

NOW FOR WORK.

Parliament, that represents the mind and spirit of the people, has unanimously declared for a year's extension of the life of the present Parliament. Thus the sword of Dumocles, in the shape of a general election in war time, has been removed as well as the disturbing dividing disunity, influence of such a fear. We can now and must, bend all our endeavours in the direction of doing the work neded to help end the war and bring victory and peace. No interest, personal, civic or national, can take precedence of the interest Canada has in ending the fight for ourselves, the Empire and the world of humanity. We are now free as far as political considerations or party interests go, to throw ourselves with united energy into the task that calls for real work.

We must help fulfil the conditions of peace laid down by Premier Asquith—

> We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.

POLITICAL MORALITY.

When the robber barons of old, who had grown rich by pillage and rapine and outrage, came nearer the day of accounting by advance of years, they sought to square themselves with God and the Church by using a part of their ill-gotten gains—the price of blood—to build a church or monastery. When Mr. J. R. Fallis, M.P.P. of Peel, began to feel uneasy in the pillory of public opinion and wanted to square himself with moral decency, he gave his unholy gains from horse deals—the money he intercepted on its way from the public treasury to the strengthenng of the battle line, to the Patriotic Fund. He then resigned his seat, and now seeks a coat of official whitewash to cover the stains on his public character, thinking, as any easy moralist is apt to think, that surrender of the spoils wipes out the crime. Why did he give the money back? He claimed, with great effrontery, to Sir Charles Davidson, that he was entitled to the money as honestly earned in the way of business. If that is so he had a right to keep it. Did he give up the money for patriotic reasons? If so his patriotism took a hotfd statesman's "d——d sharp curve." His patriotism a few months ago permitted him to take toll of the necessities of the nation and annex money enough to buy an additional squadron of cavalry horses. The worst feature of Mr. Fallis' unbelievable candidature, is that it is entered upon with the approval of his party leader, the head of the government. Mr. Fallis may easily be re-elected. He had a majority of more than 600; and his chances are certainties if the electors are as complaisant as their party leader, who is more tolerant of representative scalawags than Sir Robert Borden who put similar offenders out of their seats and read them out of the Conservative party. This did not prevent the constituents of one of these besmirched men to be acclaimed on return to his riding by his supporters. Political morality in Canada needs a little fumigation.

HUMAN HEALTH AND HUMAN PROGRESS.

We and the world are devoting so much energy to the destruction of human life, the killing of men, that it becomes a part of wisdom to give greater attention to the preservation and saving of life. In this connection a serial publication, "Child Betterment and Social Welfare," becomes an important matter. It is published in the interest of the better care of children, and improvement of social conditions, which involve the health and welfare of the child. The necessity of such a journal is easily admitted.

We have evidence that the great mortality of children under one year of age, is due chiefly to ignorance of mothers as to the proper dieting and care of infants. The report of the visiting nurses of the Peterborough Health Association shows that when the ignorance of some mothers was corrected by the visiting nurses their children throve better and received a care that saved lives. Even in cases like this the Health Association is well worth while and worthy of the strong claims it establishes upon our support, not to speak of the splendid work it does in alleviating suffering from disease, and carrying comfort, better sanitation and increased chances of life to hundreds of homes.

Not only is there need in every community of an educative and alleviating agency like the Health Association, but there is need of greater attention to the conditions that affect the general health of the community. These conditions are varied, as are the means that can be employed to promote health, especially of the young. These conditions and things are very well summarised in the list of things the crusade for child betterment, stands for; namely:

Farm treatment for feeble-minded boys and girls.

Physical care and training as the basis of the education of our children.

Rearing and education by the state of young children of poor families who are compelled to make children labour for their own support.

Here we have a wide-open field for philanthropic organization. If these aims could be reached, we should have an ideal condition of society; even the proportion of success that can be achieved with comparative ease, represents a vast improvement. Many of these things are within the practical scope of our civic authorities, such as the provision of playgrounds and the adoption of physical education as the basis of education. This latter has authority centuries old, as expressed in the English version of the Roman motto—"A sound mind in a sound body" as Juvenal, in his Satires, referred to it more than two thousand years ago: "Our prayers should be for a 'sound mind in a sound body'".

The more we care for the young the better we can educate them. By looking first to the care of the body the better foundation we lay for care and culture of the mind. We cannot very well overrate the necessity of providing the conditions of sound health as the very foundation stone of a healthy, robust, and educated, and cultured population. Outfall sewers are not the only things, though important in their way, to engage the attention of our civic legislators — the public health as the absolutely essential condition of all true betterment and progress, should have pre-eminent, if not paramount, place. We have come so fully to regard death as inevitable, that we sometimes yield to the feeling that its cause—disease—is also inevitable, instead of being to a very great degree, something controllable, and, outside of old age, preventable.

OMINOUS.

The Patriotic Fund collections were closed in the three cities, Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa on a day which happened to be the anniversary of the Kaiser's birthday. The leading team in Montreal was number 19. The leading team in Ottawa was also number 19. The Toronto teams were named instead of being numbered. The letters in the names of the leaders, G. H. Wood and Thomas Findlay, number 19. Three times 19 is 57, which was the age of the Kaiser on the closing day of the campaign. Things look bad for the Kaiser!—Ottawa Citizen.

HOW PARIS DEALS WITH THE ZEPPELIN MENACE

It is announced [illegible] details will be published about Zeppelin raids in England. This will be an improvement upon the former method of publishing misleading details, and may be designed as much to keep the enemy in the dark as to the success of his raids as to protect the War Office against criticism. Its methods have proved a failure, up to the present time; and while we may safely give the War Office credit for taking every precaution that occurs to the officials, it is only reasonable to point out that Paris, which ought to be a much easier victim for the Zeppelins, has had few casualties to record. Paris has sought to protect herself by very different means to those adopted for the protection of London and England. Paris seems to have solved the problem. The difference between the two systems has been the subject of comment by the London Times, and is explained by Harold J. Howland in an article in the New York Times.

Guns Not Much Use.

It is complained that when the raids of last Autumn were made, the anti-aircraft guns which had been mounted to defend London were largely manned by "cheery but ill-equipped and inexperienced amateurs." Even had they been manned by expert gunners it is doubtful if they would have frightened away the Zeppelins. So far as we are aware there is no record of a Zeppelin having been brought to the ground by gun fire. There is also the objection to the guns that the shells they discharge may do damage when they fall back to earth. The only other safeguard against the Zeppelins is the aeroplane. In Paris the aeroplanes are continually in the air. In London, apparently, they do not rise until the Zeppelin is sighted, and by the time they can climb to a position the Zeppelin has discharged its cargo of bombs and disappeared into the night. The aeroplane climbs slowly. It must rise in a spiral. The Zeppelin can rise like a balloon rises, and while a fast aeroplane can overhaul a Zeppelin at the same altitude no aeroplane can rise as swiftly as these huge gas bags.

How Zeppelins Rise.

The Zeppelin has three methods of rising beyond the danger mark. First it can point its nose toward the stars, and its powerful engines will send it up almost as swiftly as it can fly horizontally. Then the crew can throw out ballast, thus increasing its speed, and finally there is a third method that has lately been perfected. About the balloonets containing the hydrogen gas the modern Zeppelin has a system of pipes, through which is led the hot waste gases from the engines' exhaust. This heat which can be applied to the hydrogen at the will of the engineer, greatly increases the lifting power, and thereby accelerates the speed at which the balloon can mount skyward. Since the Zeppelin flies normally at a height of about two miles it is plain that the task of an aeroplane that sets out to catch one is almost a hopeless one, unless the heavier than air machine is already in the clouds.

The Paris Patrols.

Over Paris, Mr. Howland says, the French aeroplanes are in the air every hour of the day and night. The French pilots patrol the air just as soldiers might patrol a square. Each has a certain beat to cover, and a certain time in which to cover it. Then it returns and it has hardly reached the ground before another aeroplane is shooting swiftly up to carry on the work. Four planes are enough to safeguard Paris. They are equipped with machine guns. They are faster than the Zeppelins; and are so formidable in fact that the Zeppelins are rather cautious about giving them a chance. The Germans know that the destruction of one Zeppelin with the loss of its crew is too great a price to pay for all the military damage the dirigibles have yet been able to inflict. If they feel it is dangerous to send forth their Zeppelins, they will not send them. They sail to England because they have not yet been taught their lesson.

Daylight Raids Predicted.

It is predicted that the German Zeppelins will yet make a daylight attack upon the city of London. If they do, this may be the last raid they attempt. The aeroplanes would have at least an hour's warning of their approach, and scores of them could be in the air waiting for the enemy. A couple of these battleplanes, with a speed of sixty miles or more an hour and mounting real cannon, guns that throw an inch and a half shell, should be a match for any Zeppelin, if they had plenty of warning and were able to take up their position in advance. To avoid the battleplanes the Zeppelins would have to fly so high that its bombs could be dropped only at random. The night raids, if they are to achieve any other purpose than the destruction of private property and the murder of women and children, must be directed by spies from below. So far these spies in England, however willing they may have been, have been unable to help the aerial raiders to achieve any military end.

A PET NAME.

The Boston Transcript, referring to the destruction of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, says Germany is the Guy Fawkes of the nations. The analogy may remain true to the end.

BE PRUDENT.

Conscription is not in force in Canada. Offensiveness of language is not good tactics in a recruiting officer, and shows a lack of insight into human nature.—Globe.

THE RIDERS OF THE PLAINS.

Numbering at present a few over 900 officers and men, the Royal Northwest Mounted Police have come through another year of splendid work. Besides the old responsibilities of peace times, they have had many added duties owing to Canada's relation to the war; but the annual report of the Commissioner, Lieut.-Col. Perry, shows that nothing was lacking in the conduct and achievement of the force. After the war broke out, so many of the R.N.W.M.P. enlisted, and so much additional work had to be done, and so much uncertainty about the northwest population existed, that 500 new men were recruited; but most of these were last year allowed to go—and mostly they went to the war. Of charges against suspected enemy aliens, the Mounted Police investigated 2,309 cases during the year, interned 396 and paroled 398.—Ottawa Journal.

ONTARIO'S LOCAL EXHIBITIONS.

The Association of Fairs and Exhibitions which held its annual convention in Toronto a few days ago, has for obvious reasons received less attention than it deserved. The local agricultural and industrial exhibitions, which have been maintained in this Province for three generations have contributed greatly to its progress in both agriculture and manufacturers, and it is satisfactory to learn that they are still in operation and are not likely to vanish as an institution.

At a very early period in their history prizes began to be given, not for the best live stock apart from breed, but for the best animals of pedigreed breeds. In co-operation with the Provincial Exhibition, they promoted the importation of purebred animals from old country herds, and long ago the young stock in Ontario began to rival the best animals produced in the motherland. That Ontario is now abundantly supplied with some of the best pedigreed stock in the world is due very largely to the work of the local agricultural exhibitions. Long ago the permanent Exhibition at Toronto took the place of the peripatetic Provincial one.

In the wake of the old agricultural shows there are coming along rural school fairs, some of which have been so successful that they have become formidable rivals of the older institution. This led to the suggestion made at the convention that the two be united, the plea being that [illegible] would help the agricultural [illegible] and not hurt the school fair. There is room for doubt as to the latter point, because the aims of the two are by no means identical; the school fair is essentially educational in the school sense, the object being to get rural pupils to combine hand work with book and number work, in a way analogous to what is accomplished by means of manual training and domestic science in urban schools.—The Globe.

Canada Must Adapt Herself To New Conditions

The burning down of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa and of munition works at Hespeler is ascribed to German conspiracy, and there is talk of other attempts to injure Canadian property. Some of these reports are more probable than others, but the general effect is to create an atmosphere of suspicion.

Without analysing the evidence in each case, it may be said that there is nothing inherently improbable in the idea of a German attack upon Canada. We are at war. We are sending increasing numbers of men to the war. We are manufacturing munitions in increasing quantities. We are throwing into the war a steadily growing weight of financial strength. We must therefore expect that German fury and German cunning will be used against us.

But what will be the effect? The attack has just enough of the character of an invasion to arouse anger and not enough to arouse fear. It helps us to realize we are at war, and it is just [illegible] that we are losing. The destruction of the Parliament Buildings helps us to realize Louvain. From the great horrors of invasion, the murder of thousands of civilians, the outraging of women, the torturing of children, we are free. But we have just had a taste and a promise of what we may expect from an open German invasion in force, as distinguished from the secret plotting of a few.

These plots will make Canadians more vigilant, and more vindictive. It is not pleasant to contemplate the hardening of the character of any easy-going, good-natured, unsuspicious people, but, we fear that the change is inevitable. The Germans will have it so, and Germans must suffer the consequences; even the innocent will to some extent suffer along with the guilty.

It would have been easy for Germany in Canada and the United States to separate themselves from the follies and the crime of the Kaiser and his evil advisers. They are under no legal obligation to serve any master in Germany, and their true interests lie in co-operation and sympathy with their fellow-citizens in Canada and in the United States. But we are afraid that many of them have not cast off the spell of German Imperialism, and are ready to do criminal work for their masters in Germany.

Canadian resentment is natural, but it should not be wasted in mere ill-will and prejudice. What we must do is to take energetic measures for defence, for the guarding of any public property, of munition works and railways. We need also a thoroughly efficient and far-reaching detective service, and a closer watch on all suspected persons and communities.—Toronto Star.

Prosperous Year For the Mutual Life of Waterloo

The annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Waterloo, Ont., a summary of which appeared in these columns, shows that the Company came through a year of war, with, so to speak, flying colors,—with conditions that conduce to good dividends, meaning cheaper insurance, for dividends may be applied to reduce premiums or increase amount of policy.

The four points in the statement of The Mutual Life of Canada that favour high dividends are First, the Surplus that has been earned—Second, the Stability of the business or the low lapse rate—Third, the increase in the rate of interest earned, and Fourth, the lower ratio of expenditure to income. We may refer to these briefly. The surplus earned during the year amounts to the splendid sum of $1,158,210.20, an increase of 10 per cent. over the previous year, something participating policy holders are interested in. As to stability of business the lapsed are less than in the preceding year by over half a million dollars; while the policies not accepted have decreased by $288,000. These facts are the more significant when we consider that even a year ago this Company occupied the premier place in regard to the stability of its business. The ratio of expense to income has noticeably fallen, viz., from 17.00 per cent. to 16.20 per cent. This affords sufficient evidence that the revenue is being well maintained and that the expenses are being kept down to the minimum. The character of the investments held by the Company was such that the effect of the war has been to increase rather than to diminish the rate of interest earned and thus to swell the revenue.

In addition to these gratifying results of the Company's operations the year was made notable by the fact that the net business in force passed the hundred million dollar point, the actual amount in force at the year's end being $101,092,030. This result was reached in spite of the fact that nearly forty of the Company's agents enlisted in the army, and countless numbers of the best prospects were rendered unavailable owing to the same cause. Altogether the year has been one of splendid progress.

WEST LOOKS FOR BIG YEAR.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Hon. C. W. Fisher, speaker of Alberta Legislature, who is here, predicts a record immigration this year from the United States, and the greatest grain crop ever harvested. Millions are being expended in new railroads. Alberta has sent thirty-five thousand men overseas.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

93rd BATTALION OR ELECTRICS, WHICH?

Two City Teams Will Meet To-night in First of Two Games to Decide the Championship of the Intermediate District --Both Teams Are Confident and a Hard Battle is Expected.

Everything is set for the first game in the play-off series for the Intermediate championship of the district to-night, at Brock Street Rink, when the 93rd Battalion septette clashes with the Electrics. Lou Marsh, always popular here as a bell ringer, will be master of ceremonies, the teams having agreed on the Toronto man, and he will send them away at 8.30 o'clock sharp. The ice is lightning fast and with both teams thoroughly rested after their hard games last week, there is every reason to expect a red-hot battle. The first time out the Electrics nosed the Soldiers out, 4 to 3, in a tough fight. On their second appearance the 93rd team won a ding-dong battle by 5 to 3, getting their final goal in the last fifteen seconds. With five minutes to play the teams were even, at 3—3, which gives an idea of the closeness of the play. To-night's game should be every bit as exciting and as close as the other two fixtures. There is confidence in both camps, and they will play hockey from the drop of the hat. The men of the 93rd will be out in force to cheer for their team and, in addition to their brass and bugle bands, will have a well-organised Rooters' Club in action. The Electrics will be shy any musical accompaniments, but they will have plenty of supporters, nevertheless, as the fans are beginning to appreciate the game fight the youngsters have been putting up in the face of difficulties. It should be understood that if the score is tied to-night at the end of the game, it will not be played off, but should the two teams be tied up on the round at the end of the second game, over-time not exceeding thirty minutes, will be played.

The line-up will be as follows:

93rd.		Electrics.
	Goal
Widdifield		Legros
	Defence
Dupby		Spratt
Sexton		F. Montgomery
	Rover
R. Montgomery		Evans
	Centre

J. H. Ferguson got the decision from S. J. Stubbs, although the actual score was 14 to 9 for the latter rink. Playing one man short Mr. Stubbs was set back one point for every two ends for a total handicap of six points.

At the Oshawa Bonspiel yesterday the Peterborough skips, Hicks and Waddell, won their preliminary round games, but Hicks was defeated by Ormerod of Toronto Aberdeens by 18-8.

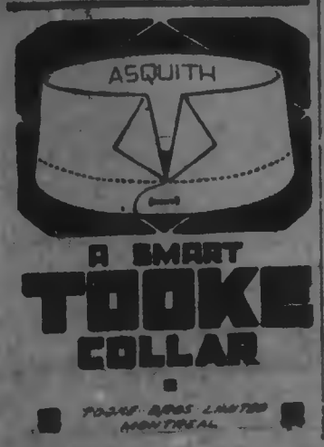
THEORY OF FIRE'S ORIGIN.

Thermic Fuse Material and What It Would Accomplish.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The latest tip to reach the Dominion police is an anonymous letter received to-day, written from Detroit but postmarked Cleveland, Feb. 6, midnight. The writer states that if the authorities can locate certain persons having in their possession a thermic fuse material, almost invisible, but capable of sustaining a half-pound weight and fusing at a temperature of 80 degrees, they will probably discover the origin of the fire. It is further explained that a fulminate of mercury cap placed underneath the weight would explode and cause the fire when the hanger fused and the weight fell, and that this would explain the loud detonations heard during the fire.



This Morning's Police Court

Claim For Wages Was Dismissed --Seeking a Lost Sister

A claim for wages occupied the attention of Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. After hearing the evidence the case was dismissed.

Information Wanted.

Pte. Jesse Perriman, 153971, No. 3 Company, 43rd Battalion, C. H. of C., East Sandling Camp, Kent, England, has written to Chief of Police Thompson, asking for information concerning the whereabouts of his sister, Miss Emily Perriman, whom he has not heard from since 1904. He believes she may have married and that her name is Mrs. James Johnson. Pte. Perriman has been travelling throughout Western Canada for a number of years, lost track of his sister's address, and is very anxious to hear from her.

Term "Intoxicated" Not Now Indefinite

Mayor of Petrolea Gets the Official Definition

PETROLEA, Feb. 9.—An authoritative definition of the term "drunk" and one upon which many prosecutions will undoubtedly be based in dry belts, was announced to the town council by Mayor Stirrett. His worship declared that he had just received from the license commission a definition that a man is intoxicated "when he acts differently after having taken the liquor."

The mayor said that as far as in his power all drunks in Petrolea would be accounted for and by this rule he would hold.

FRANCE'S JELLICOE MAN OF MARKED ABILITY IS IDOLIZED.

In command of the formidable French fleet is Admiral Boue de Lapyerere. In France he is as popular as is Sir John Jellicoe and, like Britain's sea leader, he can boast many years of distinguished naval service. Admiral Lapyerere entered the French navy nearly 40 years before the war. At the outset of his career he displayed marked ability. He took a high place in the naval examinations, and on obtaining his commission he closely studied the practical side of sea tactics and combined his knowledge with the theory he had gained from the best naval books of the day. His capabilities speedily obtained recognition in high quarters, and in his early 20's young Lapyerere commenced his rapid climb. One of his early commands was in China, when he obtained distinction at the battle of Foo-Chow. Since then he has successfully conducted several diplomatic expeditions in the Baltic and the Mediterranean.

It has always been the policy of Admiral Lapyerere to accompany his fleet in the fighting line. He is not a believer in armchair commanding. This means that he must face perilous risks, but the French admiral is quite ready to encounter any danger for the sake of his country. Admiral Lapeyrere is the same age as Sir John French. His immaculate appearance is a by-word in the French navy, and he carries his love of neatness and precision into his dealing with the fleet. His flagship is always the most spick and span vessel of the line. The brasswork shines like a mirror, and a carelessly coiled rope on the admiral's ship is as rare as a German warship outside the Kiel canal.

Life of Present Canadian Parliament Not to Expire Until October 1917

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The Government's resolution proposing an extension of the term of parliament for one year, the main feature of the Ministerial Legislative programme for this session, was adopted unanimously by the House of Commons this afternoon. Only two speeches were delivered, those of Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfred Laurier. The resolution which is drafted in the form of an address to the Imperial Parliament, now goes to the Senate, where it seems certain of unanimous adoption, barring the possible action of Senator Choquette.

The Prime Minister, in introducing the resolution stated that he would not press it if there was opposition, but would withdraw it; the government would then have to consider what course it would pursue. Sir Wilfrid Laurier afterwards expressed a thorough understanding of this statement.

OPPOSITION AGREES.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier took the stand laid down at the December conference of Liberals. The Opposition caucus held later, it will be remembered, abstained from taking a definite stand one way or the other, but left the matter in the hands of the party leader with, however, a fairly complete knowledge of the course to be pursued by him.

Sir Wilfrid handled his task with undeniable cleverness. He had undertaken to support all government measures for the successful conduct of the war. He included the extension resolution in this category. To an unlimited extension he would not have agreed, but this was an extension for 12 months only.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.—

Dear Sir,—In answer to the letter of the Rev. Robt. Pogue in the Examiner of 8th inst., I should like to ask the rev. gentleman a few pertinent questions. Does he not think that the clean-up he talks about ought to begin with the preachers of the gospel? Do the said preachers not make of the ministry a means towards a good fat living? The greater the gift of elocution the greater the salary. Does he not think that the word ministry in practice has become obsolete among the profession many centuries ago? When the church goes back to the simple form as taught by our Saviour and His disciples, who by the way we are told met in a little upper room. Then and not till then shall we have a revival.

Yours sincerely,
A. J. Watson,
McGill street.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is not very often I bother you, but I would like to ask space for a few words to-day.

Say what you like about me, of what I say or do. I appreciate all the good things, take the others for what they are worth. (I would rather have some folks' kicks than their kisses), but I feel it is my part to contradict flatly the statements reported in your paper last night, with reference to Mrs. McElhiney and the finance of the morality department of our city. In the first place I think the statements were made in utter ignorance of the facts. These I will give you now.

Mrs. McElhiney receives not one cent of salary from the Police Commission. This was distinctly understood at the beginning. $25.00 per month is allowed for the many and varied expenses in connection with the work, and I may say, incidentally, that if she charged up everything she could legitimately charge up, it would cost the city a good deal more than the $25.00 per month, or $300.00 per year. However the City has been very kind to us, and our work and we appreciate it very much, and will continue to do so. In the second place Mrs. McElhiney has nothing to do with the other one hundred dollars nor any of the miscellaneous accounts whatever. Every cent of the expenses she does charge up is taken out of the amount allowed to her, and no cab hire, 'phones, car fares, travelling expenses, or provision made for those under her care, women and children, is charged to any other account whatever, but the $25.00 per month received for that particular work. There will be a joint meeting of the Police Commission and the Finance Committee, so that the real facts will be stated no doubt by those to whom Mrs. McElhiney is directly responsible.

P.S.—While I have been writing this note the postman brought the following, which will speak for itself, and is only one of many which we consider our chief recompense:

Dear Mrs. McElhiney,—I am settled down and am starting a new life away up here. I had a place down in Fenelon Falls, but only stayed two or three days, and went back to the home. And I came up here Saturday. I have a lovely place and think it will be a good home. I get spending money and my clothes and my baby's clothes. The gentleman's wife died three weeks ago and left him with a baby eleven months old, so I have the two babies now. My boy is very good, but very weak. I am nursing him yet. He will be nine months old next week, and I am intending to do my duty by him.

And I am glad to say I have found the truth and have taken Him for my Saviour. God has been wonderfully good to me lately, and do pray for me, and may He give me the grace to bring my darling baby up to love and serve Him.

R—.

P.S.Do please write to me as I have only Mrs. Stitt and you to write to."

This letter speaks for itself.
J. A. McELHINEY.

ON THREE SHIPS GERMAN SUBS SANK

WAS SUNK IN THE CHANNEL WHILE TAKING HORSES TO BRITAIN FOR THE ARMY.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 9.—Only Lieut. Berg and his small prize crew remained aboard the former British passenger steamer Appam, brought into these waters last Tuesday as a prize of war. The liner's passengers and original ship's company, taken prisoners when the steamer was captured by a mysterious German raider off the Canary Islands on January 16th, have been liberated by order of the United States government.

The passengers to-day were aboard the Old Dominion Liner Jefferson en route for New York, where they were expected to arrive early to-night. The members of the crew, with the gun pointers taken from other British steamers which the raider sank before the Appam was overhauled, were in Norfolk, awaiting the sailing of another New York steamer to-night. Both the passengers and crew were transferred from the Appam to tugs and taken to Norfolk on river steamers.

The Appam is to remain at this port until the Washington government decides what disposition of her shall be made—whether she shall be held a fair prize crew of her German captors under the Prussian-American treaty or returned to her British owners under the Hague convention. No guard has been placed over the vessel by the United States, but Lt. Berg has given his word that the steamer will not be moved until the diplomatic questions involved in her disposition shall have been decided.

Among the stories told by the British sailors, that of the chief engineer, William James Gow, of the steamship Dromonby, is one of the most interesting.

He says that he has been on three ships sunk by the Germans, was a passenger on another which barely escaped two submarines, and his home at Martlepool, Eng., was shelled by a German fleet early in the war, and a Zeppelin bomb fell a comparatively short distance from his residence in a recent air raid.

Gow was the chief engineer on the British steamer Colby, destroyed by the German converted cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm on March 27, 1915, and was landed at Newport News. He was a passenger on the British steamer Cassandra which escaped from a submarine while carrying the Wilhelm's refugees back to England. Later he was made chief engineer of the British steamer Gadsby. On a trip to England with horses from Canada the Gadsby was torpedoed in the English channel, and the crew was picked up and landed at Londonderry, Ireland. On Jan. 12, when on the Dromonby as chief engineer, that vessel was sent to the bottom by the raider that got the Appam.

He that has never known adversity is but half acquainted with himself or with others. Constant triumph shows us but one side of life; the reverse side is necessary to full knowledge.

ALBERT THOMAS

M. Albert Thomas is a big man with a big job. Outside the army he has, in fact, the biggest job in France. He was born in 1879, and a few years ago he was a newspaper reporter. M. Thomas is the Lloyd George of France. Under Secretary of State for Artillery and Munitions is his official title, and he works in an hotel in the most famous boulevard in all Paris—the Champs Elysees. From there he sees the French army has plenty of guns and plenty of ammunition. "The way the women have risen to the occasion has been splendid. We have between thirty and forty thousand women making munitions in France. Our experience is that women, once trained—and the training is not a long business—can do every bit of the work connected with shell making. Women can make our '75's' just as well as men can. At Lyons, for instance, women do all the shell making," he says.

So wonderfully has M. Thomas organised the work of making munitions in France that now a number of factories are employing eight times as many hands as at the beginning of the war, and the work goes on almost unceasingly.

But it is not only the workers that he has organised. In France, as in Britain, all sorts of factories have been turned into munition producing establishments. M. Thomas, who has a big beard and a merry laugh, was best known for his socialistic writings and speeches before the war. He speaks English thoroughly well.

A typical Montenegrin well advanced in years. These hardy mountaineers have been accustomed to bear arms from boyhood and have been such fierce fighters that never until the "Great War" did an enemy take possession of their capital city.

ABOUT SEEDS

BEST all vegetable and grain seed now.

Are the apple trees protected by paper or boards on the south side? If not, they are likely to be injured by sunscald.

Send for seed and plant catalogues, study them, and get the planting list ready. It will soon be time to start many varieties.

Don't keep the seed bed too moist. Usually one thorough watering, when the seed is sown, is sufficient until the plants break ground.

Many varieties of seeds are going to be scarce this year. It will be well to have the seed order in early.

For the home garden choose vegetables of best quality. Quantity is not the important thing.

Most vegetables need rich, well-worked soil. Having this, and adding thorough cultivation and care, anyone can have a number-one garden.

Tramp the manure in the hotbed until it is solid, then put the glass on and leave it a few hours before putting the soil in. This will make heating sure.

Swiss chard should be included in the seed order. It makes good "greens" and is a rapid grower. It may be sown at the same time as early cabbage and transplanted to frames or field.

When you want to match a bit of lace simply pin the lace to some blue print paper and expose to the sun. Take as many impressions as you need.

If too much bluing has been put into the rinse water all bad effects will be avoided if three or four tablespoonfuls of household ammonia is added.

Omemee Items of Interest

OMEMEE, Feb. 9.— Mrs. Fallis of Franklin, visited at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jos. Shields during the past week.

Mr. William Lamb of Peterborough, was in town on business last week.

Prague Editor's Three Wishes Are Peace, Union and Light Taxes

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Wilhelm Keller, of the Prager Tagblatt, the most influential German newspaper in Bohemia, displays on the first page of that newspaper three wishes that he has for this year. They are: First peace; second, the unison of Germans and Austrians, and, third, sparing the people from heavy taxes after the war. Regarding peace, Herr Keller writes:

"It may seem rather incongruous to speak of peace at this time, but if a good fairy asked me now for my most cherished wish, it would be that of peace. Of course, our enemies act as if they were not even giving to the prospects of peace a mere thought, but no doubt in their innermost hearts they desire it as strongly as is expressed by Goethe in one of his works:

"'Sweet peace, come, oh come!'

"Surely no honest thinking individual is ashamed to wish for peace. We all honor the well-known proverb: "If you wish peace, then prepare for war" and the corollary to that is 'When engaged in war, forget not peace.'

"And so I hope and trust that 1916 will bring peace to us and with it the masks will be torn from the faces of Messrs. Grey and Poincare—peace that will make impossible any industrial warfare and lead to a strong commerical union between Germany and Austria. In this respect the words of Friedrich Ludwig Johns, spoken a hundred years ago, apply strongly now:

"The morning of the new German world has just begun. And for this world we will all work together; no task is too small and no sacrifice too great to make for our people and our Fatherland.'

"My second wish is for unison of aims and sympathy between Germans and Austrians. This is a wish even more important than the first, and it is a wish that a whole lifetime has not realized; but there never was such a time in all history as the present and a great future is dawning. How this national question will be met in Bohemia after the war is being discussed even in war time by eminent writers and thinkers. A commercial union appears now the best solution—that is, a commercial parliament—something that already was broached in Bismarck's time. Karl Venoist, in France, also made the same suggestion about eighteen years ago. The idea is not new, but its adoption is problematical. As Dr. von Licht expressed it in 1914, before the war:

"There is only one way that will lead us out of the swamps, and that is a perfect understanding between the Germans and the Czechs. The desire for this is stronger than appears on the surface.'

"To me it seems that the war has made this desire stronger, but it should not occur only between the Germans and Bohemians but between the Germans and all Austrians.

"My third wish is for as light a tax as possible after the war in order to place no great burdens on the people.

"Of course, more sacrifices await the people after the war, and these too, will be willingly met, but I wish for at least a reasonable and careful consideration of the question of taxes to make the burdens as light as possible."

"Frequently a bullock wagon would roll up with badly-wounded Serbians. We mounted the cart, or the wheel, and dressed them, and all we could do was to say "Napred" (forward) to the driver, and on the poor things would go day after day until they died. We probably caught them up in a day or two, and those who were alive we re-dressed their wounds, and gave them nourishment. At first our cars took the more serious cases to a hospital, where there was one French doctor and a thousand patients.

"Sometimes at night we had orders to retreat quickly, and just as we were all packed, and the guns within a mile of us, we would get about 90 wounded. We had to dress them in the field knee deep in mud, and take them with us in our flight, either by placing them in our cars, which we had to push through the mud, or carrying them ourselves on stretchers."

Sour Bread and Lard.

Continuing her story of the retreat, Miss Newhall informed our representative that day in and day out their food consisted of cabbage soup and rancid lard.

"When we came to the mountains," she proceeded, "all we had during the 24 hours was a quarter of black sour Coocoooroosta bread."

Miss Newhall produced a sample of this daily ration, and it looked anything but appetising. It was less in size than an ordinary biscuit, and on this the nursing staff had to exist day by day during their treacherous journey along the mountain passes.

Miss Newhall incidentally mentioned that a loaf of bread is difficult to get in Serbia, and that it costs £3 in English money to purchase a loaf the size of a scone.

"We were three weeks exactly," she continued, "in going over the mountains. We used to sleep out every night in the snow, and there was one rug between two of us."

Miss Newhall gave our representative a list of all the towns and villages through which the Serbians passed in their great retreat. They were unable to stay more than a night or two in any one place, owing to the advance of the enemy, and at times they only remained a few hours as the shells forced them to continue their perilous journey.

"German and Austrian aeroplanes were over us every day," she said, "and shelled us when we were attending to the sick and wounded."

Even amid all that was so tragic, Miss Newhall related an incident that had its humorous side. At Bushati, in the mountains, they sought the hospitality for one night of an old Albanian. "He was an extraordinary creature, and led us an awful dance," proceeded Miss Newhall. "If he ordered us to stand up, we had to do it, or if he commanded us to smoke a cigarette we had to do that. There were 28 of us in a small room not so large as the kitchen of an ordinary cottage, and we had to do everything this man told us; otherwise, he would have shot the lot of us."

As she related this adventure Miss Newhall laughed heartily, though she confessed that it was no laughing matter for any of them at the time, and they were glad to get away the next morning.

At another place—Ipek—the party slept for one night on the road side in the snow.

Speaking of Ipek military barracks, Miss Newhall described it as being more like a sewage farm. It was full of refugees of all nationalities, and wounded soldiers with septic wounds.

As showing the difficulties of the Serbian soldiers and the terrible trials of the nurses and the poor refugees, Miss Newhall informed our reporter that as they left most of the towns at one end the Germans or Bulgarians entered the other, and the shelling was very violent.

Wagons of Dead All Day.

In a further reference to her experiences whilst in camp in Krugujevatz Miss Newhall said:—

"During the time that typhus was so severe one rather gruesome sight was the cemetery, where numbers of dead typhus patients were brought up four in each bullock wagon, and the wagons were going along the road all day. They were in long open boxes which looked like our orange boxes. They lifted out the bodies and just dumped them into the graves (quite naked) lying until four were collected, and then covered in with a little soil and the boxes or coffins were taken back to the town for more to be brought up. I watched this myself many days.

The Starving Serbs.

"There is one point I wish you would impress upon your readers, and that is the whole of the Serbian Army came through the mountains with us to Di Medua, and are starving to death day by day. They need, and very quickly, food and clothing, which can be sent to them through the Serbian Relief Fund.

Miss Newhall added that on reaching Di Medua, she and her party were brought to Brindisi in an Italian packet, and from there they went to Milan by train, and thence to Paris, en route for London.

Decoration from the King of Serbia.

Miss Newhall was wearing a decoration, known in Serbia as the Order of Charity, which was presented to her by King Peter.

After a short holiday she intends to return to duty, and expects to go either to Russia or Saloniki.

German Ruses To Supply Submarines Amaze British

LONDON, Feb. 7.—"The ruses adopted by the Germans to supply their submarines with fuel and stores have been manifold," writes a special correspondent in the Scotsman.

"In the Mediterranean the enemy has not been able to maintain the measure of success he achieved at first, and there is evidence that against the ships of war there, as in the North Sea, he is now almost helpless.

"It is on record that an enemy submarine was a spectator of an important phase of the final departure from the Gallipoli Peninsula of the allied forces, but there were risks involved in an attempt to interfere with the operations and the submarine took no risks.

"Submarine supply arrangements in the Mediterranean were not so well advanced when war broke ot as they were in the northern waters. The German had foreseen his difficulties in the north. His purpose had been well defined and his plans were complete and his depots stocked.

"The underwater depots of the German submarine service were not created after the beginning of hostilities. Something of the care which had been bestowed by Germany upon peace time preparation for the war at sea may be realied from an incident in which two vessels of our county class figured many months ago. The vessels were on duty in the North Sea, out from the eastern edge of the Dogger Bank.

Pull Up Patrol Tank.

"Quite a lively time was experienced on one of the ships when in the distance an object which appeared to be a periscope was seen just lifting above the surface of a very calm sea. The sighting ship was about to warn her neighbor when from the latter vessel also the suspicious object was seen. A pretty game at once developed between the two ships. It was a game which had been fatal to submarines of the enemy before but on this occasion the prospective victim was unresponsive.

"The supposed periscope remained where it had first appeared, despite the wiles of the cruiser. The uncertainty did not last very long, and as soon as it was realized that whatever the object was, it certainly was not a periscope, there was an examination by launch, and the young naval officer in charge of the examining party received what was perhaps the greatest surprise of his career.

"The object which had sent the cruiser on a merry dance was a very unpretentious buoy, made in Germany. It was hauled aboard the launch, and the light tackle which held in was carefully gathered in. Then came, swirled in seaweed, heavier tackle which had lain on the ocean floor, and with the heavier tackle came the surprise. Running gear, devised and shackled with great ingenuity, was set free, and the launch crew hauled away happily. Up to the surface hove a great steel tank and as its crusted top threw off the load of water with a sidelong heave, a voice from the launch remarked, it is said, 'What price the Great Eastern!'

"Neutral" Supply Ships.

"Thus was found one of the first petrol supply depots set under the sea, while we were wrangling, over domestic affairs, for the use of an enemy who had no thought of war! The tank was carefully examined, and the surprise occasioned by its discovery was no greater than the respect evoked by the skill displayed in its construction. Without difficulty and in complete safety the U boats could draw oil fuel from this store, either by bringing it to the surface or by submerging beside it. There was provision for compensation by weight of water for petrol withdrawn.

"A single shot from a light gun smashed the tank to antoms, and the oil that spread over the surface of the sea was not the last film of oil which from such a source floated far to puzzle the mariners and raise strange tales.

"The problem of dealing with the 'neutral' supply ship is much more difficult in the Mediterranean than it proved in the North Sea and in northern waters generally. A serious problem enough it was in the north. Trawlers in scores took the risks of war, and came out to fringes of the Dogger Bank to glean what they could of fish or information. We are respectful of the rights and feelings of neutrals. But there came a day of reckoning all along the Dogger Bank, and of what was found in the weeding out that took place many interesting things might be told. Here is an instance:—

"There was a surprise one breezy dawn for a tiny group of British trawlers on that bank. Examining destroyers rushed out of the west, and were in the midst of the fishers almost as soon as sighted. Every trawler bore an English number, and every one had certainly done some fishing. There was not a single hold but held some of the spoil of the deep. And there was one hold in particular which seemed well fitted.

"Trawler" as Oil Tank.

"That was the traitor ship. the 'hold' was not much more than a depression. It was a false hold, fitted over the real hold and a real cargo. Under the shallow cupped upper 'hold' with its burden of fish there was the real hold with its burden of supplies for submarines, its wireless outfit, its bombs and benzine. She was one of the best examples of her kind taken.

"The submarine supply ships were very sadly shaken up that week, and none more effectively than one trawler, which was actually a cleverly constructed oil tank, 'double skinned' all over! Neutrals have but little reason to grumble if the British navy has now an inquisitive way with it. The 'concrete blocks' which were proved to be oil cases, the coils of new hawsers which yielded each its little tank of petrol, the copper packed 'tunnels' of innocent tramp steamers, have not been forgotten.

"With his under-water depots failing him, his coast depots discovered and removed, and his supply ships falling into the hands of the British fleet, the resourceful German looked to the North—and it seemed to him that from the willing West—for cash down—his U boats might be reached by vessels with supplies. Then came stirring days on the edge of the ice. Little or nothing has been heard of the swift dash upon a certain station up in that bitter No Man's Land and the silencing of a 'voice'—a German voice—which was being raised for the benefit of the U boats and the supply ships of the game."

French Mother Loses Son In War, Adopts Another

A remarkable incident fraught with intense human interest is told by the Paris correspondent of the Dagens Nyheter, of Stockholm. A French mother, who conducts a pension in Paris, recently received the following brief, pathetic letter from the captain of a French company in the Dardanelles, telling of the death of her son:

"Your son died like a hero, and that certainly should mitigate your grief. He was a brave French soldier, always in good humour, overflowing with enthusiasm and full of energy. Unfortunately, we have been as yet unable to give him burial, as his body lies now where it is dangerous to reach him, but rest assured, Madame, our entire company will at the first opportunity avenge his death and kneel down beside the grave of your dear son and offer our prayers to heaven for him."

This letter came to the mother some time ago. She continued working in her kitchen as usual from five o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night. On Sundays she ate in the dining room, dressed in deep mourning. She spoke of nothing but her son. Recently at breakfast she appeared in her every day dress and surprised everybody because of her good humour. She announced that she had received a letter from her son and placed the letter on the dining-room table.

There was intense surprise. Was the news of her son's death a mistake? Was he really alive?

"This is a letter from my new son," she replied, smilingly. "Just read his charming letter, gentlemen. I am anxious to see what he is like, whether a blond or brunette, tall or short, and he asks whether he can call me 'mother.'"

It developed that this French mother did as thousands of other mothers in France have done who have lost their only sons in the war. She went to one of the many bureaus and asked that she be provided with another son, and then, as in a lottery, she blindly selected one from a long list of young soldiers who have no relatives—soldiers who never receive letters or presents from home. She knew nothing more about him than that he was a French soldier alone in the world. That was all she cared to know—be he educated or illiterate, it did not matter.

She at once sent him socks, underwear, handkerchiefs and neckties, telling him that he now had a home where a warm meal and a comfortable bed always awaited him. She wrote him every detail of her life, told all about her husband, her nieces and her favourite cat; also about her dog, who was twelve years old and whose teeth were falling out. She assured him that when "Grandfather" Joffre granted him a leave he would not have to walk homeless in the streets of Paris. Should he be wounded he had a mother now who would nurse him.

And the smiling woman read the letter she had received from her new son, filled with thanks for the things she had sent him—the tobacco, books, the underwear, the handkerchiefs and the neckties, and he closed his letter with the following words:

"Mother, rest assured that I will do everything in my power to be worthy of you as a son."

GERMANS LEVY ON VILNA FOR FIRE

Russian City Fined $18,250 on Ground of Incendiarism—Army Headquarters in Danger

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A fine of 75,000 marks ($18,250) is said by Reuter's Petrograd correspondent to have been levied on the people of the city of Vilna by the German authorities on the ground that the recent great fire there was of incendiary origin. The flames reached the headquarters of the general staff of the German army operating on the front between Vilna and Baranovichi.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

On Thursday evening last, about forty-five people assembled at the home of Mrs. A. D. Payne, Strickland street to give Miss Mary Payne, of this village, a miscellaneous shower, in honour of her approaching marriage. In the course of the evening, a veritable "shower" of handsome and useful gifts descended on the head of the unsuspecting bride-to-be, after which a dainty luncheon was served. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in music and games. The guests then departed, all agreeing that they had spent a most enjoyable evening. Miss Payne has the best wishes of a large number of friends and we are indeed sorry to lose her from our midst.

Messrs. Sherman Hill and Bert Watley enlisted last week in the Lakefield Company of the 93rd Battalion.

TO GUARD MANITOBA'S CASH.

Govt. to Appoint Official Who Will Supervise All Expenditures.

Winnipeg, Man. Feb. 9.—The Manitoba Government has decided to appoint a comptroller-general for the Province, an official who would check and control expenditure. The salary will be $10,000 a year. The proposal was endorsed by Mr. John Aird, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, Toronto, who is now in the city. Announcement of the change will be made Thursday by Hon. Edward Brown in his budget speech.

18,000 MILES OF TRENCHES.

Observer Says the Allies Have Twenty to Each Mile of Front.

LONDON, Feb. 9. — There are at least 10,000 miles of trenches now in the western theatre of the European war, according to H. Warner Allen, special correspondent of the British press with the French Army. He writes:

"In the section of the French lines that I have just been visiting there are already on a front of just over ten miles, 376 kilometers (or slightly over 234 miles) of trenches. To make certainty still more sure, another seventy-five kilometres (or forty-six miles) of other trenches are being dug, so that by the end of the year there will be in that neighbourhood 280 miles of trenches on ten miles of front.

"Elsewhere a certain division has 250 miles of trenches to look after, while a certain corps d'armee has 450 miles. Taking these figures into consideration, one will certainly be under the mark in estimating that there are twenty miles of trenches to every mile of front, so that between Switzerland and the North Sea the British and French armies have at least 10,000 miles of trenches to guard and keep in order."

MORE TROOPS FOR SALONIKA ATTACK

MILAN, via Paris, Feb. 9.—A despatch from Athens to the Secolo says French aviators report continued concentration of adversary forces on the Greek frontiers. German reinforcements are advancing from Uskub to the northwest of Gievgeli, fresh German regiments have arrived at Monastir and Austrian forces are concentrating around Tchevikovo. A Bulgarian division, says the despatch finally, has left Kustendil, going southeastward, and the transfer of heavy artillery from Nish to the Bulgarian frontier is confirmed.

"PREMATURE OLD AGE"

Says Dr. Arnold Lorand, of the Carlsbad Baths, Austria, "is due to our own negligence," and to avoid such a fate he recommends a light diet, proper bathing, eight hours sleep, and "don't worry."

For run-down, weakened conditions, our local druggists, McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, have a wonderful non-secret preparation composed of the three oldest tonics known, iron for the blood, the medicinal, body-building properties of cod livers, and the nourishing properties of beef peptone, all combined in Vinol which they guarantee to build up and strengthen weak and feeble old people, and for all run-down conditions.

People of Leipzig Very Poorly Fed

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Nearly 200 incapacitated soldiers, many of them captured in the retreat from Mons, and repatriated civilians arrived here to-day from Germany via Holland.

An educated woman among them, who was head of a nursing home in Berlin before the war, said that there was undoubtedly a shortage of several necessities in Germany, but that it was felt more in the provinces than in Berlin where the authorities seemed determined to keep things as nearly normal as possible.

She learned, she said, that the people of Leipzig obtain only the equivalent of two thin slices of bread a day, but hope that by this measure the supplies will last. Lamp oil is not obtainable and candles are eight cents apiece. Nobody expects butter and it is often impossible to secure substitutes such as lard and oleomargarine.

Nearly evereyone evades the regulation prohibiting the eating of meat on two days a week by buying beforehand, but the restaurants are obliged to comply with the rule. The same is true of 'fatless' days, when everything is boiled.

"The overwhelming confidence in victory," she says, "and the belief that Britain is on her last legs prevent the Germans from feeling the pinch of food shortage. The hatred of Britain is greater than ever. France and Russia are seldom mentioned. Nobody in Germany has the slightest doubt but that the Germans are winning, but there is far less bell-ringing and waving of flags than formerly."

A young man released from Ruhleben expressed surprise at these statements, because he said things there were much better. The Germans seemed to be quieting down and had ceased their bad treatment.

TO AID RETURNING TROOPS.

German Loan Plan Will Enable Men to Start in Business Again.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Plans are under way in Prussia for the establishment in every province of funds from which returning soldiers, both during and after the war, may borrow at a low rate of interest in order to re-establish themselves in business. No one will be excluded from borrowing, but the plans have been drawn up with small merchants and tradesmen primarily in view.

The money, it is proposed, will be supplied in part by the provinces, and in part by the monarchy of Prussia. It is probable that the Prussian Diet, which will open on January 13, will, before its conclusion, be asked to consider the proposition and vote the necessary money.

The loans will be made at some low rate of interest and will be repayable on easy terms. The provinces will repay to the state on the same basis, but the Ministers announce that they are willing that 15 per cent. of the state's money shall be held by the provincial authorities for the continuation of loans. Representatives of chambers of commerce and similar business organizations in the various districts will be called upon to aid the authorities in the provinces in determining who is eligible for loans.

STRAND MUSICAL COMEDY CO.

The Strand Musical Comedy Company opened a five-night engagement at the Grand last night in the musical farce "The College Widow." Felix Martin and Walter Pilson proved an amusing pair of comedians who were responsible for frequent laughter while Munro and Floyd, billed as "whirlwind dancers," gave a surprisingly clever performance. The work of this pair was a refreshing feature of the bill and they were entitled to the hearty applause they received. A novelty juggling act by Thos. Redway was above the average. The company is not strong in singing, but they all got by except one individual, who could be eliminated to the benefit of the performance. The rest of the entertainment provides an enjoyable evening.

Green food should be fed to poultry every day in winter. This serves as an appetizer, and keeps the digestive organs in perfect order.

FEBRUARY SKY BRILLIANT WITH PLANETS AND STARS

Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Mars are Very Favourably Situated for Observation — Spectacular Display Between 7 and 9 O'clock

ARE READILY DISTINGUISHED

The bright lights of the Broadway of the sky gleam brilliantly these cold February nights. From west to east, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Mars reveal a wonderful highway across the heavens, or, like glowing milestones, blaze a luminous trail through the forest of stars for the spirits journeying heavenward. It is an inspiring spectacle for those whose vision seeks to penetrate beyond the tawdry lights of earth and whose ears strive to catch the singing of the planets. And it is to be regretted that the multitude on earth is utterly unresponsive to the imaginative appeal of the far away wonders of the firmament; that to the crowd they are only stars that timorously peep out at the departing sun and seem so tiny and near at hand that on yonder hill they could be plucked from their sable setting for re-arrangement in a tiara.

Venus Moving Eastward.

At 7.30 o'clock the observer will readily distinguish Venus and Jupiter far over in the western sky. Venus is the more brilliant of the two—"it seems she sits upon the cheek of night like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear"—but is rapidly moving eastward. The closest approach of these two planets will occur on February 13th at 10 p.m., when they will then be separated by a distance considerably less than the diameter of the moon. Venus will then be north of Jupiter. At present she holds the more westerly position. Venus seems to be closely wrapped in clouds, and the sun's rays reflected back from them reinforces her refulgence. A stranger to the sky can readily discover for himself these two planets. Then turning his gaze toward the eastern horizon the planet Mars is located by its coppery glow well up in the sky. Popular interest attaches to Mars in the vexing question of its habitability and the conjecture as to the race that may people it. Man wonders whether in the vast infinitude of space there exists in other worlds beings similar to himself. His observations of Mars enkindle his imagination and speculation but if there are Martians they are beyond human knowledge. The telescope, however, reveals certain physical features of the planet mountain ranges, canals and other outlines. This morning at 6 o'clock Mars made its nearest approach to the earth of the year. It was only 60,000,000 miles distant from us.

Between Mars and Jupiter is Saturn, gleaming whitely directly overhead. During his residence in this vicinity, Rev. Dr. Marsh more than once discussed this planet and its rings.

Orion is slightly south of the main planetary path, but is practically overhead. A very bright star, the most southerly, and at 7.30 inclining to the east, is Sirius in the constellation of Canis Major (the bigger dog). Sirius is popularly called a dog star. Canis Minor is situated north of its companion and displays the conspicuous star Procyan, which with Sirius, are known as the dog stars.

The twins, Castor and Pollox, are also overhead and Capella and Rigel are easily located. These may not be easily distinguished by the beginner, but he cannot mistake the first mentioned planets, and Sirius. Over in the north-east sky the constellation, Ursa Major, the big dipper, is clearly outlined, and the little dipper is slightly west of it.

The purpose of these references is to indicate and identify for the average man, if he is in the least interested in astronomy a few of the heavenly bodies that brilliantly appeal to him, this month particularly, for a passing recognition—and perhaps a thought of the majestic Hand that guides them.

GIRL SCOUT WITH RUSSIANS PERFORMS GALLANT SERVICE

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A woman's heroic exploit in the last 24 hours' fighting in Galicia is recorded in a statement issued by the Russian War Office. Although suffering from a smashed bone in her limb, Corp. Glouschenko, "who is Miss Tcherniavika," as the Russian official report writers explain, offered to undertake a reconnoitring escapade close to the German lines in the Boyan region. After completing her task she crawled back to the Russian lines. The Russians captured a mine crater in the same region, and although the official report does not specifically say so, it is conjectured that the success was due to the young woman's heroism. The official report in this connection reads:

"In one sector of Gen. Letchi's line north of Bojcino (Bukowina) we exploded a mine under the enemy's trench entanglements. The explosion wrecked the trenches and damaged the entanglements. Directly afterwards our men advanced to the attack and captured the crater, from which, by a plentiful use of bombs, they got into the enemy trenches, where they found numerous bodies.

"In the same region Corp. Glouschenko, who is in reality a girl named Tcherniavika, and who volunteered for scouting duty, got through the enemy's entanglements, and despite a wound to her and in the leg and a fracture of a bone, accomplished her object and returned to our trenches."

Meeting of The Board of Health

Tenders for Season's Supply of Ice Left in Hands of Chairman and Medical Officer of Health

At a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday afternoon, tenders for the season's supply of ice were received from the following William Brown, 65¢; Wm. Little, $42.00.

The matter of awarding the contract was left in the hands of Ald. G. H. Duncan, chairman, and Dr. C. H. Amys, the Medical Officer of Health.

A letter was received from Miss Reid, acting matron of the Queen Mary Hospital, giving an inventory of the goods in the hospital and saying that she needed some supplies. The communication was marked "Received."

Miss Spears of the hospital staff, was given an increase in salary of $5 per month in accordance with the terms upon which she was engaged.

SALARY INCREASE.

The Board will recommend to the City Council that in view of the increased work pertaining to the office the salary of the Medical Officer of Health be increased from $600 to $1,000 a year.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: Fanning Steam Laundry, $3.37; Bert Heard, $15; J. W. Edwards, $16.64; Dource Fruit Store, $11.34; Central Liquor Store, $1; J. Steinberg, 70c; Miss B. M. Mowry, $1; Alexander & Miller, 40c; Juby Bros., $14.60; Mrs. R. Hoskin, $6.25; Wm. Madill, $16.20; Bell Telephone Company, $19.40; G.N.W. Tel. Coy, $169; Review Ptg. Coy., $2.84; Times Ptg. Coy, $4.64; Peterboro Examiner, $13.60; Wm. Brown, $87.84; Matthews, Blackwell Coy., $7.84.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Property committee of the City Council will meet this evening. The members will meet at the incinerator at seven-thirty o'clock and after inspecting the plant will adjourn to the city hall for further business.

Cases of Measles.

A number of additional cases of measles have been reported to the Sanitary Inspector's Department. A new supply of placards was necessary to meet the demand.

Snow Ploughing.

The contractors for the removal of ice and snow from the city's streets have had a fairly easy season so far. The snow fall has been light and infrequent.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Brantford, Feb. 9.—The L. E. & N. Ry. started its service between Brantford and Galt yesterday without formalities.

Crowland Votes $2,000.

Welland, Feb. 9.—Crowland Township Council voted a grant of $2,000 for the Patriotic Fund. This will go towards the $45,000, the amount to be raised jointly by Welland Town and Crowland Township.

THE CANADIAN WAR HORSES

Only Ten Per Cent Have Been Lost —Veterinary Treatment is Also Prompt.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—According to statistics furnished by the Canadian Remount Bureau, so far only 10 per cent. of the Canadian horses at the front hace succumbed, and most of these were killed in battle. There are now approximately 15,000 horses with the Canadian army corps in France, each infantry division having 6,280.

The horses of a division are taken care of by twelve veterinary officers and one mobile veterinary section of twenty-seven men. The mobile section takes care of the horses on the firing line. The slightly wounded or indisposed beasts are cared for and returned to the front. If the troops are on the move all injured horses are immediately collected and sent in groups back to the railroad, going by train to the nearest veterinary base hospital. When they once more become fit for duty they are sent to the regimental depot, where they are reissued for further use.

Little Wastage.

Horses which in previous wars and civilian life would be destroyed at once, are treated so successfully that they often become fit again for duty on the firing line. It is interesting to note that 607 horses sent on one occasion to the field veterinary hospital only twelve died.

Wounded horses are immediately given first aid. Any horse which is able to walk is rushed back to the mobile section, or field hospital, its wounds are carefully treated and every attention given it. Fresh horses are constantly being brought to the front to replace the wounded animals.

Did Great Work.

During the second battle of Ypres, when the Canadians were pressed to their utmost, at no time was the supply of horses diminished at the firing line. As casualties occurred among the battery and transport horses reinforcements were rushed in to take their places. Although the Canadian guns were within 300 yards of the enemy, there was not a wagon or a gun lost.

Horses with as many as ten bullet wounds have been treated, and, in some instances, sent back to work, entirely recovered, in three weeks. In fact, some of the wounded horses have returned to the front after a week in the hospital.

It is interesting to note war horses' diet. They are fed three times a day, and get an allowance of eighteen pounds of hay, twelve pounds of oats, eight pounds of straw, or in lieu of this, four pounds of extra hay and two pounds of oats, or any other fodder procurable of equal food value—malt, sugar beets or vegetables.

The Canadian horses are reported as having put on much flesh since they have been in France.

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. — The stock market opened strong to-day, responding to favourable news regarding the Lusitania case. None of the advances were spectacular, however.

Crucible was up a point, American Car and Foundry 1 1-8 points, United States' Industrial Alcohol 2 points and United States' Steel gained 1-4, going up to 84 3-8.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 816 College Street, will be answered —on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

North Ender: Some time ago in the "Arts and Crafts" column of your indispensable daily, you explained a way to have those heavy plaster ornaments attached to the ceiling. Would you kindly explain again, in next week's issue?

Ans.—Plaster Paris centre pieces can be purchased in a variety of designs and are easily fastened to a flat ceiling, and cornices to the wall at ceiling line. But I would advise against attempting to do it yourself. It is not an expensive undertaking, and should be left in the hands of a competent decorator or plasterer, for if not properly secured they may come down rather suddenly while some one is beneath; so, "safety first."

Carrie, Peterborough, Ont.: I have had the misfortune to spill some ink on my writing desk, and although I have scraped off all the varnish, the stain is still there; it has gone right into the wood. Is there any way to colour the ink, or can it be neutralized in any way, so as not to show? The desk is supposed to be oak, but a friend told me it was made of ash wood. An early answer will oblige.

Ans.—Dissolve about two ounces of oxalic acid in a pint of clean soft water (warm water is best) and with a soft sponge dipped in the solution pat the spot; when dry, repeat. Two or three applications should suffice.

A Reader, Millbrook, Ont.—Will you publish in your very helpful "Arts and Crafts" column a simple way to make a furniture reviver?

Ans.—There are so many cheap and good furniture polishes on the market that it would be superfluous to publish formulas for making furniture polish. A simple and effective method, however, is to clean the furniture carefully with turpentine and polish with oil of lemon.

Quis., City.—Is there some sort of paint or varnish to preserve pressed brick in front of a hearth?

Ans.—I know of no paint nor varnish that is made specially for this purpose. But I have read somewhere that new brick floors should be washed clean with soda water, and when dry, rubbed with paraffin.

An Enquirer, Peterborough, Ont.—What is the best way to clean white paint?

Ans. — Secure some finely-sifted Spanish whiting, a soft rag, and clean water; wet the rag, dip in the powder, and rub the paint work gently, when it will remove all the grease and dirt. Then wash with a soft sponge and clear water and wipe dry with a soft chamois skin. This process has many advantages over the usual soap and water which has a habit of turning white paint yellow.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. R. H. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to make my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

JOIN THE 2000 CLUB DON'T LET THE SUPPLY OF SMOKES FALL DOWN

We must have 2000 regular monthly contributors to keep up a regular supply of Tobacco and Cigarettes to the PETERBORO BOYS at the front. There is no gift more appreciated by our splendid boys at the front than SMOKES. The strain on the nerves is terrific during a bombardment and Tobacco helps them to endure and hang on. The first thing a soldier asks for when wounded is a SMOKE then he generally says "Take Bill first he is hard hit I can wait." They are heroes every one of them. "Will you let these men go without a smoke when a quarter a month will supply one man for a week?"

There are collection books in most of the factories, collection boxes in the stores. You can give your money in to the Post Office or to the Bank. Take it in to Mr. W. H. Dunsford, Manager Bank of Commerce (Treasurer of the Tobacco Fund). Write or 'phone the secretaries and one of the Fund's collectors will call on you. JOIN THE 2,000 CLUB TO-DAY.

Give one quarter a month or more if you can the Boys will thank you from the trenches. Some of the return postcards have been published and they are still coming in.

Meetings for all those interested are held every Tuesday night at 8 p.m., Bank of Commerce Building, upstairs over Trent Canal Office.

BRING YOUR QUARTER IN TO THE "EXAMINER" TO-DAY.

A PLEA FOR THE ARMENIANS

The American Committee for Armenian Relief, in co-operation with the Committee of Mercy, has issued an appeal for the relief of Armenian refugees whoare victims of Turkish persecution. American Consuls and missionaries, from personal knowledge, not only endorse the truthfulness of reported atrocities, but emphasize the urgency of immediate aid being given to these sufferers.

From these same sources comes the information that of the 2,000,000 Armenitions in Turkey one year ago, at least 1,080,000 have been slain, driven from the country, forced in Islam, have perished on the way to exile or been deported. There are 600,000 Armenians still in Turkey, 225,000 refugees are in the four Russian provinces bordering on Turkey and the Caucasus, the United States Consul at Aleppo reports over 150,000 exiles in this district alone, 4,000 have escaped to Egypt while many have fled into Persia where there are 70,000 Christians in pitiful condition.

"Nowhere in the world's history," says this appeal, "can a page be found to parallel that upon which are recorded the inhuman brutalities practiced by the Turks upon the defenceless Armenian people." Direct and authentic records tell how men are being subjected to inhuman tortures until death relieves them, some four or five being placed one in front of the other in order that one bullet will suffice to end their lives. The men of the army were the first to be brutally slain and then horribly tortured civilians followed. Armenian professors, with high degrees from Armenian and European universities, along with these other unfortunates, were tortured by pulling out their hair, beard and fingers nails, by burning and cutting off their toes and by beating. Even the garb of the priests did not save them from brutal murder.

Women, children, the sick and aged were compelled at a moment's notice to start on foot on a journey to unknown exile. Mothers were torn from their children and were compelled either to leave the little ones behind or witness the brutal killing of them. Women giving birth to children on the road were not allowed a moment's delay but were forced by the whiplash to continue their march until they dropped out of sheer suffering or from exhaustion to die. The crimes of which the Armenian women have been made the victims are too cruel and horrible for words. The more attractive women and girls are made the prey of their guard and the remains of villages and mountain passes. Hundreds of mutilated corpses of other women bear mute testimony to this reign of inhuman barbarity and persecution.

Helpless little children are among these victims. A United States Consul reported that he saw many of them killed by beating their brains on against the rocks. Other children were thrown into rivers and those who could swim were shot down as they struggled in the water. Children as well as their helpless elders were brained with clubs or beaten to death.

This is the plight to-day of the Armenian people, now staggering under the unprovoked blows of assassins and calling in desperation to the civilized world for assistance to save the remnant of the race. This is the fate that has befallen thousands upon thousands of one of the oldest and most notable of ancient races—the first nation to adopt Christianity as its national religion.

It is for these sufferers that an appeal is made to the generous hearted Americans. Not only are these refugees in desperate need of immediate relief but all funds provided for them are most judiciously expended. It is a matter of record that 10,000 Armenians in Persia lived for one month on $10,000. Think of it—a human being living for one month on one dollar!

Will you help these sufferers? Won't you make a generous contribution that will mean food and clothing for them and provide shelter that they may have a chance for life? Every dollar contributed will be devoted in full for this purpose, all administration expenses being borne by members of the Committee. The actual work of relief will be done by American Consuls and American Missionaries, thus guaranteeing that the proper supplies will be placed where they are most needed.

Contributions should be sent to Charles R. Crane, Treasurer, the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

A SPECIAL PROGRAMME

The Royal Theatre to-day and to-morrow displays twelve reels specially selected from the best makers. They include the latest authentic pictures taken at the seat of war. Also good dramas, bright comedies and others.

LAST NIGHT AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

In his address, at Bethany Tabernacle, last night, Rev. H. M. Sherman said there were at least four judgments mentioned in the Bible: The judgment of sin on Calvary, which is past. Jesus Christ suffered as our substitute, and received the penalty for our sins in His own body on the Cross. 1 Pet. 2:24, "Who His own self bore our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live into righteousness."

The believer, therefore, need not fear being judged for his sins if, through faith in Jesus Christ, he has had his sins forgiven.

Many Christians fear the judgment because they confuse present acceptance with God with final entrance into Heaven.

The other judgments referred to were the judgment for service, 1 Cor. 3:13: The judgment of the nations, Mat. 25:31, 32, and the great white throne judgment which will be the final judgment of the wicked. Rev. 20:11.

Miss I. V. Morgan of Central China arrived in the city Monday, and spoke yesterday afternoon and briefly at the opening of last night's meeting.

Mr. Sherman will speak to-night on the "Glorious appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ," preceded by a brief missionary address by Miss Morgan.

Services each day this week will be held at 3 and 8 p.m. All are cordially invited.

ADVERTISING HINTS

Advertising is news: make your advertising newsy and it will be read with interest by the general public.

It is better to have an ad. of a given size appear in every issue of a daily than to have twice as large an advertisement appear in every other issue of the same paper.

In an ad. four inches long (168 agate lines) the maximum number of words used should be 105. Of course if a cut is used the number of words should be reduced in proportion to the space occupied by the cut.

Many an advertiser has seen his advertising fail to iron flatness, because he stopped it at a critical period in its life.

Oftentimes one can reach more buyers by advertising in a half dozen publications of acknowledged circulation, than he can by spreading his advertising appropriation over a hundred publications which all together do not amount to the volume of half of the six great media.

Read the Story in Saturday's Examiner. The Pictures will be shown in the Empire Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

number of the officers and men of the battalion attended and the time was very pleasantly spent in music, games and dancing, while refreshments were served. A number of members of the battalion took part in the programme, while Master Percy Luther recited in his usual effective style. Miss Gladman and Master Otto Gliddon presided at the piano.

A fine example of patriotism has been afforded in the last day or two by Mr. and Mrs. David Miller of Dummer township. Mr. Miller, who is a well known farmer with a host of friends in the district, has enlisted as a private in the 93rd Battalion and his wife who before her marriage was Miss Coleman and who was some time ago superintendent of the Nicholls Hospital, has placed her services as a nurse at the disposal of the government. The example set by Mr. and Mrs. Miller is expected to have a fine effect upon recruiting.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL WALKER

The death occurred this morning in Nicholls Hospital of Samuel Walker Deceased, who was sixty-five years of age, resided at 231 Westcott street. He was well known and highly respected and his demise will be regretted by a wide circle of friends. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Sarah Fitzgerald, 440 Charlotte St., relict of the late Thomas Fitzgerald of this city. The deceased who was 86 years of age, was born near Newmarket, but has lived the greater part of her life in Peterborough. She was twice married, her first husband being George Oliver. She was an earnest and faithful member of All Saints' Church. She donated the bell to the church as well as subscribing liberally to the new church at time of its erection. She was a woman of many estimable qualities, having been identified with all good works.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning from All Saints' Church to the 9.15 C.P.R. train, interment to take place at Newmarket. The remains will be taken to All Saints' church on Friday.

MRS. DANIEL COLLINS.

Miss Margaret Perrault received word on Monday of the death of her aunt, Mrs. Daniel Collins, in the hospital at Vancouver, B.C., on Jan. 9th. Death was due to a fall that she received about six months ago. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, and one daughter, Mrs. Wm. Bonis, of Vancouver, B.C., and two sisters and two brothers. The sisters are Mrs. W. A. Perrault of Hastings, and Mrs. Denis McGraw of Saginaw, Michigan. The brothers are Mr. John McGuire of Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. Patrick McGuire, of Hastings.

The late Mrs. Collins was at one time a well known and highly respected resident of Hastings and has many friends here, who will regret to learn of her demise.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

Does Home or School Exert Greater Influence?

Question Debated by Young People at Keene Presbyterian Church —Death of Mrs. John Kindred

KEENE, February 9.—Mrs. Thomas Howson was in Peterborough on Thursday.

Mrs. Annie Johnston visited friends in Peterborough last week.

Miss Laura McFarlane spent the week-end at home.

Mrs. J. Mellin spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Mrs. George Moore visited Peterborough last Thursday taking advantage of Dollar Day.

Jos. Walker was in Peterborough last Thursday.

MRS. JOHN KINDRED.

Last Thursday morning, Feb. 3rd, at 9.30 o'clock, the death occurred at her home on High street, at the age of 67 years, of Mrs. John Kindred. Mrs. Kindred was born in Otonabee, and has resided in the village for the past 34 years. She was a member of the Methodist church, and was very active in the Women's Missionary Society. She was remarkably smart for her age and was a very enthusiastic worker in Red Cross and patriotic work. The past year she knitted 13 pairs of socks, which speaks for itself for the interest she had taken. Those who survive her are three children: Mrs. (Rev.) W. R. Barker, of Toronto, Mrs. Ed. Donnelly of Oregon, and Mrs. Thomas Kindred of Montana; also three step children, Mr. William Kindred of Peterborough; Otto Kindred, of Peterborough; and Mrs. A. Vyoyan, of Midland. The funeral was held from the home on Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m.; interment in the Keene cemetery. Rev. A. K. Bannison officiated. The pall bearers were Christopher Howson, Ed. Braden, Andrew Shearer, Gilbert Howson, John Robertson, Charles Hunter. A large number of relatives and friends from Norwood, Havelock and Peterborough attended the funeral.

INTERESTING DEBATE.

Last Friday evening the debate that was held in the lecture room of the Presbyterian church was very largely attended. It was a well chosen subject: "Which has the most influence on the Character—Home or the School?" The Home was defended by Mrs. Arthur Cameron, Henry Humphries, Jean Armstrong; the School by A. Hart, Terne Weir, Estelle Cuffe. Mr. Hart made the opening argument, followed by Mrs. A. Cameron who overbalanced the first part; then came Miss Weir with a strong argument for the school, which was set aside. When Mr. Henry Humphries like an old time orator took the platform and told how his thoughts still carried him back to the old Home and to the old School, which is still standing. Mr. Humphries is in the seventies and was very capable of defending the Home. He was followed by Miss Estelle Cuffe for the School, who showed her oratorical qualities and argued to the point like a suffragette of platform experience. Then Miss Jean Armstrong with the closing argument for the Home made such a strong plea, that it only took the judges but a short time to decide that the arguments all centred on the Home, and the verdict was given in favor of the Home. Then the Rev. McEachern in a nice little address wished everybody to partake of a nice lunch that had been prepared by the ladies. A musical programme was furnished during the evening.

Alex. Hastie was in Peterborough on Thursday.

Scott Robertson was in Peterborough on Thursday and the theatre in the evening.

William Campbell returned from Toronto on Saturday.

William Richardson of Norwood, was in the village last week on business.

William Kempt was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Messrs. Peter Drummond and Henry Humphries were delegates to Toronto last week on fall fairs, etc.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

When men build a new boat and wish to test its strength, they turn its prow upstream, against the current. They do not let it drift with the tide. So it is with our lives. If we wish to try our strength we must turn our faces to the current and face the tide.

* * *

About the middle of the eighteenth century a lighthouse, called Eunston Pillar, was built on Lincoln Heath to guide travellers over a trackless, barren [illegible] irritable desert almost in the centre of England. But now it stands [illegible] midst of a fertile region. No [illegible] heath has been visible, even from the top, for many generations. Superphosphate [illegible] has effected this magic transformation. Many a barren, useless life has been made fruitful by the inspiration of a high ideal. Improvement hardly less radical is possible even in the best of lives. Apply the superphosphate of lofty purpose and your useless life will blossom like the rose.

* * *

There is not such a great amount of happiness in the world, even at the best, that we should risk losing it by our own misdeeds and ill nature. There are many people in life who may be likened to a briar bush, when one comes too near he gets stung by thorns; but each individual should remember that he himself is sometimes thorny and apt to inflict wounds. Therefore each one should be more lenient toward the other, remembering that the more one strives against such things the deeper they penetrate and the more painful wounds they make. A spark of fire if left to itself will eventually die out, but if it be nursed and fuel added, behold, what a great conflagration ensues. Forbearance is the only remedy, and although everyone may not possess the unexampled patience of Job, yet what little they have may be cultivated till things will be made to go smoothly and easily.

* * *

The home in some phase or attribute has been a fruitful theme for literature through many centuries of civilized life. The most voluminous as well as the most varied treatment of the same and its finer issues has been at the hand of the poet. This is due to the fact that domesticity is closely bound up with our affectional natures and touches themes of utility, fancy, attachment or association that have become part and parcel of our lives and cannot be detached from them, even through a long stretch of years. Few writers could find a topic were it not for the innocence of children, the joys of youth, the blush and bloom of maidenhood, the wisdom of beauty, or old age, or the myriad other inspirations of the home.

* * *

The chief attraction in a home is a good woman. To man it is his wife. To children it is a mother. Weary and worn with strife, the husband seeks home for consolation. The minute the door opens care is banished from his brow and life takes on a brighter hue. No matter how hard the struggle, hope enters with him here and like the white dove of peace, nestles in his bosom. What a rare combination of virtue must wife and mother possess! How loving, how tender, how resourceful she must be! Home is where mother is.

* * *

Beauty in dress is a good thing, rail at it who may. But it is a lower beauty, for which a higher beauty should not be sacrificed. They love dress too much who give it their first thought, their best time, or all their money; who for it neglect the culture of the mind or heart, or the claims of others on their service; who care more for dress, than for their character; who are troubled more by unfashionable garments than by a neglected duty.

* * *

The average housekeeper in modern circumstances spends most of her time in the kitchen doing work that might be much lightened if only she would bring herself to think so. But the average mother of a family simply will not spare herself. She ruffles and tucks the children's clothing so that she may have more ironing to do, and cooks many more different dishes for the table than is at all necessary for wholesomeness, thus making herself much more work in this direction. Better spare yourself, housemother, even though your family live simply. How much more pleased will husband and children be to see mother look fresh and tidy than to see her heated and tired—too worn out to enjoy the dainty repast she has worked so hard to serve. Some day they will miss you when it is too late, if you give yourself no care.

TOMMY AT HOME IN FASCINATING EGYPT

A British soldier writes from Alexandria: The soldier of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force is a favored individual. During the day the sun smiles serenely upon him and life throbs with color. At night the moon bathes with a cold light the mysterious grey shapes of a fanciful landscape, and the stars scintillate with a brilliance unknown to the man at home. Be his surroundings grim or gay, the charm of the tropical night creeps into and permeates his being. This is especially the case in Egypt, where many of our soldiers find a haven of rest and quiet to recover from their wounds.

Near Alexandria, on a strip of desert, covering the cliff tops and overlooking the sea, clustered in hospital encampment. Long-gowned natives moved silently to and fro, their dusky faces making delightful blots of color in the staring areas of white and yellow. The building consisted of an awning of rushes matted together and propped up by long wooden poles. It was fenced off by a narrow strip of the same matting. Dusk settled down as the long, intricate details concerning the new arrivals were entered on a large sheet of cardboard by a native orderly. There was an extraordinary stillness in the air; and I could not help feeling that the curtains of the far corner would be pulled aside to reveal a solemn-visaged Egyptian deity. The encampment looked down upon a long strip of beach, lit up by an occasional electric light. The sound of laughter and the hum of many voices wafted across the still night air.

A precipitous, scrambling path took me past a gaunt wooden building which I made out to be a boathouse. The beach was a tumbling chaos of color. The tumult of voices was softened by the gentle sound of the surf. Arabs, Soudanese, Egyptians, and representatives of almost every European country thronged along the shore. Pretty French girls, in white summer frocks, laughed and chatted gaily. A group of Mohammedan ladies in black draperies, and their faces hidden behind a dark mask were wading ankle deep in the sea. A solmen Egyptian soldier, dressed in khaki and a fez, and grasping a rifle, paced up and down. Australian troopers trotted slowly amongst the crowd. Wounded soldiers in Egyptian hospital garb wandered aimlessly to and fro. The clatter of many different tongues blended joyously.

Native hawkers, with baskets of nuts, pomegranates, cakes and apples, shouted what they had to sell in a monotonous sing-song voice, always prefixing the article with a "very good, very nice!" The Tommies made themselves quite at home amongst the crowd. A number of them heroically struggled to make themselves understood to admiring nymphs, others joined in a romp with eager and joyful youngsters. It was a perfect night. The sea was a deep, deep blue; the air was soft and warm; little white sails bobbed up and down out at sea, and the lights of a distant steamer twinkled in the blue. Fresh from scenes of violence and bloodshed, never did a scene appear to be so tranquil or so happy as the tented hospital when I retraced my steps.

PIGEONS AS SCOUTS

The Rival to the Aeroplane Invaluable in This War

A harmless appearing pigeon flying over the trenches may be as dangerous to the safety of the army as the fastest scouting aeroplane. In a copy of the Popular Science Monthly appeared a timely description of how the carrier pigeon often carries a tiny camera fastened to its breast, and how it takes thirty photographs during a flight of six miles.

"Last of all," says the writer, "in the revival of methods and instruments used in the warfares of medieval times and even of antiquity comes word that pigeons, the carriers of intelligence in times of stress in remote eras, are used as photographers of the positions of the enemy. It is a strange medley, the airship, the last and most daring invention of the man's brain, rising in the early dawn to search out and photograph the foe's movements, and the graceful pigeon, so frequently mentioned in the stories of early days, soaring, perhaps at the same moment, to act as an aerial scout.

The "Balkanzug"

German newspapers are full of the new "Balkanzug," the train which has started to run between Berlin and Constantinople. One section of the train runs from Berlin via Breslau to Budapest, another from Berlin via Dresden, a third from Munich and Vienna. All three sections link up at Galanta, near the Hungarian capital. The journey from the Kaiser's capital to the Sultan's takes forty-eight hours, and the train runs twice a week in each direction. The cars have the word "Balkanzug" in large German letters painted on them, and the instructions to passengers inside the cars are in German, Hungarian, Bulgarian and Turkish.

Beer Was Plentiful On Board the Ponga

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Feb. 8.—Aboard the German sea raider Ponga which the Germans insist is the Moewe, food was very scarce, but beer was plentiful. This became known to-day from the Germans aboard the Appam.

In less than two weeks since the Ponga slipped out of the Kiel Canal on New Year's Day, the German crew and the prisoners aboard, taken from British ships that had been sunk, were eating greasy soup in which floated occasional beans and peas and hard bread without butter.

But the stock of beer seemed very large—large enough, in fact, to permit its unlimited sale to the prisoners at five cents a bottle.

NO SUCH DENSE SMOKE FROM PAPER AND LUMBER

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 8.—Hon. G. P. Graham, who was in town for the week-end, and who was in the House of Commons when fire broke out, when asked whether he thought the fire was the work of an enemy, replied: "Well, it may have been accidental, but it strikes me that newspapers and lumber could never produce the volume and density of smoke that roared through the corridors a few seconds after the fire was discovered."

Mr. Graham said Hon. Mr. Burrell's office door leads right into the reading-room, where the blaze started, and in order to escape he had to fight his way through smoke and flames. Had it not been for his pluck he surely would have been overcome.

FORCE PRISONERS TO MAKE SHELLS

PETROGRAD, Feb. 8.—The Germans have established a branch of the Krupp gun works at Shavli, in Kovno, at which a large part of the male population, as well as a number of French prisoners, are forced to work, according to statements made by German soldiers who have been taken prisoners by the Russians.

The movements of the German military forces in the Dviusk region seem to be disorganized and to lack all method, says the Russky Invalid; and this is ascribed by the newspaper to an insufficiency of German forces and to the bad state of the roads.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

GERMAN LOSSES TOTAL 60,000 IN FIERCE FIGHTING

600,000 GERMANS ARE SENT TO WEST FRONT

These Are Massed on Belgian Frontier, Following a Similar Massing of Men Recently Reported From the Northern Part of France—Gen. Sir Smith Dorrien Has Relinquished Command of British Forces in East Africa.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Reiterating the report that large numbers of German troops have been transferred recently to Northern France, the Amsterdam correspondent of the Central News telegraphs that it is reported from the Belgian frontier that 600,000 men have been sent to that front.

The message also says the Germans are planning to extend the Belgian port of Zeebrugge so that it will shelter more ships.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The first snow of the season fell in Paris yesterday and throughout Northern France and all trench country.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Gen. Sir H. L. Smith Dorrien has relinquished command of the British forces in East Africa owing to ill health.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Gen. Christian Smuts, Minister of the Interior, Mines and Defences for Union South Africa, has accepted the vacancy caused by the retirement of Gen. Smith Dorrien.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The French war expert of the Petit Journal says the next big offensive will be opened in the eastern theatre by the Russians.

AERIAL BOMBARDMENT.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Two German seroplanes bombarded the east coast towns of Ramsgate and Broadstairs yesterday afternoon. No damage was done.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—French troops captured a small section of German trenches in the Champagne district, but failed to recover their ground lost near Vimy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Private cables from Bermuda and other Atlantic islands, also tell of the capture of the German raider Reon by the British cruiser Drake.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 10.—Peel Liberals nominated W. G. Lowe to oppose Fallis, Conservative M.P.P., who resigned following the investigation into Government horse deals.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The Admiralty has not yet confirmed the story of the capture of the German raider Reon.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, President of the G.T.R., died in London yesterday.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 10.—Senator Cloran demands that the Germans be dismissed from the civil service.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A French air squadron dropped bombs on the Turkish forts in Samaria and other points in Asia Minor.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—An expected Zeppelin raid did not come last night.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The missing British liner Orissa has reached St. Nazaire in a crippled condition, the result of striking a rock.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Another group of crippled Canadian prisoners has been exchanged.

LUNG TROUBLE

Was never cured by dosing the stomach. The two organs are not connected. If they were, food swallowed would choke you. For lung and bronchial troubles you must breathe the cure; and you can't breathe cough syrups, tonics and syrupy compounds! Peps provide the rational treatment for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung trouble. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing.

On the face of it, now, does this not sound more reasonable than drugging the stomach? Try one box of Peps. A trial will cost you only 50c., and the good you will reap—well, health cannot be expressed in money terms. Be sure of the article when ordering from druggist or store. Just four letters

Enemy Loses Heavily in Fight For Vimy Heights

Germans Lost More Than the British Suffered in the September Offensive at Loos—German Air Raids on Ramsgate and Broadstairs

LONDON, Feb. 10.—German losses in the fierce fighting going on for nearly ten days for the Vimy Heights and along the Somme, south of Arras, have totalled 60,000, more than the British suffered in the September offensive at Loos, according to information received here to-day.

The fighting is proceeding to-day with great fury in a heavy snow storm according to latest despatches from Paris. The French are counter-attacking with great vigour near the Neuville La Folie Road and have regained practically all territory lost recently.

Around Frise artillery men on both sides are extremely active.

Despite persistent reports from Dutch sources, military critics here do not generally credit the rumours that the Germans are about to deliver a hard smash against the allied lines.

The best information available here indicates that there have been no large transfers of German troops from other fronts.

AIR RAIDS ON RAMSGATE.

LONDON, Feb. 10. — German air raids on Ramsgate and Broadstairs yesterday afternoon revived the demand for reprisals by the British government, but the Daily Sketch to-day urged the government not to retaliate with air attacks on German cities.

"We are fighting this war for a great cause and we must be careful not to muddy it," said the Sketch. "Who it was that first began the air raids would be quickly forgotten in history—this would simply have been a ruthless war on both sides."

RUSSIANS PIERCE AUSTRIANS' LINE IN GALICIA DRIVE

BERLIN, Tuesday, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I., February 10. —The Russians again are on the aggressive in Galicia, according to a statement by the Austro-Hungarian Army Headquarters, transmitted here. In one attack on an Austro-Hungarian advance infantry position northwest of Tarnopol the Russians temporarily succeeded in entering the point attacked, according to the statement, but soon afterwards were ejected.

The position in question was the object of repeated Russian attacks, according to the statement, which adds that, favored by clearer weather, the artillery along the whole northwestern or Russian front has been active.

TOWN KITCHEN A SUCCESS

Montclair Finishes First Year Serving Co-operative Meals.

MONTCLAIR, N.J., Feb. 8.—The Montclair Co-Operative Kitchen, which was organized by prominent persons in this town, has finished the first year of its existence, and although it has encountered some severe trials in that time, the Directors announce that it has passed the experimental stage and is now started on the sea of efficient service. The society has engaged a large building as headquarters and employed James Minor of New York as manager.

Don C. Bliss, Superintendent of the Montclair Public Schools, is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the society, and he says that a perfect delivery service is maintained for housekeepers who wish meals sent to their houses ready to serve.

The Gay Gordons Having a Rest After Trenches

Writing from "Somewhere in France," Philip Gibbs says:

All the village was full of Gordons, not downcast in their looks, although they were going back to that line where still, beyond the Boches and the barbed wire, in barren fields where only verim creeps, lie the bodies of young men who were their comrades, and to that line which is the target of high explosives and snipers' bullets, and lead from machine guns over the way. These kilted boys were whistling in the backyards of untidy little farmsteads and bungling into doorways of whitewashed cottages, and going down the street, with swinging kilts and mud-splashed knees and the swagger of splendid boyhood. I was sorry they had to go back to the dirty ditches over there.

And as only a looker on of war, I felt sorry again when I sat in the battalion headquarters with the young Gordons who were round the same deal table in the cottage parlor. Here were six of the handsomest young men whom even Scotland could send out of the flower of her youth—splendid in their animal strength, with strong, clean made limbs, and very fine and simple in their manners, like all Scottish gentlemen.

A Young Appolo.

At a table in Boulogne, a few days before a French girl leaned over to her father and whispered to him: "Look at that young officer. Is he not superb? Like the young god, Appolo!" This young Appolo sat, as a machine gun officer, eating shortbread with us, a typical young Scot, with his straight nose and grey eyes of the officers near him was a lusty fellow, dark haired and dark eyed, and with a curiously Georgian look about him, like a Beua Brummel in kilts, but with a jolly, roguish smile that was always flickerng about his lips, and an ironical way of speech. They spoke of their own Gordons—most of the time they spoke of their men with a kind of laughing wonder at their unconquerable spirit. There was one fellow who in the big push of September advanced to the German line playing a mouth-organ at a walk. At a walk (ye gods!) when shells were bursting overhead in a frightful tempest.

One company went forward to the song of the "Robert E. Lee" with slightly altered words to suit the Gordons. Afterwards in the trenches they had had a hard time, when water was often mixed with blood, but even then they did not lose their sense of humor. Said one bonny Scot, staring down a communication trench with a leer in his eye. "If they'd widen the ditch a wee bittie they could bring down the Grand Fleet for manoeuvres." In that September fighting the thoughts of all the men go back to those days the pipe-major of a Gordon battalion played his men forward, and then was struck below the knee. But he would not be touched by a doctor until the others had been tended. He was a giant of a man, and so heavy that no stretcher could hold him. So they put him on a tarpaulin and carried him back. Then he had his leg amputated and died. "A grand old man!" said one of the young officers.

My Highland friend was decorated for gallantry, and the others round the table had been through the great ordeal of that day with the same valor. But they spoke audacious jests about their desire to escape from the firing line to the safer dignity of the general staff and the best way to get invalided home, and the common sense of keeping a whole whole skin. "When in doubt," said the Beau Brummel in kilts, "always retire." For one of our first class fighting men this was a good joke, received with a roar of laughter."

Proud of their Chaplain.

They told several stories about the "padre" of the battalion—a parson who lives with them in the trenches, and keeps them all merry and bright, and is very useful in handing up the bombs when there is an attack on the line. (His Christian creed includes the killing of Germans, and he is not worried by the paradox.) After the great attack on the Hohenzollern redoubt, when our casualties were heavy, he went out beyond the trenches, and the barbed wire, to search for the body of a colonel of the Staffordshire who lay there in a crowd of dead. The German machine guns were busy, and there was no great distance from the German line to that clergyman who tramped through the darkness to the abandoned dead. But he collected a large number of identification disks, and found the body of the colonel, and brought him back.

As soon as this story had been told the chaplain himself came in and sat down to table with us. He was a bright-eyed, alert man of middle age, and seemed to be more of the soldier type than of the priest. "Are the men sorry to be going back to the line?" I asked. "Not glad," he said "but they make the best of it."

Other officers came from time to time. One of them who looked very ill and pale, said goodbye because he was going to be left behind in hospitals. That seemed to hurt him. The others were very cheery, but beneath all their jokes there was the underlying gravity of men who are on the eve of another ordeal in which life is a question of chance. I wished good luck to all the Gordons and went away.

Some people are so grasping that they take things not granted whether they want them or not.

A CHILD GETS CROSS, SICK AND FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if the breath is bad; stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

STOMACH ACTS FINE! NO INDIGESTION, GAS, HEARTBURN, ACIDITY

"Pape's Diapepsin" Fixes Sick, Sour, Upset Stomachs in Five Minutes

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

RUSSIA'S CRISIS IN MEN AND MUNITIONS IS NOW OVER

PARIS, Feb. 10.—"Russia's munitions crisis is now a thing of the past," said General Polivanoff, the Russian Minister of War, in an interview with Ludovic Naudeau, special correspondent of the Paris Journal in Russia.

"It is an unpleasant memory, but, fortunately, only a memory.

"With regard to the troops," the Minister said, "their spirit is excellent, thanks to the system of mobilisation by masses, which was put into force a few months ago, and to the doubling of the number of supply depots. At the present time we have a permanent reserve of young recruits, large enough to enable us to keep all the units up to their full strength without having to send to the front half-trained men. This is of great importance, for it has been observed that the morale of the soldier is apt to deteriorate when he sees his company, which originally had 250 or 300 men, reduced to a few dozen."

FRANCE STUDYING BUSINESS FUTURE

Association for Economic Expansion Considers What a Peace Treaty Should Contain

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The National Association for Economic Expansion today began an investigation for the object of determining what economic clauses the treaty of peace should contain in order to insure the future of French production. The inquiry may be conducted by means of a long list of questions which will be sent to merchants and manufacturers throughout France.

All phases of business—production, importation and exportation—will be investigated. The association requests among other things a reply to a question whether French development and production could diminish or suppress foreign importations, and if so, to what extent and under what conditions.

Sweetness of temper is not an acquired but a natural excellence; and therefore to recommend it to those that have it not may be deemed rather an insult than an advice.—Dr. Johnson.

ZAM-BUK CURED IN TWO MONTHS

After 2 Year Useless Treatment.

The healing power of Zam-Buk is so much greater than that of other ointments, that it has cured in many cases when all other ointments have failed. One such instance is that of Mr. Earle E. Gardiner, of Marquis, Sask., who writes: "For two years I suffered with a bad attack of saltrheum on my feet. During those two years I tried every known remedy but could find nothing that would cure the disease. Then I heard of Zam-Buk, and commenced using it. After the first few applications I noticed an improvement, and this encouraged me to continue. Although I had suffered for two years, after only two months' treatment with Zam-Buk I am completely cured."

Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poisoning piles, cold sores, chapped hands, chilblains, eruptions, etc. At all drug stores, 50c. box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

"GERMANS ABLE TO STAND POVERTY"

But Dr. Helfferich Sees end of Britain If England Becomes Impoverished

—BERLIN, Feb. 10, (by wireless to Sayville, L.I.)—"We Germans can stand it if we become poorer, since we will remain what we are now," said Dr. Karl Helfferich, Secretary of the German Imperial Treasury, in a supplementary section of his reply to the questions propounded by Sir Edward Holden, the English financier, as given out to-day by the Overseas News Agency.

"But if England should become impoverished that would mean the end of Britannia."

SINGLE MEN MUST ENLIST.

HAMILTON, Feb. 10. — Mayor Walters, new quartermaster with the new Tiger Battalion, has informed department heads that all single men in the city's service if eligible must enlist or give up their positions to married men.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Recommended

"My case was very serious and I was so sick that everybody expected my death any day. No suffering could ever be worse than what I had to endure.

I could feel at first the gravel passing through my bladder but now I am as strong as ever. I weigh about as much more than when I started to take Gin Pills.

I beg you to publish my letter so that people may know what Gin Pills had done for me. The first box relieved me a good deal, eight boxes were sufficient to cure me entirely, and bring me back to perfect health.

(Sgd.) ISIDORE THOMAS, Tillet Road Glen, N.B."

GIN PILLS are sold by all druggists, 50c. a box; six boxes for $2.50.

Former Residents of Peterboro' Celebrate Diamond Wedding

Mr. Thos. Calvert, of Ennismore, Attended Sixtieth Anniversary of His Parents' Marriage, Celebrated at Carberry, Man., on Jan. 22nd.

Referring to the celebration of the diamond wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Calvert, of Carberry, Manitoba., and formerly of Peterborough County, at which their son, Mr. Thos. Calvert, of Ennismore, attended, the Carberry News-Express has the following to say:

An event of very unusual interest to the town of Carberry and surrounding district took place on the 22nd day of January, when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Calvert, of Pleasant Point, celebrated their Diamond Jubilee; in other words celebrated the fact that for sixty long years, or since that date in the year of 1855, they have lived together as man and wife. Just what such an event must mean to those most immediately interested it is impossible for the majority of us to say, the vast majority of us having lived even less than this sum of years. It will serve as an opportunity for the people of Carberry and district to do honor to honourable and dignified old age, and to pay a tribute of respect to Mr. and Mrs. Calvert whose period of residence of nearly twenty-five years in this district has at all times commended the admiration and highest respect of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvert of Pleasant Point from their old home at Peterboro, Ont., in the year 1882 and at once settled in the land which still is the scene of their activities. Today, however, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert can, in no sense claim to have a corner on the family for it is not one of the best known on the Plain. No less than eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, all of whom are still living has been their contribution to the manhood of the nation, all of whom but one reside in this district, and all of whom deserve the many complimentary things that might be said about their honoured parents.

For some time Mr. Calvert has not been enjoying the best of health. Indeed at one time it was scarcely thought that he could weather the storm. Characteristically, however, he has recovered and apparently in the good providence of Almighty God may yet see the few years necessary to make the full century. This is our earnest hope to which we pray Mrs. Calvert too will share.

On Jan. 22nd at their home at Pleasant Point a reception to all their friends was held. As many as possible both from town and country were present.

Owing to the generally bad weather however, also because of the bad condition of the roads and the distance from town they felt it was impossible for many to come who other wise might wish to come and therefore it was purposed to hold on the Tuesday following or Jan. 25th in town in the Parish rooms of St. Agnes Church, a reception for the towns people Mr. and Mrs. Calvert are enthusiastic Imperialists, firmly convinced of the justice of our cause as an Empire in this war, fully conscious of the part that Canada must play in the war if the Empire is to be victorious. They therefore on this occasion of Diamond Jubilee did not wish for gifts of any kind to be sent to them, but rather suggest that at these two receptions an opportunity be given for a silver collection, the total proceeds to be for the benefit of the local I.O.D.E. and its worthy work.

THE I.O.D.S. RECEPTION.

The following reference to the reception at Carberry is appended:—

Considerable disappointment was felt on Tuesday when it was learned that Mr. and Mrs. Robert Calvert would be unable to atten the reception arranged by the I. O. D. E. in connection with the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert's wedding day. There was however, no one more disappointed than the venerable couple themsel, but their coming was prevented owing to the illness of Mr. Calvert and the weather was too cold for the long drive from Pleasant Point.

Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. D. Mills of Winnipeg and Mrs. D. Cathcart of Pratt were present and received from the large gathering the good wishes of all for the continued happiness and good health of their highly respected parents. A boquet of roses was presented to the bride, the presentation being made by Master Jamie Crowie with considerable military dignity. During the evening Mrs. Belt and Mrs. McCormack sang solos and refreshments were served. A wedding cake which was baked by the bride of 30 years was also distributed among the guests.

As announced, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert are enthusiastic Imperialists and they suggested that no presents be given them but that a silver collection be taken in aid of the Carberry branch I.O.D.E., The wishes were carried out and the local organization received from the reception in town $67.

At their home at Pleasant Point on January 22nd the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day Mr. and Mrs. Calvert held a similar reception to that held in town when friends from near and far were present. In connection with this reception a collection was taken amounting to $79 which was also donated to Carberry I.O.D.E.

Part of the collection, at the request of the bride and groom will be forwarded to the Belgian Relief fund.

To Mr. and Mrs. Calvert the News-Express joins with their large circle of friends in wishing for them many more years of health and happiness.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

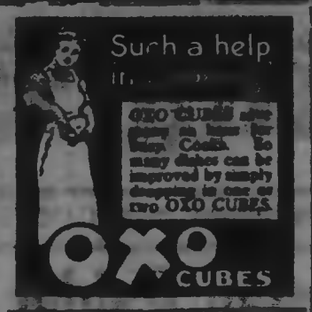
A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.



CAN'T FIND DANDRUFF

Every bit of dandruff disappears after one or two applications of Danderine rubbed well into the scalp with the finger tips. Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store and save your hair. After a few applications you can't find a particle of dandruff or any falling hair, and the scalp will never itch.

CRISCO
For Frying—For Shortening
For Cake Making

"Economy is the characteristic that insures welcome for Crisco in households of moderate means"

There are two kinds of economy, One is the economy that means paying out the least money.

The other is the economy that means getting the most for the money paid.

From both points of view it is substantial economy in cooking to use Crisco in place of butter and lard.

WHAT HAVE WE DONE TO-DAY

We shall do so much in the years to come,
But what have we done to-day?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give to-day?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we speak to-day?

We shall be so kind in the after-while,
But what have we been to-day?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought to-day?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
We shall feed the hungering souls of earth,
But whom have we fed to-day?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown to-day?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But here and now do we our task?
Yes, this the thing our souls must ask,
"What have we done to-day?"

OUR CHILDREN—BOYS AND GIRLS.

Speak gently and quietly ask them not to do again, and if the boy had the proper idea of the respect due his mother, he will respect your wishes. This kind of thing is only what may be expected of them, for boys will be boys, as long as the world stands, and there is a boy remaining in it. If the same offense is repeated by that selfsame boy, you need not feel discouraged, for the teaching of one day will not suffice for all.

It requires a great deal of perseverance to make a success of it. Some, of course, are a great deal worse than some others, but you need not expect to find saints in any of them.

Again, do not suffer the sister to censure them so severely, as is sometimes the case, just because she does not happen to inherit as much of the rebelliousness of old Father Adam as fell to the less fortunate brother. Impress the fact upon her that she has a great influence over him if she will only exercise judgment in exerting it for his good.

Teach the boy in turn to use kindness and politeness toward his sister. It will be the making of him, for, "as the twig is bent so will the tree be inclined."

Neglect this and you will doubtless bring up a man to make some poor woman miserable, as it is impossible for a woman to admire an ungallant and snappish man as for him to love a coarse mannered, slovenly woman.

Be neat and tidy in your own person, else do not expect this in your children, for children pick up the ways of their elders as "pigeons peas." It is a superior child indeed who naturally rises above his parents in point of pride and etiquette. He or she may appear so to a casual observer, but rest assured, loose training eventually tells.

As for the daughter, let me whisper softly, mother, do not for the sake of the love you bear, rush her unto the matrimonial market at least before she is out of her teens. She is but a child as yet, and one child is not capable of assuming the care of another.

If a man wishes to hold the respect and love of the woman he has married, he must show her consideration and sympathy. It requires just as much brain force, just as much hard work, to be a good home maker as a man expends in the outside world. Some men fail to understand how dear little acts of kindness and consideration are to the hearts of their wives. The good wife struggles each day to cater to the husband's wishes and comfort, placing self in the background, and the husband, possibly, is grateful enough to refrain from criticism, but he allows her to take it for granted that he appreciates all she does for him. What she needs is spoken words of praise; real approval shown in acts and words is an elixir to the wife. Is there not something very beautiful and effective to be seen when we meet a wife and mother rising superior to her domestic troubles and overcoming the petty trials encountered in every home and endeavouring to make that home cheerful and happy? And is it not likewise beautiful when the husband comes to her assistance? There is found in these united homes an indulgence and repose that cannot be obtained elsewhere. The great woman and the average woman need alike the loving and unselfish help of the husband in the work of home making.

* * *

Have you done a real kind or saving deed to anybody to-day? Are you in the habit of doing such deeds whenever a chance offers? Are you on the lookout for such opportunities?

We often think the very rich must be very happy, but riches bring neither happiness nor content. The most perfect serenity is found with those who have learned to limit their desires, rather than with those who have unlimited means of gratifying their desires. To possess a home and those in it who love us, to have health and money enough to satisfy our actual wants—these are the elements absolutely necessary to a contented life. The man who has a field to plow and plant has a better chance for health and happiness than the man who seeks, by golf, and other diversions, to get the exercise and development that the Lord meant he should obtain by labour.

Freedom can never be the settled possession of a craven-hearted people, nor can spiritual peace be the sure reward of material prosperity. —Rev. Dr. Wallace Williamson.

FORCED TO DIG OWN GRAVES

Bulgarians Are Committing Horrible Atrocities in Serbia.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A despatch from Milan to the Daily Telegraph says that the racial hatred between the Serbians and Bulgarians has become greatly intensified.

The Bulgarians, it is reported, have committed horrible atrocities, not even respecting Red Cross ambulances of the neutral states.

Serbian wounded have been flung out of the hospitals and abandoned on deserted roads where thousands have perished from starvation and cold.

Mohammedan irregulars are ravaging Serbian villages and committing all kinds of cruelties on old men and maidens. Fearful massacres, it is said, have taken place and the Serbians are being entirely annihilated.

In some districts wholesale arrests are made by the Bulgarians, who have forced their prisoners to dig their own graves before being shot. Only 500 prisoners remain alive.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Atmospheric Delusion

When Ned Pike, cowboy, rode up to the ranch of Franklin Dolbeare on the evening of the 10th of October, 1880, he found trouble in the household. Dolbeare was a consumptive who had gone from the east with his wife and two little children to live in Colorado in the hope of regaining his health. The cause of the trouble was Jim Newell. That's all any one ever knew about it. Why Newell was bent on killing Dolbeare was a secret that neither gave out. Anyway every one sympathized with Dolbeare, first, because he was a pleasant, mild-mannered man; second, because he was sick, and, third, because he had the loveliest wife in the world and two of the prettiest children. Pike, who had been sent for by Mrs. Dolbeare, found that lady waiting for him in the living room.

"Ned," she said, "Newell has written Frank a letter saying that he will shoot him on sight unless he consents to a more regular way of meeting. I got the letter, opened it and haven't said anything to Frank about it. For heaven's sake try and get rid of Newell without letting Frank know. In his condition he isn't able to think about it, much less stand up and fight."

"It wouldn't be fight. It would be murder," said Pike.

"Can't you do something?"

Pike took some tobacco from his pocket, rolled a cigarette, lighted it, gave a few thoughtful puffs and said:

"How long has Newell been up here?"

"He came yesterday."

"Ever been in these parts before?"

"Not that I know of."

A few more deliberate puffs.

"Just you don't worry, Mrs. Dolbeare, and don't say anything to anybody. I'll see what can be done."

With that he went out, mounted his horse and rode away. Later, after making inquiries as to where Newell might be found, he rode up to an adobe house where he saw his man sitting on the porch.

"Mr. Newell?" he asked.

"Yes?" said the other, with a slight start and placing his hand where he could more easily grasp his revolver.

"I've got a message for you from Franklin Dolbeare. He'll meet you tomorrow morning just before sunup."

"All right. When? Where?"

"You stayin' here?"

"Yes."

"Well, you start from here with one six shooter at 5 o'clock exactly and walk up the road. On the way you'll meet your man with another six shooter. You can crack away as soon as you like. He'll do the same. Is that satisfactory?"

"Yes; that suits me as well as any way."

Late that night Pike rode up to the ranch and asked Mrs. Dolbeare for a suit of her husband's clothes.

She gave him what he wanted with anxious inquiry in her face, but asked no questions. Pike gave her no information. Before daylight the next morning he had shaved off his beard and put on Dolbeare's suit. Then he drew his sombrero over his eyes, looked at the clock, examined his revolver and started at a slow pace down the road.

It was a cloudless, crisp autumn morning. The altitude was 7,000 feet above sea level, and the neighboring peaks stood out clear cut against the slowly lighting sky. Presently the cowboy squatted behind a bush at the side of the road, waited and watched. Ten minutes later Newell turned a bend and appeared plainly in sight. Pike waited. Newell came on. Suddenly Pike left the bush and appeared in the road. The moment Newell saw him he raised his revolver and fired, but without effect. Then he fired two more shots, and as he saw his enemy still advance unharmed he appeared to be astonished. But at that moment Pike fired a shot. This drew another from Newell, making four. Pike fired two shots in succession and Newell fired one.

Pike now had three shots in his revolver to Newell's one. Pike stopped and appeared to be taking a deliberate aim. His enemy, fearing he would this time surely be hit, fired his last shot.

Then Pike, who had been walking slowly, increased his pace. Newell, throwing away his empty revolver, put his hand to his hip, drew another and began a rapid fusillade.

"The bound!" muttered Pike between his teeth.

It was evident that Newell had lost his head. It was not surprising that he should. He had fired nearly a dozen shots, any one of which he felt sure when he fired it would bring down his man. Yet that man kept advancing, apparently getting no nearer. But presently the shots began to whistle about Pike's head, though so great was his enemy's agitation that none of them told. Suddenly Pike stood still, took deliberate aim and shot his man through the forehead.

While Mrs. Dolbeare was dressing for breakfast she was told that Pike wished to see her. Throwing on a wrapper, she went to meet him with a pale face and inquiring eyes.

"It's all right, Mrs. Dolbeare," he said.

"How? What is it?"

"Oh, it was easy enough. When these chaps come up here they don't know anything about our distances. They don't calculate on the rarefaction of the atmosphere. When they see a barn a mile off they think they're going to walk right in at the door."

"But Newell? What of him?"

"Oh, he's dead! I shot him this morning before sunup."

BIRDS IN WAR TIME

Strictest Neutrality Observed by Feathered Inhabitants

The tumult of arms and the noise of artillery do notm ake the same impression on all kinds of birds. Whereas some do not seem at all exercised nor affected, others are terrified and take flight (says a writer in a Swiss Humane journay).

In the north of France, in the midst of the horrors of battles, blackbirds stay in the bushes or hedges, practicing the strictest neutrality. The lark delights the combatants with his morning song. A pair of swallows made their nest in the heart of the trenches, where, due to the humanity of the soldiers, they were not allowed to want for anything. The starling and the gray bunting have no fear of the war.

On the contrary, the yellow bunting, the titmouse, the chaffinch, and the goldfinch, have almost entirely disappeared. The patridges and the buzzards fly with all the strength of their wings to escape bombs and bullets.

England has become a place of refuge, a sort of terrestrial paradise for these fugitive birds. But there also they may be reached at times by the flying projectiles.

STEAL $500 MUFF OF INJURED WOMAN

Automobile Accident Where Name of Victim is Not Disclosed Has Accompanying Theft Puzzling Police.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The mysterious theft of a muff valued at $500 following an accident in which one of two women was injured by an automobile at Riverside Drive and Seventh street, is puzzling several detectives who are working upon the case. The identity of the injured woman, who was the owner of the muff, was not revealed, but she was later driven to a fashionable address in West Eighty-seventh Street.

The two women, one of middle age and the other about twenty-one years old, had alighted from a motor bus bound southward, when an automobile owned and driven by Ernest Ball, of No. 321 West Fifty-fifth street, appeared. Mr. Ball sounded his horn as he approached the crossing, but the elder of the two women apparently failed to hear the warning and before Mr. Ball could bring his automobile to a halt the woman was struck and thrown several feet.

She was unconscious when picked up and carried into the vestibule of an apartment building in the vicinity. Among those who witnessed the accident was Mrs. J. Taylor, who told Policeman Curristine, of the West Eighty-seventh street police station, that she was connected with Hahnemann Hospital. Mrs. Taylor picked up the muff belonging to the injured woman and put it to one side as she assisted in reviving her. When search was made for the muff it had disappeared.

The injured woman, who had suffered severe contusions, refused to give her name or address and her companion was too hysterical to give any information to the police. A taxicab was summoned, and both women were driven to an apartment in West Eighty-seventh street. The theft of the muff is being investigated by the police.

PREMIER SALANDRA IS ITALY'S LEADING MAN

Man Who Made Harmony Throughout the Country—Public Flocked to His Side When War Began

If Italy seemed for many months to vacillate, shrinking upon the verge of war, it was because the nation was undergoing great internal changes. Austria's declaration of war against Serbia came as a shock to the leaders who had the interests of Italy at heart. It showed that Italy had been betrayed—that the Triple Alliance was not meant for peace, but for war, and that Italy had been for thirty years a dupe of the Teutonic allies.

The cloudburst of war revealed at the same time the rotten condition of the country's naval and military defences. For fifteen years the political dictator, Giolitti, who recently attempted at the eleventh hour to overthrow the Salandra Government, had allowed the army and navy to fall into decay. In 1914 Italy would have been helpless in the hands of an enemy; her magnificent preparation at the present time is the result of gigantic effort and large scale reorganization.

Another great transformation has been wrought. The Italian people, lulled for thirty years into indifference toward foreign affairs, while Germany and Austria controlled the nation's European policies, has been roused to a realization of the situation. A war on the side of the Germanic power would never have been popular; but it took nine months of education to unite the nation in its recent demonstration in favor of Premier Salandra's war program and against Giolitti's policy of continued neutrality.

A Striking Figure

These changes are the achievements of a man who represented a minority party, and whose training had been more academic than political. Premier Antonio Salandra is the dominating figure in Italy to-day, but he became a political factor as the result of a party compromise. After what would have been in time of peace a temporary overthrow of the machine that ran Italy for years—the Giolitti organization—he was picked by Giolitti as a popular man who could easily be controlled. His actions have belied expectations. His course has been fearless.

Dr. Salandra's friends and admirers scarcely expected to see him the great man he has revealed himself to be. Physically he is a small, somewhat portly gentleman—not particularly impressive at first sight. His manners, however, are courtly and distinguished, and he has that winning personality, openhearted and free from stiffness or condescension, that makes friends. The sincerity of his character holds them.

In his long career in the Chamber of Deputies—he was born in 1853 and has been a member since the earliest legal age, thirty—he has always been marked by the clearness of his insight. But he was a mild man, apparently content with his university work, his writing, and a dignified support of what was decent in politics.

Opposed to this mild-mannered scholarly little man was the fierce and terrible figure of Giovanni Giolitti as the villain in the drama and dictator of Italian internal affairs.

Won Hands Down

Giolitti, backed by the powerful German and Austrian interests, made a desperate attempt in May to overturn the Ministry. He had allied himself with the extreme Socialists, who were opposed to war. As he still controlled a majority of the members of the Chamber, he was confident of success, but he had reckoned without his host.

The Premier postponed the opening of the Parliament and, by handing in his resignation to the King, brought the issue before the people. The result was little short of a revolution, and the old dictator was compelled to flee for his life, only escaping from Rome under police protection. The Salandra Ministry stayed in, and the war measures were sustained.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Prohibition Fallacy Exploded

A FAVORITE slogan of the Prohibitionists is that liquor is the chief cause of poverty. Remove the drink, they say, and sobriety and thrift will take the place of drunkenness and pauperism.

Facts and figures, absolutely incontrovertible, have, of course, again and again been marshalled to show that Prohibition States are poorer and less sober than License States; and as to nations and races, there are on the Prohibition side the Turks, the Arabs, a few Malay Aborigines, and so on; but these do not seem to be adduced as shining examples by our friends, the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred.

Drastic Legislation versus Education

It is beginning to be seen, however, that sobriety, with its attendant blessings, is to be brought about, not by drastic legislation, but by education in its widest sense. This truth is emphasized in the Report for 1915 of The Children's Aid and Protective Society of the Oranges, N. J., which says: "The Society firmly believes that its work along educational lines among the families with which it deals from year to year has been a prime factor in reducing intoxication."

So Frances E. Willard, late President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, says:

"The only way to have a sober people is to strike at the root of the evil which causes inebriety. Poverty, many hours of labor, the nerve-strain under which men toil, the anxiety from the insecurity of their jobs: remove all these, and in a short time the demand for a stimulant would cease and drunkenness would be unknown."

Prohibition Crusaders Should Study the Question

In the same strain Mary E. Garbutt, Women's Christian Temperance Worker, points out that if a man is employed only a part of his time and his wages are low, poverty must as a matter of fact follow, whether he drinks or not; while former Mayor "Tom" L. Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, uttered a wise truth when he said: "There are more people who drink because they are miserable than there are people who are miserable because they drink."

The difficulty with most of these Prohibitionist crusaders—although one does not like to say so—is that they are ill-informed, having studied these questions only superficially and only from one side. To get down to bed rock requires time, patience, and honest research; but it is so easy and pleasant to make sensational speeches and hurl denunciations at opponents amidst the applause of sympathetic audiences.

Study up the question and get to know something about it—that is what these self-appointed reformers ought to do.

Suez Canal is Safe, Egypt Loyal, Says Mr. Watters

During a recent interview Enver Pacha, the Turkish Minister of War, concluded with the following statement:—"We intend not only to make the Suez Canal useless to the British but we intend to sweep every Englishman out of Egypt and then annex the country."

As so much territory has already been occupied by the Teutons military forces with the object of creating political effect in the Near and Far East, it may be opportune to demonstrate some of the difficulties which attend a consummation of this nature. It is obviously impossible for the Turkish army to attempt this undertaking, which could only be initiated through the military and political co-operation of Germany, together with such native assistance as an internal revolt.

It is well recognized by those who have had military or official experience in Egypt, and, through residence, an intimate association with the natives that of the different spheres where the Teuton propaganda, backed by money and intrigue, has succeeded in exercising its influence as with Turkey and Bulgaria, Egypt for many years has undergone neither change of public opinion nor with the exception of the recent deposed Khedive, Abbas, any defection.

Any minor attempt in that direction of "modern little Egypt," confined to Cairo, have been quickly nipped in the bud. For years the industrial and political aspirations of German settlers in Egypt have been superseded by British, French and Greek interests, the many important industries in the cities in the hands of the Mengovitchs Melachrinos among others, may be said to represent a continuous business chain from the Mousky, in Cairo to the former capital of the gallant Baggara, at Khartoum, of which the English and American hotel and tourist traffic represent no inconsiderable part. The modern Arab mentality is now a practical one. Racial prejudices have, as in India, yielded to the civilizing influences of industry to an extent that the German usage of the "Cross versus Crescent" propaganda has frequently met the native response of 'Ineshi' (go away).

From any standpoint, political and economic, the emancipation of Egypt and the Soudan has been a phenomenal and permanent success, and is regarded as the salvation of the country by the Fellaheen, formerly under the influence of Turkish misrule and later depleted through Levantine usury. More recently the inestimable benefits to agriculture, with increased prosperity derived through the wonderful Nile Barrage, at Assouan, erected by English contractors, have made their influence felt throughout Upper Egypt, the Soudan and as far as Livingston's land, at Victoria Nyanza. So long as portions of that territory remained in the hands of the Mahdi, execrated for his misrule, persecution and ill-treatment of the natives, and especially after the unfortunate termination of the Gordon expedition, British prestige and influence was at its minimum; but, subsequent to the Omdurman campaign by General Kitchener, with the abolition of slavery throughout the Soudan, followed the establishment of business and educational institutions, with many other reforms at Khartoum, a notable change has been effected.

Not a little of this has penetrated to the White Nile and as far as Abyssinia, which if still a primitive country, is nevertheless keenly alert to political and military influences, ever in a constant state of preparedness and recently of such pro-English tendencies that it is safe to assert it would not be likely to submit to further Teutonic neighboring or territorial aggressiveness. The recent lesson, with its dangers, to effete Turkey of so-called German efficiency, ultimately leading to complete absorption and uprooting the most cherished Oriental traditions, has not been lost on the astute and alert susceptibilities of the government of Menelik's land. Although the ramifications of the mysterious native society known as the Senussi extending throughout Morocco to Egypt, which is without adequate military equipment or organization, may be felt in isolated zones, as the oasis of Sieva, some 600 miles in the Sahara Desert.

From time immemorial different nomadic tribes, as the Bedouin, still continue to exercise, even in times of peace, a constant banditti menace on both sides of the Suez Canal, as travellers in Syria to resorts such as Damascus experience through the need of an armed escort. With the elimination of the powerful Dervish factions the activity of the native tribesmen now represent an insignificant quantity. The population other wise throughout Egypt are loyal and satisfied with the results of British protection.

From the gateway to the East at Gibraltar the Italian occupation of Tripoli, with British possessions at Malta and Cypress in the Mediterranean, the open door to which through the Suez Canal concerns the vital maritime interests of Japan, which have already suffered through Teuton submarine activities, have created an attitude of "watchful waiting," not only on the part of her navy but her army as well.

The allied control of the Hellenic peninsula now leaves but two vulnerable points on the Suez Canal zone, between Port Said and Ismailia, which have been made impregnable, and an invasion through the great salt lakes into the Gulf of Suez is likewise impossible from the desert. It would appear as if German diplomacy, evidenced by the prolonged intrigues in Turkey, which in the recent Balkan wars has been manifested by Krupp, together with the Kaiser's cultivation and his triumphant procession in Palestine with a lavish display of militant pageantry, have created a certain impressive effect on Oriental sentiment, but it has been confined to Turkey in Asia.

The complete military conquest of Arabia, with access through Teheran to India, has ever been regarded by military experts as impossible, and although across the canal the bullet marks of Napoleon's troops are still to be seen on the time worn face of the Sphinx, the danger of Krupp metal reaching so far is remote. The genius of Bismarck, who directed the successful Franco-Prussian campaign of 1870, would never have attempted what the French so signally failed in without adequate transportation, as the completion of the railway across the desert through Palestine to the Egyptian frontier near Khulas, in the Suez Canal zone, or that further north from Aleppo to Bagdad.

It does not seem probable that the British and Egyptan standards which are seen together from the historic citadel in Cairo, immortalized by the Mamaluke native warriors to the Governor's Palace at Khartoum, and symbolical of protection and confidence, will be disturbed, despite the ominous threats of Enver Pacha, whose British antipathy ill compares with his predecessors. It is more probable that the dream of German and Turkish occupation of Egypt will remain as represented recently in the New York Herald (the European editor of which may be seen in every hotel and club throughout Egypt), "An Oriental Mirage."

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Even Hospital Treatment For Kidney Disease Failed

Well-Known Commercial Traveller Says That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Undoubtedly Cured Him

News of his recovery from kidney disease will be welcomed by the many friends of Mr. L. D. Griffin throughout the lower townships and the adjoining district of the United States.

Mr. Griffin has travelled this section for 35 years and what he says will be accepted, as proven by all who know him best.

He tells in his letter how relief was obtained by treatment in Sherbrooke and Montreal hospitals, but the old kidney trouble returned again and again until by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure was effected. As he says, these pills "undoubtedly did the work."

Mr. L. D. Griffin, Bulwer, Compton County, Quebec, writes:—"I can add one more statement of kidney trouble cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For about twenty years I was bothered more or less with the kidneys, then the disease became worse and I was sick in bed for one year, took doctor's medicine to no avail, and on his advice went to Sherbrooke Hospital, where I was benefited, but the old trouble returned, and I tried a Montreal hospital. Got a little better, but the help was only temporary, and I was soon bad again.

"On the advice of a friend, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I now thank that friend for to-day I am as free from kidney disease as I ever was in my life. I owe the cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for they undoubtedly did the work. I am 68 years old, and have spent 35 years as a traveller, calling on the drug trade. Everywhere I am told that Dr. Chase's medicines are the best sellers and give the best satisfaction of any medicines on the market. Shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to my cure if people care to write me."

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

This Home Made Mixture Darkens Gray Hair and Removes Dandruff.

To a half pint of water add:
Bay Rum . . . . . 1 oz
Orlex Compound . . . . . a small box
Glycerine . . . . . 1-4 oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them your self. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used.

A half pint should be enough to darken the gray hair, rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, and relieves itching and scalp diseases. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

EPISCOPAL PASTOR IN ANTI-SALOON FIGHT

He Can Speak from Pulpits of His Own Church, which his Predecessors Could Not Do.

Ready to begin a hard fight against the liquor traffic, the Rev. Dr. Jas. Empringham, until recently rector of St. Paul's Church, Syracuse, N.Y., yesterday morning took charge of the offices of the Metropolitan District of the Anti-Saloon League at 156 Fifth Avenue. The new Superintendent is an Episcopalian clergyman, and gave up a large salary to work for half the amount in the interest of local option in this State. He received hundreds of letters and telegrams of congratulation upon his arrival in the city.

He is the first Episcopal rector to serve as Superintendent of the League and as such will be received into the pulpits of his faith in this diocese. His predecessors were Protestants.

The league received yesterday a communication from the Rev. Frederick Courtney, President of the Church Temperance Society, an Episcopalian organization, and rector emeritus of St. James' Church. The Bishop said he heartily congratulated the league in adding to its staff so distinguished a man. He added:

It is to me the more satisfactory because, being one of our own clergy, the league can now have its cause pleaded in the pulpits of the Episcopal Church, many members of which I hope will be rallied to its support.

I take advantage of this opportunity to express the hope that your advocacy of the Optional Prohibition Referendum bill may result in its being passed. In this country, where the rule of the majority is supposed to be universal, it is monstrous that the large cities are robbed of their right on this question of prohibition.

"My purpose," said the Rev. Dr. Empringham, "is, as far as possible, to bring the well-tried methods of the league to the sympathetic comprehension of intelligent, right-minded people, whose thought has as yet not been challenged on the liquor question. Many men who use alcoholic beverages in moderation, who will not admit that they are prohibitionists, nevertheless do not want the liquor traffic to dominate politics. There are thousands of influential men in this district who will enthusiastically support the Optional Prohibition Referendum bill when they understand how simple and how fair it is.

"My main activity will be to speak in the churches and at special gatherings during the week, and in personally enlisting men of affairs to aid the work.

"There are Assembly districts and some Senatorial districts in New York City where the people will stand squarely for legislators who vote in favour of permitting them to settle the liquor question in their respective neighbourhoods. It will be my duty to help in these campaigns.

"I have some very good friends in the liquor traffic, and I am advising them to get out while the getting is good. In New York we are preparing the way for national prohibition by building an organization and developing a public sentiment with the Optional Prohibition Referendum bill as a specific issue. There is no doubt in my mind that more than half the area of the city of Greater New York will vote dry under the provisions for single election districts. The greater part of Brooklyn, most of the upper part of Manhattan and some neighbourhoods in the other sections of the city will utilize this feature.

"The new Superintendent already has many invitations to speak in Episcopal churches, as well as those of other denominations.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will soon act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritated, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

SENATE BORROWS MACE.

Will Use Legislature's Symbol of Power Until New One is Made.

OTTAWA, Feb. 10. — The Canadian Senate met Tuesday night under emergency conditions in a newly crimsoned "Red Room" at the Victoria Museum. Canada's Upper House was scheduled to meet at three o'clock in the afternoon, but the lack of the Mace, that emblem of Constitutional authority, which had been loaned to the Commons to replace the one lost in the Parliament Building fire, necessitated postponement until eight o'clock in the evening when the Commons was not in session and the Mace was thus available.

In the meantime the Mace of the Ontario Legislature has been secured, pending the manufacture of a new one for the Commons and both Houses will be permitted to foregather without further delay.

Would Not Go There.

Pat and Mike were obliged to halt their heavily loaded carts to make way for a funeral. Gazing at the procession Pat suddenly remarked—"Mike, I wish I knew where I was goin' to die. I'd give five hundred pounds to know the place where I'm goin' to die."

"Well, Pat, what good would it do if yez knew?"

"Lot's," said Pat. "Shure, I'd never go near that place."

The price of butter holds steadily to 32 cents locally. On the Toronto market an attempt was made to raise it, but it has fallen back again. We are paying as much for dairy butter in Peterborough as New Yorkers are paying for the best creamery butter while up in the city (?) of Young's Point you can very likely get all the butter you want for 25 cents. Funny, isn't it?

One indirect cause of "hen fruit" declining in price just now may be attributed to the failure of dealers across the line to create a 'corner' in eggs. For several days they have been unloading huge quantities at 18c to 17c what cost them at least 18c to 20c to put in. Such is the price of failure.

On the local market, Saturday, eggs were a little easier in tone, quotations being 32 to 35 cents, the majority of women asking 33 and 34 cents.

We are informed that very little cheese is being consumed in Canada; soldiers are not eating cheese like they used—at least our soldiers are not—and ordinary people do not relish paying high prices. However, the heavy export demand is responsible for the high levels.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush.	$1.15
Oats	40c
Barley	58c
Peas	$1.50 to $2.00
Buckwheat	70c
Rye	80c
Shorts, ton	$26.00
Bran, ton	$25.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.75
Baled hay, ton	$20.00 to $22.00
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

Western wheat has declined a little. Winnipeg No. 1 Northern at Toronto, sold at $1.24, a decline of 3 cents from last week.

Toronto prices on coarse grains are as follows. Oats, 49 to 50 cents per bushel, a rise of 3 cents over last week, or 7 cents in three weeks. Barley, 66 to 68 cents, a rise of 1 cent. Rye, at 88 to 90 cents. Buckwheat, 80 cents, peas, $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel.

Canada's crop last year was a record breaker—the greatest ever. It totalled one billion bushels, of which over 376 millions were wheat. All told, Mr. Farmer would receive over 800 million dollars. (Where has it all gone?)

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

Toronto prices on seeds are:

Red Clover from	$8.00 to $12.00
Alsike	$5.00 to $7.50
Timothy	$1.00 to $3.50

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00 to $2.00
Apples, per barrel	$2.25 to $5.00

Cabbage, head	5c.
Cabbage, doz.	25c
Oranges	30 to 40c
Grapefruit, three for	25c.
Lemons, doz.	25c.

Potatoes are bringing a higher price in Peterborough than in Toronto—that is Ontario potatoes. A few New Brunswick No. 1 Delewares sold as high as $2.00 per bag, but the prevailing price was somewhat lower, ranging as low as $1.85 a bag. Ontario potatoes on the Toronto market are quoted $1.50 to $1.65 a bag. One York County man tried to capture $2.00, but failed, and had to take his "spuds" home again.

Meats and Hogs.

Beef	10c to 12c
Bacon, per lb.	28c. to 30c.
Ham	30c.

Mixed wood, 2 ft. per cord	$3.00
Ladders, ft.	20c

Lessened Production—Dearer Food

The splendid response to the recruiting campaign made by dwellers on the farm will have the effect of diminishing production, and a direct result will be an increase in food prices. One writer claims that if the war goes on it may be a common sight to see women working in the fields. In the Northwest railroad changes are taking place. These girls are taking the places of young men in offices and warehouses to allow them to enter on military duty or work on the farms.

There are always disappointments in breeding, but the man who studies the question and mates his stock according to the best laws of nature and experience, meets fewer of them than the careless breeder, who mates animals with little more in view than another calf or colt, as the case may be.

Coughed Almost All Night

WITH THAT DRY, TICKLING SENSATION IN HER THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Hiley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

THE GERMANS FAIL IN ANOTHER ATTACK AGAINST FRENCH POSITIONS

Heavy Artillery Duel Continues From Hill 119 to the Neuville-Thelus Road---Enemy Expelled by Grenade Fighting ---Three Hundred Austrians Killed and Several Field Guns Destroyed in an Explosion at Skoda.

CASUALTIES DENIED BY ADMIRALTY

PARIS, Feb. 10.—(French Offical Communique)—Germans launched another heavy attack against the French positions on the Neuville-LaFoll road last night but were repulsed at practically every point. The enemy succeeded in recapturing one mine crater.

"The heavy artillery duel continues from Hill 119 to the Neuville-Thelus road. We expelled the enemy by grenade fighting, and from some communication trenches west of LaFoli.

"South of the Somme we took fifty prisoners and two machine guns."

FIELD GUNS DESTROYED.

BUCHAREST, Feb. 10.—Three hundred Austrians were killed and several field guns destroyed in a recent explosion at Skoda, news of which was suppressed by Teutonic authorities.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—German report that bombs hurled by Zeppelins destroyed the British cruiser Caroline and two destroyers in the North Sea hasa been again officially denied by the Admiralty, which state there have been no casualties of British warships in the North Sea for months.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—All Rumanian reservists at Salonika have been ordered home immediately, and the Rumanian Government has appealed to the people to hoard their gold and deposit in the public banks.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Instructions from the British Foreign Office have been received by cable for Captain Harrison and sixteen officers of the liner Appam, captured by a German raider, to remain here. Arrangements had been made to send them back to England to-day on the White Star liner Baltic. This is taken to mean that Britain expects the Appam to be turned over to the British shortly.

ATHENS, Feb. 10.—Greece's decision to remain neutral was reaffirmed by Premier Skouloudis in addressing Parliament to-day. The Prime Minister declared that no moves of coercing however painful, could equal the disasters that would follow should Greece enter the war with either side.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 10.—A man wearing an army uniform was seen explaining what appeared to be maps of certain forts in Boston Harbour to those suspected of being German spies in an office in a Milk street building.

This is the latest development in the sensational report that secret service men were rounding a group of pro-Germans suspected of plotting against Canadian and American munition plants, and who had been making their headquarters in this city for at least the past month.

REPUDIATES RUMOURS.

OTTAWA, Feb. 10.—In admitting that he had received this week from a prominent Canadian in New York a letter warning him of the alleged contemplated German-American invasion of Canada, Sir Sam Hughes intimated he is not disposed to be dictated to by alarmist stories from the other side and thinks there is very little foundation for such stories.

AUSTRIA MUST EXPLAIN.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Austria must explain to the United States why one of her submarine commanders stopped the American ship Petrolite, a Standard Oil tanker, in eastern Mediterranean waters and helped himself to stores aboard.

In making this announcement to-day Secretary Lansing said that a request for explanation was not a "note," but he said also that "perhaps there may be demands made later."

The Provincial

War Tax May Be Increased

Deputation Wait Upon Premier Hanna With the Usual Result—"Consideration" is Promised to All Requests

THE WAR TAX

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—A deputation of the Ontario Municipal Association, led by President Bunnell of Brantford and Secretary Spence of Toronto, waited on Acting Premier Hanna and Provincial Treasurer McJarry today to present a number of resolutions passed at a recent meeting of the Association. The government promised consideration of all requests.

Mr. Hanna said that the government had not decided whether or not the provincial war tax would be confined to one mill on the dollar this year, but the matter would be taken up early in the coming season.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—Live stock receipts fair, trade active in some lines. Choice veal calves $7 to $8. Light ewes $6.25 to $6.50.

Will Lecture This Evening

Mr. W. E. Harper, of the Dominion Observatory, Arrived in the City To-day

Mr. W. E. Harper, who is a member of the staff of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, arrived in the city to-day at noon and was met at the station by His Worship Mayor Duffus, Rev. R. Pogue and Mr. T. C. Elliot. This afternoon Mr. Harper was shown through the Armouries, the Normal School and other points of interest throughout the city. At the meeting to be held this evening in the Sunday School room of St. Paul's Church, Mayor Duffus being otherwise engaged, has appointed Mr. D. O'Connell to represent him. He will extend to Mr. Harper a cordial welcome. Rev. Mr. Pogue will deliver the chairman's address, while Mr. Stratton will contribute a patriotic Scotch selection.

This evening Mr. Harper will lecture upon Nebulae, showing lantern slides of the latest photographs taken by the sixty-inch reflector at Mount Wilson. Everybody is invited to attend.

CURLING

Four rinks went to Bobcaygeon this morning for the Fitzgerald-Bottum trophy games. There was a man short in one rink.

An official communique from the Rink Committee states that the Kickers' Club is likely to report a casualty or two before long. One of the leaders has been strangely missing and the Club is in a critical way.

INQUIRY INTO OTTAWA FIRE IS NOW UNDER WAY

Col. Low Says the System of Ventilation Combined With the Extensive Varnishing and Use of Shellac Caused Rapid Spread of Flames

MR. PRINGLE'S ADDRESS

OTTAWA, Feb. 10.—"As to whether any enemy hand had anything to do with this or not it will be our duty to endeavour to find out. We have an instance in the United States where a special kind of liquid was thrown casually on a pile of papers and immune from detection, was so constituted that after lying there some time it caused combustion and fire. Whether any such means were used in this instance or not we will try to discover. We are at war. If we have been slumbering, and I do not say we have, then this fire should awaken us to the situation." The above words were uttered by R. A. Pringle, K.C., who, with Judge MacTavish, opened the enquiry into Parliament Buildings conflagration at 10.30 this morning. W. R. White, K.C., of Pembroke, will act as counsel. The hearing is being held in the Council Chamber of the City Hall.

Col. Smith, sergeant-at-arms, who has general charge of the building, in the witness box, said he was close to the chamber in the clerk's office when the fire broke out. He had immediately gone to his own office at the west end on the ground floor to get some papers and was met coming back by a heavy cloud of smoke.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 10.—Following is part of the statement to the press in regard to the Parliament Buildings fire issued to-day. "Colonel Roberts Low, the well known contractor, at the request of the government has been inspecting the ruins of the Parliament Buildings.

"His conclusions are most interesting and instructive. It appears that the system of ventilation, combined with the extensive varnishing and profuse use of shellac on the floors and woodwork seem to have furnished the basis of the rapid spreading of the flames. Colonel Low points out that the racks in the reading room and the walls thereof, were thick with varnish, a most inflammable material. The draft from the ventilators carried the flames all through the corriders, and it can be plainly seen that these so-called explosions were gasses igniting from varnishes with which the wood had been treated.

"Col. Low shares the opinion expressed by Senator Edwards the other day that the building can be restored in eight months or less."

Messrs. Gleis and Northrup, M. P's, who were in the reading room about the time the fire started, were also witnesses. They said that they did not recollect anybody smoking cigars or cigarettes in the library that evening, but they had seen members do so at other times.

TO-NIGHT'S GAMES IN THE CITY LEAGUE

There will be two games in the City League to-night, and a good bill of fare is assured. In the first game the mericans and East City teams will clash, while the two winners of last week, the Pennants and Bachelors, will come together in the second. Both games promise to be interesting. Billy Breen will referee.

HOCKEY

RETURNED SOLDIERS TO GET PREFERENCE IN CIVIL SERVICE

Resolution to That Effect Brought Up in House of Commons ---Technical Education of Soldiers---93rd Battalion Has Strength of 735---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—How Canada can best recognise the sacrifice of the men who have given their services to King and country in the existing struggle against tyranny was the important problem before Parliament at its short and businesslike session to-day. Mr. W. S. Middlebro, of North Grey, submitted a resolution setting forth that "in the opinion of the House in all future appointments to the civil service of Canada preference should be given to those properly qualified candidates who have served with the Canadian expeditionary forces in the present war." After discussion indicating the determination of a unanimous Parliament to adequately look after Canada's heroes, the debate was adjourned to permit of further consideration.

Mr. Middlebro declared the terms of his resolution to be a simple act of justice. He also wanted to have the fact advertised that those who now enlist will receive the preferential treatment. Since 1877 preferential treatment had been given in Great Britain to ex-soldiers and sailors in connection with appointments to the civil service. This course had also been followed in the United States after the civil war. In the various Provinces of Canada Commissions were now organized to find employment for returned soldiers. It was only proper that the Dominion should do its part.

Guarantee Provision For Families.

Hon. George P. Graham declared that the gallant men going to the front should have not only the best wishes of their country, but an assurance that their families were being provided for while they were fighting the country's battles. All walks of Canadian life had generously yielded their representatives to service. "No returned Canadian soldier shou'd ever be permitted to stand on the street corner and pass the hat," exclaimed Mr. Graham. The duty of Parliament was plain. It should give the first place to those who had made sacrifices. Heretofore men had won office by being political warriors. "Now," said Mr. Graham, "we have the chance to honour real warriors. Let us do it right. Let our soldiers feel that the State is behind them."

Technical Education of Soldiers.

Hon. Frank Oliver was of opinion that technical education for returned soldiers should be take up in a practical manner. Many men could thus be fitted for new employment.

Captain J. H. Burnham thought something ought also to be done for the men who had offered and not been accepted. There should be provision for families and dependents apart from pensions when a soldier was killed. Too often such were treated like poor relatives. He would have every soldier insured.

Dr. O. O. Alguire, Stormont, endorsed the principle of the resolution. He thought that in Government appointments consideration should be given not only to returned soldiers, but to those who had sent sons to the front.

Premier Mentions Pension Scheme.

Premier Borden gave the assurance that every possible consideration would be given to those who had gone to fight the battles of the Empire. He approved of Mr. Oliver's suggestion of doing something to assist disabled soldiers to fit themselves to earn a livelihood. Sir Robert intimated that a new pension scheme for disabled soldiers and dependents of those who had lost their lives would be before the House for consideration at the present session. In view of these circumstances the Premier moved the adjournment of the debate.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Pte. C. J. Bennett, C Co., Feb. 9.
Pte. E. W. Satterthaw, C Co., Feb. 8.
Pte. C. Shenton, D Co., Feb. 8.
Pte. G. E. Chase, D Co., Feb. 8.
Pte. E. Brill, D Co., Feb. 8.
Pte. J. B. Coff, D Co., Feb. 9.

Transfer—Pte. J. J. Geary is transferred from the Machine Gun section to C Co., from the 10th inst.

Promotion—The commanding officer has been pleased to grant the promotion provisionally of Lance Corporal E. Abraham to be Corporal C Co., from Feb. 6th.

Nassau Guard—Men coming off the Nassau Guard will apply to the Orderly officer for late passes which he will grant at his discretion consistent with the conduct sheets.

J. E. R. MUNRO, Capt.
Adjt. 93rd Overseas Batt., C.E.F.

Mr. Wilbur Hamilton, an old Peterborough boy, the eldest son of Mr. Frank Hamilton, superintendent of the Structural Steel Works, Montreal, enlisted as a private in the 1st contingent, 5th Royal Highlanders Mounted Line, joining the contingent, has passed through many battles and has received several stripes. He now cables to his father that he has received the office of lieutenant and is safe and well. Lieut. Hamilton is to be congratulated upon his promotion from the ranks which is a striking testimonial to his worth and ability.

The strength of the 93 Battalion is now 735 men. Twenty eight recruits have been added so far this week.

The Norwood Register has the following reference to the death of Pte. Patrick Tucker of the 93rd Battalion: "An Asphodel recruit passed away in Peterborough on Tuesday morning in the person of Pte. Patrick Tucker, of the 93rd Battalion. Deceased resided for about six years at the home of Mr. Edward M. English in the Caughnawaga neighborhood. Pte. Tucker was a bright young man and was well spoken of. He enlisted about three months ago. His comrades especially regret his loss. He was born in Ireland and came from Ottawa to Norwood."

The following men have passed the medical examination for the Belmont battery, the first draft of which will leave for Kingston next Wednesday: William Atkin, H. W. Gray, George Sutherland, Wilbert Regan, Gerald Stenton, Wilbert Yelland, G. S. Cunningham, W. E. Thompson.

Mr. A. N. Allison will be at the Belmont Club Rooms every day from 11 to 12 a.m., from 4 to 5 p.m., and from 7.30 to 8.30 p.m., to receive the names of those desiring to join this battery. It is open to all the young men of the city and while retaining the name of the Belmont Club is not confined to its members.

An iron cross which was taken from the body of a dead German officer, after the battle of Langemarck, has been sent home by Harvey Staunton. It was shown to the Examiner by Mr. S. Touchburn. Corporal Staunton was wounded in that battle but it is understood that he has gone back with the 39th Batt.

Mr. E. Bouvier, representing the Bovril Company, presented each member of the 93rd Battalion with a very neat pocket mirror this afternoon. Similar mirrors have been presented all over Canada.

Lieut. Lou. Marsh who refereed last night's game, has been granted a commission in the Sportsmen's Battalion. He took advantage of the opportunity last night to do a little recruiting work and as a result of his efforts several of the Electrics will likely join the Sportsmen's Battalion. Among them will be Coach Billy Breen.

Music & Drama

The Strand Musical Comedy Company pleased a large audience last night in their presentation of the funny musical comedy, "Casey's Mishaps." The production was responsible for frequent laughter while the musical numbers were pleasing. To-night will be military night. Master Percy Lether will take part in the programme.

PETROLEUM FOR GREECE.

ATHENS, Feb. 10.—The British minister and the director of Greek customs signed an agreement whereby vessels carrying American petroleum will be permitted to reach Greece unmolested, provided previous notices of sailings are given to Great Britain.

Peterboro' To Raise $10,000 For Belgians

2000 TICKETS FOR BIG CONCERT WILL BE ISSUED

Speakers' Patriotic League Make an Appeal For Funds to Supply Instrument Cases and Drums For Bugle Band

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME

The following appeal has been addressed by Mr. W. F. Johnston, Secretary of the Speakers' Patriotic League:

To the Citizens of Peterboro:

As you already know through the kindness of the Examiner there is required to complete the 93rd Battaloin Band, cases for the magnificent instruments you are giving them, and also a big and six small drums for the Bugle Band.

The cases are very necessary for the purpose of keeping the instruments from becoming battered, etc.

The government does not supply the drums for the Bugle Band and they have either to buy them themselves or they have to be given them.

The total cost of both will be about $400.00.

The Speakers' Patriotic League have taken this matter up in your behalf and through the kindness of the Peterborough Patriotic Chorus and its conductor, Mr. Renwick, are giving a concert on Friday, the 18th February, in the Grand Opera House.

For this concert they have issued 2,000 tickets. These tickets cost twenty-five cents apiece and no seats will be reserved. By the sale of the whole 2,000 tickets sufficient money will be raised, after dividing expenses, to nicely cover the cost of everything and send both Bands on their musical way rejoicing.

The League therefore asks the public, whether they want to go or not, and whether they can get into the concert or not, to buy at least a ticket apiece.

By this means for the small sum of twenty-five cents you will acquire a comfortable feeling that you have done your little "Bit" for your own Band boys; you will have a three to five chance of getting into the Opera House, and if you come early enough you will not only get in but you will have the pleasure of listening to a most enjoyable programme.

You are therefore asked by the League to more than roll the old chariot along and become the proud possessor right away of a quarter interest in these two Bands.

Yours sincerely,
W. F. JOHNSTON,
Secretary.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE GRAND

Feb. 14—"Cherniavsky's" Russian Musicians.

Feb. 18—"Presentation of instruments to 93rd Band."

Feb. 19—Harry Lauder's play, "The Night Before."

Feb. 21—"Daddy Long Legs".

Feb. 28—"Damaged Goods".

March 2, 3, 4.—"Examiner" special feature, "Battlefields of France."

March 6, 7, 8—"Birth of a Nation."

Enthusiastic Meeting of Local Branch of the Belgian Relief Fund Last Night---Teams Chosen for Three-day Canvass Feb. 23-25th—Duty to Harassed People of Our Brave Ally.

DETAILS OUTLINED

The general meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Belgian Relief Committee, held last evening, in the T. A. S. rooms for the purpose of reporting upon the organisation for the campaign about to be inaugurated on behalf of the destitute women and children of our gallant ally, bespeaks complete success for the movement. The ladies, by their presence in such numbers, manifested their sympathy and determination to do all in their power to arouse public opinion to a realisation of our duty to these poor, starving people who have sacrificed men, homes, and everything they hold dear for principles which they are upholding to the bitter end in face of liberal inducements for a separate peace which have been and will be indignantly refused until the war is won by the Allies.

Good, live committees have been appointed to thoroughly organise for the canvass which will be made on Feb. 23rd, 24th and 25th. Mr. Robert Hanstone occupied the chair, and Mr. A. L. Killaly was secretary of the meeting, and among those present were Messrs. Robert Fair, R. B. Rogers, ex-Mayor Buller, W. R. Morris, W. H Dunsford, C. H. Pennefather, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Ald. Langford, B. D. Hall, Postmaster Edgar, L. J. Picard, Ald. McIntyre, Mr. Gibbs, Ald. Dobbin, D. O'Connell, F. D. Kerr, B. M. Glover, J. R. Corkery and others. Mesdames Aylmer, Morris, Buller, Dennison, Hay, Sherwood, Laplante, Scadding, Shaver, Lahane, and Misses Rutledge, Peck, Archer, Doris, Hurley, Ethel Hayes, Nora Shevlin, Dennison, Scott, and others.

Team Committee.

Mr. L. J. Picard, chairman of this committee, reported on the following list of team captains as having readily consented to act: Messrs. R. N. Stuart, Ald. W. Langford, W. J. Otte, W. H. Dunsford, J. Edgar, Adjt. McElhiney, L. J. Picard, R. B. Rogers and Walter Stocker, with one other to be appointed.

Mr. W. R. Morris congratulated the Committee on the excellent choice of captains for the campaign.

Executive Committee.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford presented the report of the Executive Committee, which was adopted.

Your organization committee, pursuant to the instructions received from you, beg to report that they met for the purpose of considering the details of the organization, and they have decided to recommend as follows:

That the objective, having regard to the numerous demands already made upon the people, many of whom are at present monthly subscribers to one or more lists, and to the numerous demands that, no doubt, will be made upon them in the future, be $10,000, the payment of which will be extended over one year.

The committee recommends that the dates of the campaign be the 23rd, 24th and 25th days of February, and that a deputation of this association, consisting of the officers and the captains and their teams, wait upon the City Council about the 21st of February, for the purpose of making a request for a contribution from the city.

Sub-committees have been appointed, for the purpose of preparing the lists and subscription cards and arranging for rooms and accommodation, during the period of the campaign. It is proposed that the city be divided into ten districts, and that a DELAY.

The Hydro-Electric Commission does not seem to partake much of the character of the "mysterious fluid" to which it owes the essential part of its title. Ottawa, thinks as expressed by the Free Press, "that it is about time Sir Adam Beck and his Hydro-Electric Commission, should turn their attention to Ottawa. Ah the first of the near the new order of the Ontario Government that a commission should succeed the Board of control in the management of the municipal electric department came into effect. The city long ago appointed its two commissioners. The Government has failed to appoint its representative on the commission, and as a result for a month the Ottawa Electric Department has been without control—running itself. This condition of things is no surprise to Peterborough. It is five oh six years since the ratepayers of Peterborough approved of the Hydro-Electric principle by a large majorty. Yet the local Hydro-Electric situation is unsettled, and nobody semes to know where we are at. If anybody is to blame, we don't know who is to blame. Is it somebody's neglect again the delay in clarifying the situation, due to the nature of things, or to the fact that great bodies move slowly? Somebody in authority should let a little light in upon the light business.

ENCOURAGING.

The new tone that has come to be sounded by the press, shows how justified was the opposition to a war-time election, which the Examiner and other journals made. The Hamilton Spectator, a most consistent supporter of the government says: "Thank Heaven we are spared having a war of ballots projected into a war of bullets." The new spirit of unity that has been aroused by the unanimous decision of parliament to have no war-time election, has pushed aside the intense spirit of partisanship. Before now when could we have had or expected to have a strong party journal like the Hamilton Spectator speak in the terms it used yesterday, in regard to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as Liberal leader:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in brilliantly voicing the unanimous approval of the opposition to an extension of parliament, rose to the full height of his statesmanship."

Subjection of the partizan spirit to the necessities of the duty of the hour will help Canada to more promptly and adequately fulfil her share of contribution to the cause of the Empire in this war.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A "free press" is one of the glories of the free institutions and conditions under which we live; as well as personal freedom. But personal freedom, which liberty of the British brand confers, has its limitations. In a free country a man may do what he likes, in so far as in so doing he does not do injury to his neighbour or to the interests of the community in which he lives, or the interests of the country or Empire. In like manner, a man may think what he likes; have full freedom of opinion, full liberty of expression of opinion; but in the matter of freedom of expression of opinion there can also be limitations. Opinions may not be freely expressed that tend to the injury of public or national interests, or that tend to subvert morality. In Britain, the cradle of liberty, the birth place of all the constitutional and actual freedom we enjoy, national, necessity, national interests require the placing of limitations to what is called the freedom of the press. Thus we have the censorship. If the censorship is necessary and justified in the interests of national and imperial concerns it is justified in similar interests in this country.

Recently there has been considerable correspondence in The Examiner and other newspapers regarding recruiting. With exaggerated deference to the shibboleth of "freedom of the press" this correspondence has been inserted, contrary to the better judgment and feeling of the editors. The result is that newspapers have become the responsible media of much intemperate writing that has tended to injure the cause of recruiting, and was, therefore, hostile to the interests of the nation and empire, whose great need is men. The anonymous writers escape responsibility, so far as the public is concerned, and the newspaper, which is not responsible, only in being too good natured, has to shoulder the blame. In self interest the newspapers have decided to cease being made scapegoats in this regard—being responsible for the opinions or assertions of irresponsible correspondents; and this applies not only to correspondence respecting recruiting and war interests, but to all the interests of the community. In accordance with this decision the Examiner will, hereafter, assume a different attitude towards correspondences submitted for publication. Correspondents will please note that Hereafter publication will not be given correspondence which contains attack on individuals, or that might be construed as possibly libellous, or subversive of morality, or imperilling public interests, unless the actual name of the writer is signed to, and printed under, the correspondence; and then, not always; and in the matter of correspondence to be printed over an assumed name, the Examiner takes the right to edit such correspondence, and eliminate anything that would, if printed, tend to injure the interests of the community.

In taking such a position a newspaper only imposes upon irresponsible correspondents the same limitations of expression it prescribes for itself in a responsible capacity. "The voice of the people" should certainly be heard, but it must be so uttered as to be heard in such a way that the public interests and the welfare of the community are not imperilled.

HERE TOO.

By the way, where are the Home Guards were were so proud of not so many months ago? — Ottawa Free Press.

CAUSE FOR GRATITUDE.

Thank Heaven! We are to be spared having a war of ballots projected into the war of bullets.— Hamilton Spectator (Conservative.)

WATCHDOGS.

The military guards on public works in Canada have been doubled in many places. It would add immensely to their effectiveness if they were supplied with dogs. There is nothing like a watchdog on jobs of that kind.—Montreal Herald.

OUR COMPENSATION.

"Trains Stalled in British Columbia," "Street Car Traffic Tied Up in Victoria," "Severe Weather in Vancouver," "Schools Closed Owing to Deep Snow in New Westminster" — these are specimens of about the only news coming out of British Columbia during the last few months. Here in the balmy East we don't like to crow, but we have our compensations.—Montreal Herald.

WHO OPPOSED NATIONAL SERVICE?

The Canadian shell contracts therefore were let to private interests, privileged corporations, and mushroom companies and political middlemen. While the privileged interests were making profits out of the nation's agony, the national workshops were kept standing idle or used for civilian work of comparatively little urgency. It has not been this country's idea of Sir Robert Borden, in the past, that he would deliberately take the side of political profiteering and refuse to undertake national service. But the record of Canadian shell contracting is not a credit to any Canadian statesman professing to be inspired by the spirit of national service and true Imperialism.—Ottawa Citizen (Conservative).

ENGLAND GROWING STRONGER.

There have been no miracles in this war except as each of the combatant nations has lived up in supreme fashion to its national character and reputation. From Germany were expected extraordinary preparation, good leadership, and ruthless determination and self-sacrifice, and in these are found the secrets of German achievements. From France were expected initial blundering and disorganization, splendid courage, good leadership, and readiness for self-sacrifice, and these France has shown. Russia has been Russia—ineffective in sustained offensive, splendid on the defence, receiving terrific blows without succumbing. England has been England, prepared on the sea, unprepared on land, muddling, quarrelling, resolute under adversity, growing stronger with time.—New York Post.

SUNDAY ATTACHE GOES BLIND.

TRENTON, N.J., Feb. 8.—Carl Rittenhouse, a bookseller in the Billy Sunday tabernacle, was stricken blind Sunday night while at dinner. Although he had not previously complained of his eyes, he suddenly raised his hands to his face and cried out that he could not see. Specialists were summoned, but they have not decided whether his sight can be restored. Some months ago Rittenhouse's father was stricken in the same manner. Rittenhouse joined the Sunday party in Syracuse.

What Will The Marriage Situation Be After the War?

One of the few redeeming aspects of the great war is that it will entirely reform the status and labour bondage of husbands.

Pessimists often ask what scrap of ultimate good will come out of this upheaval. Sociologists and statisticians picture a tragedy all perhaps two women of marriageable age to one man of marriageable age. Optimists, of whom I am one, look impatiently into the husband's golden era.

The war has finally unmasked the greatest of woman's age-long deceptions of man. Ever since the first cave woman sent the first cave man out into the cold wind to hunt the woolly rhinoceros while she snuggled by the fire woman has deceived man that she is his inferior in strength, endurance, courage and achievement. For her own ease she has flattered him that his is the dominating sex (mockery of the manacled wretch) and the directing sex (mockery of the laden beast.) Her cave ancestress said, 'Go out and hunt the skin; and I'll wear it,' and woman has said it ever since.

And then came this mighty upheaval. Woman, forgetting in its stress all the secrets she is giving away, has buckled-to in her millions and shown that there is hardly any work of man that she cannot do. She is driving motor-lorries, she is twirling milk-cans into guards' vans while ancient posters mop their faces in amazement at new records in bang and speed she is doing the postman's round, the liftman's gate-clanging, the ploughman's furrow, the lamp-lighter's circuit, the sweep's chimney, the window-cleaner's mountaineering, the car man's deliveries, the bank clerk's lightning arithmetic. She is standing long hours at the mechanic's lathe.

The woman insurance agent trips in all weathers down miles of mean streets, the woman dentist is following the woman doctor, the janitors of all the learned and lucrative professions are trembling at her nearing footsteps. She is perhaps nearer to the House of Commons than ever Mrs. Pankhurst could have brought her. I can envisage even the woolsack in her future—albiet that she will want it re-covered daily to match her change of robes.

* * * *

Shall man, then, looking forward to the new world after the war, be anxious and pessimistical? Not he. Shall he be fearful that woman, the worker, will henceforth take the bread out of his mouth, when woman, the worker, will go forth to earn the loaves while he, the priceless and rare One, sits at home? Woman has given away her secret and sold her ancient birthright of ease. It is for us, the real tender sex, to see now that she does not regain it.

The mere dream of that idle and care-free future makes me wish that the belligerents of Europe had been more respectful to the mission of Mr Ford.

At last there is promise of man coming into his real kingdom. The curtains are drawing aside of that repose which is his by right, but which has always been usurped by woman. Woman has always been credited with being the tender sex, the imaginative sex, the romantic sex. Woman has always been shielded from the world because of her sensitive delicacy. Woman has not gone out into the hurly-burly because the dust and clamor of the market were thought unfitted to her. But she has dispensed all that in these days. She is as good as the best of us. It is my own belief that she is far more competent than most of us. She has more determination, less sentiment, more energy, more truth.

Man is the romantic sex, the sensitive sex, the imaginative sex. There is no woman in whose whole body there is as much romance as in man's little finger. Woman is the directing sex, the hard, practical sex, the sex that cannot be 'blarneyed' or deceived. George Meredith (who knew more about women than any man who ever wrote on that difficult and thorny problem) said that 'the friendship of most men is purchasable with an air of good fellowship and a cigar.' But woman is immovable, for here is the practical sex, the sex with ten acute common senses that we weak men possess not. It is the strangest of paradoxes that man has always ridiculously attributed all those softnesses and sensibilities to his Beloved that, in truth, his Beloved would scorn to possess. What married woman will not contend that her husband is less worldy wise than herself? What husband has not suffered this intolerable wrong of being treated like an infant by his wife and yet compelled to go forth and work for her?

* * * *

A topsy-turvy creed, this belief in woman's soulfulness and tenderness. There have been millions of love-sick Romeos and never a love-sick Juliet; and in all history there has never been one woman who has looked at the moon and sighed (as we the soulful sex so often do) when no one was watching her.

But now comes man's emancipation, his haleyon era. He can settle down to his romances, his visions, his arts. He can cultivate his tender emotions sheltered from the rough world and unspotted from its traffic. He can dream dreams—a futility that has ever been repugnant to the common sense of woman.

For my own part I cherish already my own dream of the husband's golden era after the war.

It is seven at night, the firelight glows, the curtains are drawn (not against Zeppelins, for they will be forgotten, the dinner smells savory. Hark—the Pekingese, barks! Brisk steps crunch the gravel-path. The voice of a brave, strong woman is heard in the porch. Hat and dripping ackintosh are flung into the lobby in woman's hearty way. I leave my novel and fancy work. I glide into the hall. My wife has come home from the City!—London Daily Mail.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE SOLDIERS HAVE A LEAD OF FIVE GOALS IN THE PLAY-OFF SERIES

93rd Team Beat Disorganized Electrics 7 Goals to 2 in first of Home and Home Games for the District Championship.

HARD FOUGHT BATTLE

The 93rd Battalion intermediates have a lead of five goals with which to go into the second game of the play-off series on Friday night. The soldiers beat the Electrics in the first game last night by 7 goals to 2 after a hard battle, the score giving little indication of the play. The boys in khaki deserved to win the battle, but they hardly earned as big a margin in view of the closeness of the play throughout. The superior weight and bulk of the 93rd, coupled with their hard checking and more accurate shooting, earned them the victory. The Electrics were as fast and in some cases better stick handlers, but the close, hard checking of the soldiers, augmented by their judicious use of their weight, gave them the edge, especially after the first period.

The Electrics were represented by a disorganized team. Not only were they without the services of Lornie Rose, who had not recovered from the effects of the injury he received in Cobourg, but they were also without Billy Hamilton, their good centre man, who was absent from the city. The result was that Frank Montgomery, the junior defence played, had to be shoved up to the wing, a position totally unfamiliar to him, while Long took his place on the defence. Rose and Hamilton were sadly missed off the forward line. The advance guard last night, although good individually, failed to play their places or show any signs of team work.

It was a hard fought battle in spite of the lop-sided score. The checking was hard, and a half dozen players took the count during the night, although no one was badly hurt. It was not pretty hockey by any means, but it kept the fans on their toes. It is a significant proof of the absence of team work that of the nine goals scored only one was scored from a pass, and a good idea of the nature of the battle is furnished by the fact that two thirds of the goals were scored on long shots or from mix-ups around the nets. In this kind of going the soldiers shone, especially as they showed far better shooting ability than their opponents, whose drives were weak and inaccurate, while the 93rd shot hard and true when they got an opening.

The 93rd led by 2 to 1 at the end of the first period, 5 to 2 at the close of the second and 7 to 2 at the finish.

For the winners Widdifield played his consistently good game in the nets, while Sexton on the defence was good all the way. In fact the "Bluehose" was probably the most conspicuous figure on the 93rd line-up, doing some fine rushing and shooting. On the forward line, Windsor was very useful around the nets, and Montgomery's checking was a big help to his team.

For the Electrics, Spratt did some fine rushing and checked hard, while Evans gave him valuable assistance on the defence. On the forward line little Freddy Graham of the juniors was the most conspicuous, showing a bunch of speed and fine stick-handling. Evans was closely checked and did not get away as often as usual.

93rd.		Electrics.
	Goal
Widdifield		Legros
	Defence
Sexton		Spratt
Dupuy		Long
	Rover
R. Montgomery		Evans
	Centre
Windsor		Graham
	Right Wing
Blewett		McMartin
	Left Wing
Ketchum		F. Montgomery

The play was very even in the first period. The soldiers outscored their rivals 2 to 1, but there was little difference between the two. The Electrics were the first to score, when Long broke up a rush and went down alone, beating Widdifield with a neat shot from the side. It took twelve minutes of hard play to even up the count. Finally the soldiers equalized with Spratt and Graham in the penalty box. Long collided with one of his own men in starting a rush, and the puck drifted over to Windsor, who had a clear path to the nets and made no mistake. Soon after Sexton put the soldiers ahead on a long shot which Legros never saw.

In the second period, after one rush by Evans and Graham, which Widdifield foiled by a beautiful shot, the 93rd took the offensive and had much the better of the first ten minutes' going. Windsor wiggled inside for Goal No. 3, and Blewett added another on a side shot.

R. Montgomery received a gash over the eye and had to retire for repairs. Long being dropped with him. While they were off Spratt got one back for the Electrics by a pretty rush, when he went right in on top of Widdifield. Sexton, however, added another one for the soldiers on a short from a scrimmage, and it was 5-2 at the end of the period.

The checking was very hard in the last period and there were frequent spills. Early in the period McMartin got five minutes for punching Dupuy, and while he was off Dupuy drifted a long shot in from about centre, the puck passing nearly every man on both teams before it finally nestled in the nets.

A little later Windsor got the last goal when Spratt lost the rubber near his own nets.

CURLING

—The Toronto Granites won the Ontario Tankard yesterday from the Queen City Club after putting Lindsay out in the semi-finals after a great battle.

Both Granite skips had to pile up big scores on the last end to put Lindsay out of the running. The game will long be remembered for its sensational finish and the particularly brilliant performance of John Rennie. The latter was four shots down to G. A. Little when they started the last end. By clever work Rennie, who had been lying two shots drove in two more with his last stone and tied up the score. The other rinks had just begun the next to last end with their score also tied. Beatty then took a clever counter and followed up his clever work with three shots on the final end. It was great work on the part of the Granite skips and they came in for a lot of praise.

The Winners To Play Belleville

First Game in the Second Round Here Next Monday Night

The winner of the 93rd Battalion-Electric series has been ordered to play Belleville in the second round. The first game will be played here on Monday next and the return game in Belleville on Friday, Feb. 18th. The Belleville team has just disposed of Picton, who put the Petes out last year.

Belleville Put "Midgets" Out

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 9.— Belleville juniors defeated Lindsay here to-night in the second of the home-and-home games, by 5 to 2, and won the district by 8 to 4 on the round. To-night's match was very closely contested, each team scoring one goal in the first period and none in the second. In the third period the locals strengthened and scored four goals to Lindsay's one. Line-up:

Belleville— Nurse, goal; Holloway and Reid, defence; Whelan, rover; Arnott, centre; Green and Armstrong, wings.

Lindsay—Mitchell, goal; Haugh and Flavelle, defence; Reid, rover; Mills, centre; Casey and Walsh, wings.

Referee—Gorrie, Toronto.

KILLS SELF, MOTHER AND CHILDREN.

MUNICH, Feb. 10.—Insane from grief over the death of her husband, a Bavarian reservist who was killed at the western front some time ago, Mrs. Barbara Schuetzenhoefer killed her seven children, three boys and four girls, by cutting their throats with a kitchen knife. In the same manner the woman murdered her aged mother. Then she ended her own life by sending a bullet through her brain.

BIG MILITARY CARNIVAL AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville is putting on a big winter and military carnival on the 15th 16th and 17th inst., which promises to be one of the biggest events of its kind ever held in the province of Ontario. The affair is under the auspices of the newly-organized Sportman's Patriotic League and is for the purpose of supplying comforts for the soldiers of the 59th and 156th Battalions, mobilized in Brockville, and in training for overseas service. There will be grand military street parades by brass bands and the men of the two Battalions, numbering over 2,000 followed by military manoeuvres at the Fair Grounds which will also be the scene of horse races for purses aggregating $1,000, and inter-company hockey matches on splendid rinks. Some of the fastest horses on the American and Canadian tracks are expected to participate in the races on the American and Canadian tracks are expected to participate in the races. 'Grand Opera,' 'Paddy R.' 'Eel Direct,' 'Fern Hal' and many others are already here.

One of the special indoor features will be the military tournament at the Armouries covering two nights. Clubs are coming from all over Ontario and Quebec to take part in a curling bonspiel and the Brockville Arena will be the scene of hockey matches, fancy dress carnivals and skating contests. The Brockville Amateur Minstrels are combining their annual show with the carnival for the benefit of the soldiers. The railroads are giving reduced rates to Brockville for the week.

WAS SHOT, HE SAYS, AT GIRL'S REQUEST

George W. Ryan, of Providence, Thought Dying, Causes Arrest of Stepdaughter and Saloon Keeper.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Feb. 10.— Apparently dying from a bullet wound in his right breast, George W. Ryan this afternoon caused the arrest of his step-daughter, Lillian Taylor, and John Manney, a saloon keeper, by charging that Manney shot him at the woman's bidding as he tried to enter his own home. Manney and the woman vigorously deny the accusation, and Miss Taylor declared that her first knowledge of the fact that Ryan was shot was when she was asked with her mother to come to a store near her home to identify him.

Ryan has been separated from his family for a week, and last night, according to his wife and daughter, tried to enter his home. The doors were locked against him and mother and daughter say they went to bed. Ryan, before the Coroner in the hospital, says he returned to the house and found Manney in the front hallway with his wife and her daughter.

"Now is the time to give it to him," he says his stepdaughter told Manney, and the latter shot him.

EXTRACTS FROM AMERICAN NOTES

(From the Note on War Zone of February 10, 1915.)

The government of the United States views those possibilities with such grave concern that it feels it to be its privilege, and indeed its duty in the circumstances, to request the Imperial German government to consider before action is taken the critical situation in respect of the relations between this country and Germany which might arise were the German naval forces, in carrying out the policy foreshadowed in the Admiralty proclamation, to destroy any merchant vessel of the United States or cause the death of American citizens.

(From the Note of May 13, 1915.)

The Imperial German government will not expect the government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment.

(From the Note of June 9, 1915.)

The fact that more than one hundred American citizens were among those who perished made it the duty of the government of the United States to speak of these things, and once more, with solemn emphasis, to call the attention of the Imperial German government to the grave responsibility which the government of the United States conceives that it has incurred in this tragic occurrence, and to the indisputable principle upon which that responsibility rests.

(From the Note of July 21, 1915.)

The government of the United States cannot believe that the imperial government will longer refrain from disavowing the wanton act of its naval commander in sinking the Lusitania or from offering reparation for the American lives lost, so far as reparation can be made for a needless destruction of human life by an illegal act.

* * *

In the meantime the very value which this government sets upon the long and unbroken friendship between the people and government of the United States and the people and government of the German nation impels it to press very solemnly upon the imperial German government the necessity for a scrupulous observance of neutral rights in this critical matter. Friendship itself prompts it to say to the imperial government that repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

It is now practically a question of penmanship.

INCINERATOR IN NEED OF REPAIRS

Property Committee Visited the Plant Last Evening—Committee Will Report on Proposal Re Dan Spence Ambulance

Last evening the Property committee of the City Council met at the Incinerator plant on Townsend street for the purpose of inspecting three arches that are said to be in a bad state of repair. The committee subsequently met in the City Hall and decided to write to the Reid Incinerator Company, Toronto, concerning the matter. The committee if of the opinion that the arches should be replaced free of charge considering the short time they have been in use.

Dan Spence Ambulance.

Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Saunders and Duncan were appointed a committee to look into the matter of converting the Dan Spence ambulance into a motor vehicle as suggested by Chief of Police Thompson in his annual report. The matter of a suitable place to keep the ambulance will also be looked into.

Isolating Poultry.

In accordance with the recommendation of the local Board of Health, the committee will recommend that the Council pass a by-law to provide that all coops, premises and enclosures, where ducks, geese, chickens and other poultry are kept, shall be at least twenty feet from any dwelling or premises where food is prepared, served or sold.

Washing Facilities.

The matter of compelling restaurants to provide sanitary wash bowls for their customers, as recommended by the local Board of Health, was referred to Sanitary Inspector Spence, who will consult with City Solicitor Gordon and report back to the committee.

ST. ANDREW'S YOUNG PEOPLE MEET FRIDAY EVENING

Mr. B. J. Kidd, presenting the Auditors' report, said the books were in the best condition he had ever seen, and were the most satisfactory of any society's he had audited.

A vote of thanks was extended to all the retiring officers of last year. It may not be amiss to observe that Mr. Jos. Kelly was President, Mr. J. T. C. Lang, secretary, and Mr. A. Brault, treasurer.

The Next Show.

January 9th to 11th, 1917 show, and judges will be written to at once. With many poultry associations, showing losses for 1915, Peterborough has a considerable credit balance and continues to flourish.

At the March 8th meeting birds of all varieties will be exhibited, ribbons awarded and a sweepstake for the best bird, any variety, in the city.

Mr. Lang will read a paper on "Hatching with an Incubator."

Stripped Naked, Then Jeered At By Cruel Captors

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The first detailed eyewitness story of the torture and massacre of Armenians has been received here. It confirmed earliest fragmentary reports of the terrible suffering which the Armenians have met with in the campaign of extermination which the Turks are waging and, at the same time, charges that German officers are directing the work of "deportation," which, in reality, is a work of slaughter.

The description of atrocities is written by an American woman, long a missionary in the Orient, who did her utmost to help the Armenians, was herself almost ridden down by a German officer who objected because the Turks were "too lenient," and finally went to Cairo, where she submitted her official report.

No Names Used.

The organization to which this report was submitted requested, in making it public, that he name and that certain others in the narrative, as well as the names of some towns be omitted in publication in order that the identity of the missionary might not become known to Turkish officials.

"At Aleppo she (the missionary) saw the remnants of 5,000 exiles who had started from ——," says the official report.

"When they started they were of all ages and both sexes. They went toward Aleppo, down the Euphrates. When they came to crossings of the rivers that flow into the Euphrates all the able-bodied men were drowned and their bodies left in the water. Farther on all the survivors, now only old men, women and children, were entirely stripped of their clothing. Naked, they waded through streams, slept in the chilly nights and bore the heat of the sun. They were brought into Aleppo over the last few miles of their journey in third-class railway carriages, herded together like so many animals. When the doors of the carriages were opened they were jeered at by the populace for their nakedness.

"Of the 5,000 that started, only 213 were left. Among the 5,000 that started, it may be added, were many graduates of —— College and of the —— College. Among them were young women as intelligent, refined and cultured as Wellesley or Vassar girls. Their treatment at the hands of the gendarmes or their fate as occupants of Turkish harems is almost unthinkable.

"Early in the autumn, a three weeks' reign of terror began at Cofra. The chief and finest men in the city were brutally killed. Soghomon Effendi Knajian, a very capable business man in charge of all the industries established by Miss ——, employing more than 2,200 persons, was attacked by a mob and killed. Hagopjan, a trusted servant of Miss ——, was selected for special dignity and hanged on a tree in the presence of a great crowd. The outrages at Cofra were like the massacres of the Mohammedan days."

CANADIAN SHOT BY A SNIPER

FIRST CANADIAN SOLDIER TO BE KILLED IN FLANDERS.

London, Ont., Feb. 10.—A staff correspondent of the Detroit News sends the following story to his paper:

Private Baines who is in an hospital here, told me of how he got the sniper who shot Eddie Cullen, the first man killed in the Canadian army.

"Cullen as I started to say, was the first man killed in the Canadian army. He was shot through the head the first night in the trenches. He was filling sand bags back of the trench when he got it. Probably as he lifted the bags he had exposed himself.

"From the way in which Cullen was hit we figured that the shot had come from an old and partly ruined house that stood between our trench and the German line. Our officers were worked up over Eddie's death that they got an artillery man to figure out if his battery, which was several hundred yards in our rear, could drop a shell into the house where the sniper hid. He came to our trench and calculated the distance a minute, then told us that a shell exploded at that particular point probably would kill several of us while it was killing the one German. He advised that we fight the sniper with another sniper.

"I'll never forget how glad I was to be selected to avenge Eddie's death. I prowled around two whole days waiting to get this man. He got two or three more of our men before I got him. Finally I got behind a pile of sandbags, and drew an exact bead on that spot where he had to show himself sooner or later."

Flaxseed Good For Humans.

Many people think flaxseed merely a wonderful stock food. It's good for human beings, too, in fact, is the finest medicine ever known. Dr. Jackson discovered an electrical treatment for deodorising flaxseed and removing all flavour. There is no reason for not eating it, and every reason why it should be used daily.

25 per cent. of Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is deodorised flax seed. This meal, if not stirred while cooking, makes most delicious porridge. Stirring spoils it. It is guaranteed to relieve constipation or money back.

At grocers', 10c and 25c.

Try the ready cooked Roman Meal Nuggets. You may soften with boiling water, drain, and add milk or serve with hot milk.

EARTH IS MAKING A CALL ON MARS

Two Planets Are Sixty Million Miles Apart

The planet Mars, now rising in the east, with its lurid hue, early in the evening, came to "opposition" at 2 a.m. this morning. This terms means opposite the sun, as seen from the earth; and, as the earth's path is next inside that of Mars, opposition brings the two planets side by side, and hence nearest each other. The actual nearest approach occurred yesterday. It is, however, further from the earth's path to Mars' path at some points than at others; and so it happens that at this opposition Mars is distant about 60,000,000 miles, whereas sometimes that planet approaches as near as 35,000,000 miles. Even so, Mars, the supposedly inhabited planet, is big and bright, and will continue a conspicuous figure in our evening sky for months. The diagram indicates the concentric orbids of earth and Mars, showing oppositions at least ad greatest distances. The present opposition is near the point of greatest distance.

TORPEDOED LITTLE MOTORSHIP BECAUSE IT MIGHT RESIST!

AMSTERDAM, February 10.—A semi-official statement, from Berlin says that the Dutch motor vessel Artemis was torpedoed because the German commander believed that she was resisting inspection. The statement follows:

During the night of February 1 and 2 the Artemis was attacked, by a German torpedo boat and damaged by a torpedo. The ship was able to reach port in a damaged condition. According to all available information the commander of the German torpedo boat believed that the Artemis was resisting his order for inspection, and in order to put an end to this resistance he attacked the ship. The inquiry into this matter, as a result of which a neutral vessel, much to our regret, came to grief, has not been concluded.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

ITALY WILL RELY ON TAXATION NOW FOR WAR MONIES

ROME, via Paris, Feb. 9.—In a speech delivered in Turin, E. Daneo, Italian Minister of Finance, intimated that, when the subscription lists have been completed for the third national loan at present being offered, Italy will cease issuing loans and will resort to indirect taxation for the obtaining of further war funds.

Signor Daneo said that the success of the present war loan is assured, as 2,000,000,000 lire have already been subscribed, and a total of 2,-000,000,000 may be reached before the issue closes on February 10.

The two previous national loans totalled 2,500,000,000.

"Instead of mortgaging the future and tying up present wealth," the minister said, "it is cheaper and more effective to raise funds under circumstances such as the present by means of taxation, which has the advantage of forcing the public to save money and to curtail extravagance.

Extravagance Criminal.

"Popular extravagance in war time is criminal. The need of the hour is to induce people to reduce wastage and to restrict the contracting of loans when the means of paying the huge interests are not at hand.

"The new system of taxation since October, 1914, brought into the treasury 375,000,000 lire, and this year will exceed 500,000,000.

"The more we are taxed, the less we are forced to subscribe to loans. It may seem paradoxical, but taxes make people realize the need of saving, and all saving is a gain in the direction of victory."

The existing war taxes include one per cent. on export, as well as taxes on sugar, spirits, person exempt from military service, automobiles and incomes.

The new taxes are expected to include a rate of four cents for domestic letter postage, 38 1-8 per cent. of price of theatre tickets, revenue stamps on documents of many kinds and probably a taxation on land and a heavy progressive income tax.

HIC JACET BONES.

Tobacco that won't bite;
Non-bilious beer;
A high-ball served just right;
A boutonniere;
A night off now and then
With cards, live coals,
Some cozy den,
And some good souls:
A club or two—the Lambs
Or Wolves or Cubs
Or Crabs or Clams,
Just so they're Clubs;
Clothes half-way neat;
Clean linen and a bath;
A flier in the Street
And—aftermath.
Some I O U's;
First nights at plays;
Some dreams; some blues;
Some very rainy days;
Some fleshly ills;
Some wonderings of God;
Some chills; some pills;
Six feet of sod.
Some graven stones
To weight him down,

Eminent Vocal Teacher To Open Classes Here

Mr. Russell McLean, of Toronto, to Be Attached to the Peterborough Conservatory of Music

Peterborough is fortunate in securing the services of one of Canada's best known vocalists and teachers of music, in the person of Mr. Russell McLean, of Toronto, who will be attached to the faculty of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, opening classes in singing and voice production at the Conservatory on Monday next. Mr. McLean is now on the staff of the Toronto Conservatory and will be able only to give instruction to a limited number of pupils in Peterborough. Consequently those wishing to study under him will do well to register at once.

Mr. McLean is a baritone soloist of great prominence. He has studied under the leading teachers of voice production in Europe, including Mr. Frank King Clark in Paris, France. He also acted as Mr. Clark's assistant teacher for a time. He has filled the position of principal soloist in Washington Ave. church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and also in the little church around the corner in New York city, where he was for five years. He has acted in a similar capacity at St. James' Cathedral, Metropolitan church, Sherbourne street Methodist church and Eaton Memorial church, Toronto. At the latter he was soloist for five years.

LIVE STOCK IN ALBERTA

Serious Losses Are Not Expected Among the Cattle in the West

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—Further reports received by the Canadian Pacific Railway regarding live stock in Alberta, show that the sensational reports which have been circulated are greatly exaggerated. The General Agricultural Agent of the Railway has been personally investigating conditions on the ground and reports that while stock is suffering a little in quality on account of the severe weather, there is a large amount of feed available and serious losses are not expected. This report is confirmed by Dr. Rutherford, superintendent of Animal Husbandry for the Dominion.

Bulgar Premier Thinks War is Won; Saloniki No Worry

The Following Interesting Article ..By Dr. Leo Lederer, Is Carried In the New York Times.

SOFIA, Jan. 30.—In an interview I had with M. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian premier, to-day we discussed Salonika.

M. Radoslavoff asks if I consider Salonika important. I hazard no military judgment, but point out that Salonika in French and English hands means for the continual political danger; that for the allies it is at all times a factor for exerting pressure on Greece and a standing argument to persuade Rumania—to seduce these two countries to go against us in perhaps a very uncomfortable moment.

"One should not estimate these dangers too highly," M. Radoslavoff comments. "Were Greece to join the allies, which, despite the wise policy of King Constantine and his manly attitude, lies in the realm of possibility, we would be filled with anxiety if thereby the English and French were enabled to undertake an effective offensive against us, but this possibility will not exist even in case the Anglo-French acquire the aid of the Greek army.

Will Talk to Rumania.

"Apparently the English and French see that themselves, otherwise they would not have blown up a number of bridges which they would need for an offensive, nor would they confine themselves to fortifying purely defensive positions. Rumania's attitude, however, must in the very near future undergo a clarifying process in view of the not wholly unsuccessful agitation of the allies in Bucharest. Clarity in this question is naturally for the central powers and their allies a matter of the most importance."

The conversation turns to the awkward effort of the French and English to clear up the situation in Greece. M. Radoslavoff says:

"This war has brought the small nations into a difficult position. My opinion is that Rumania out of a feeling of solidarity with neutral and small states ought to have protested against the action of the English and French in Greece. It is dangerous for small nations to acknowledge the right of the powerful, even by mere silence."

Thinks France Desperate.

Then we speak of the future and peace. M. Radoslavoff says:

"Peace is desired by thoughtful people among our enemies more than by us. I know the anxious desperation that oppresses France. I know how apathy of soul makes ever greater inroads in Russia, with what lies the government and press must keep up the spirits of the Russian people, what fairy tales are disseminated in Russia about us, about our internal condition, about conditions in our army, about the relations between our king and our kaiser. Just a few more defeats, a few more shattered hopes, and out of this popular feeling peace will be born. In Serbia the unpeaceable, restless element has disappeared. The people who remain either feel themselves Bulgarians or are happy to live peaceful in a land which will develop in a most surprising and prosperous way."

Wounded In Head Forgets the War

VIENNA, Feb. 9.—A remarkable case of a soldier losing all memory of the war as the result of a wound in his head, was brought to the attention of the Society of Physicians and Surgeons in Vienna by Dr. Hermann Schlesinger.

A 36 year old infantryman received a wound in the forehead last July while fighting on the eastern front. The wound was treated and was soon healed. Strangely enough while the soldier is mentally sound and can read, write and tally as formerly, he has lost all recollection of the war. He cannot remember being called to the colors or participating in any fighting. He seems unpaid to think there is a war and reads the newspapers assiduously to learn all about it.

When the doctors tell him how he was wounded and where he shakes his head dubiously. He was also shown his name in the German papers of several months ago, in which he was reported as wounded but even that does not convince him. He is also very much surprised that many of his friends are missing.

In lecturing on the subject, Dr. Schlesinger refers to the case as "retrograde amnesia," and is hopeful that with rest and continued good treatment the soldier's memory of the events of his life since the beginning of the war will return.

ADVERTISING HINTS

Advertising is news: make your advertising newsy and it will be read with interest by the general public.

It is better to have an ad. of a given size appear in every issue of a daily than to have twice as large an advertisement appear in every other issue of the same paper.

In an ad. four inches long (56 agate lines) the maximum number of words used should be 100. Of course if a cut is used the number of words should be reduced in proportion to the space occupied by the cut.

Many an advertiser has seen his advertising fail to iron flatness, because he stopped it at a critical period in its life.

Oftentimes one can reach more buyers by advertising in a half dozen publications of acknowledged circulation, than he can by spreading his advertising appropriation over a hundred publications which all together do not amount to the volume of half of the six great media.

WILL LOOP WITH BYERSVILLE LINE

Street Railway Rumour Promises Extension This Spring

The perennial rumours regarding the Street Railway Company's probable extensions this year are flowering early. For the past week or more it has been stated that the Charlotte Street line will be continued south on Monaghan Road, not only to Patterson street, but even to Byersville, where it will loop with the C.G.E. route. The idea has been heard frequently enough, but not as promising ly as it has been recently mentioned. Around the barn and on the cars it has been stated that the company is preparing to proceed with this section of their service. On Monaghan Road between Charlotte and Patterson streets the poles and wires are in position ties are piled along the road, and the rails are somewhere in the city. From the recent reports it is evident that the proposed extensions will be carried out this summer.

MOTHERS' CLUB OF THE Y.M.C.A.

The Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. held their monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon in parlour of the Y. M.C.A., which was well represented by the regular members. A number of new members were added. The Club is continually growing and is very prosperous. Every mother being interested in the welfare of our boys and girls, realising how much can be done for them by the mother who thinks. Dr. E. E. Harvey gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the mother and child, which was appreciated by every mother present, and all hope to hear the doctor again in the near future. It was decided to form a committee to re-organize the Mothers' Circle of South Central school at once. The Mothers' Club meet the second Wednesday of each month.

Peterboro' To Raise $10,000

team be allotted to each district, that a dunch be held on the evening of the 22nd, at which will be present the captains and members of the teams and that the premises, used for this purpose, shall be the headquarters of the association, during the period of the campaign.

The objective of $10,000.00 set by the Committee, as reported by Mr. Dunsford, was the subject of some discussion. Mr. O'Connell went into the matter thoroughly as a member of the Executive Committee, and gave the reasons which governed the Committee in their decision as to the amount. While realising the excellence of the Fund and the necessity of doing all that can be done by the citizens of Peterborough, in view of the fact that so many calls have been made, and that they are by no means at an end, it was decided not to ask the public, on this occasion, for as much as they might be prepared to give, but for what might be reasonably expected, and readily secured. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien felt that a fund of $10,000.00, under the circumstances, was a handsome one, and supported the report of the Executive.

Ex-Mayor Buller and Ald. Langford brought before the audience the fact of Belgium's condition, which was the result, to a great extent, of the first two weeks' stand by the brave soldiers of that little country, and heartily supported the campaign.

Mr. R. B. Rogers thought possibly the objective might be raised.

Messrs. Robert Fair, F. D. Kerr, W. B. Morris, J. R. Corkery, and Ald. Dobbin all spoke of the importance of the campaign and expressed their willingness to assist in every possible manner.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin presented the report of the Publicity Committee which was adopted.

Publicity Committee.

Robert Harstone, Esq., President Peterborough Branch.

Sir,—Your Publicity Committee met at Mr. O'Connell's office, afternoon of February 8th.

Discussion as to publicity for the campaign: Opinion of the meeting that newspaper announcement would better be held for the present, but to go forward about the 14th inst.

Instructions given to see the local papers and arrange for space in which to put fofward the claims of the fund. The objective was placed at $10,000.00.

Discussion as to proposed issue of badges, cards and other details of the publicity work. It is proposed that the general meeting will lay down details as to the methods of canvass, soliciting, etc., and that the publicity committee will be guided by the directions of the general meeting, in such respects.

The meeting adjourned. The papers were seen and space arranged for on a satisfactory basis, such as approved by the president and Mr. O'Connell.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, on behalf of the ladies, who were eager to have an active connection with the Fund, offered to collect the monthly subscriptions after the canvass has been completed, which was much appreciated by the meeting.

Miss Peck referred to Mr. Anderson, Reeve of Otonabee, as being most sympathetic with the work. It is intended to make a canvass of the townships after the city campaign is wound up.

Mr. A. L. Killaly, the secretary, will advise all the members and the ladies when the deputation will wait on the City Council so that they may be present to give their views to the Council.

The next meeting will be held at the finish of the campaign.

The meeting then adjourned with the singing of God Save the King.

MAKE WARRIORS FARMERS.

Recommendations Made to British Government—Give Financial Assistance.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A grant of $10,000,000 for the acquisition of land upon which colonies might be established for former soldiers and sailors after the war is over is recommended to the Government in a report of the departmental committee of the Board of Agriculture yesterday.

Farms would be sold to the settlers at small cost, co-operative buying and marketing established and agricultural credit banks created.

WEDDING BELLS

DOWNER—WEIR.

A quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's father, Mr. George Boyer, Peterboro, when his daughter, Mrs. Emma M. Weir, became the wife of Oliver Downer of Saskatchewan. The ceremony which took place in the presence of immediate members of the family, was performed by Rev. Dougal Brown of the Park street Baptist Church. After the nuptial knot had been tied the party sat down to a full course dinner which was enjoyed by all.

The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents among them being a beautiful piano, the gift of the groom. After March 15 Mr. and Mrs. Downer will reside in Saskatchewan.

OBITUARY

MR. SAMUEL WALKER.

In the death of Mr. Samuel Walker, 231 Wescott street, who passed away at Nicholls Hospital yesterday morning, Peterborough lost a well and most favourably known citizen. The late Samuel Walker had resided here for eighteen years, during which time he had been connected with the Matthews-Blackwell Co.

He is survived by a widow and by four sons, Fred and Henry of Peterborough, Arthur of Montreal, and Sam of Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. Bishop, of Toronto.

The funeral will take place on Saturday at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, to Little Lake cemetery.

SPLENDID WORK DONE BY ST. ANDREW'S PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

The Patriotic League of St. Andrew's Church will, in future, meet on Tuesday, at 2 p.m. The officers take this opportunity of thanking the ladies of the congregation for their loyal support and interest in the good work that has been accomplished. The League has been able to ship regularly, socks, hospital supplies and other comforts to our boys at the front.

6 feather pillows.
32 rest cushions.
33 ring cushions.
6 pairs socks, 1 pair knee caps, and 2 pairs wristlets.
4 suits pyjamas.
18 pairs hospital slippers.
29 night shirts and 2 day shirts.
30 wash cloths and 6 handkerchiefs.
68 bandages and 60 tape sponges.
500 mouth wipes.
1,400 swabs.
560 compresses.
516 dressing pads, 6x7.
40 pairs of socks were forwarded to Captain H. A. Pearson for free distribution to the soldiers in the trenches.

Last Night At Bethany Tabernacle

The fact, the immency and the glory of the second return of the Lord Jesus Christ was most vividly portrayed by Rev. H. M. Shuman in his address at the Tabernacle last night. He declared that Christ plainly taught His disciples before His ascension that He would come back to earth again. There was also abundant apostolic as well as angelic testimony recorded in the New Testament regarding the fact of His second return. Christ also urged upon His disciples the necessity of watchfulness and prayer in connection with His promised return. His coming was to be characterized by the manifestation of power and great glory.

Miss Morgan gave several touching incidents of the manner in which the Gospel affected the lives of the heathen who accept Christ as their Saviour.

Mr. Shuman will speak to-night on the important subject of "Some things that will take place when Christ comes back to earth again." You are invited to hear him. Service at eight o'clock.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Annie Birt of Norwood, is visiting friends in the city.

Dr. Franck C. Neal has returned to the city after a short business trip to Toronto.

Mr. Leslie Waters of 514 Gilmour St., is spending a few days at his home in Norwood.

The condition of Mr. Ralph Carton who was taken suddenly ill a few days ago, shows no improvement.

Messrs. William and Thomas Walton, who conduct a large horse ranch near Maple Creek, Sask., are home for their annual mid-winter holiday.

The many friends of Rev. R. B. Grobb, rector of All Saints' church, will be sorry to learn that his illness does not show much improvement and that he is still confined to his room.

Mrs. T. B. Marling of Lakefield, whose husband, Lieut. Marling, is connected with the 93rd, will spend the balance of the winter in Peterborough.

The Examiner, in common with the public, learns with sympathetic regret, that Mr. Alex. McGregor, editor of the Review, has been confined to his bed with a severe attack of la-grippe, with Dr. Hammond in attendance. The public, and especially the readers of the Review, hope that he will soon be restored to the enjoyment of health and they to the enjoyment of the products of his clever pen.

CANADA IS NOT SUSPICIOUS GERMANS IN HIGH POSITIONS

Four, Among Others, of the Most Confidential Posts in the Dominion Civil Service Are Retained by Men of Teutonic Origin —Have Many Secrets

The following among other positions of trust are held by German-born citizens:

Private secretary to Minister of Marine, who has charge of Canada's coast defences.

Chief of Intelligence staff with Canada's forces at the front.

Superintendent of Dredging, with full data as to coastwise Public Works.

Head of Mines Department.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 10. — How many men of British birth are to-day holding positions of trust within the bounds of the German Empire? Echo answers with conviction "none." How many men of German birth are to-day holding positions of trust within the bounds of the Dominion of Canada? Echo answers with complete knowledge of the facts, "many."

Numerous persons, not only of German parentage, but of German birth, whose relatives are fighting Great Britain on the Continent are in possession of positions of trust in Canada, yes even in the very heart of Canada, the capital. In fact, it is stated that some of them have not yet received full naturalization, and many of them only received it after the war commenced.

Knows Canada's Defences.

Probably the most conspicuous case on record is that of Gustav Heidemann, secretary of the Minister of Marine and Naval Service, Hon. J. D. Hazen. Mr. Heidemann was born in Germany, and no doubt has relatives fighting there. He has been a long time in Canada and is reputed as an able and efficient secretary. His name appears on the most recent list issued from the Secretary of State's department as having received full naturalization. But Mr. Heidemann has access to all correspondence connected with Canadian coast defence wireless, harbor pilots, and marine matters, which come to the office of the Minister of Marine and Naval Defence. It is not conceivable that Admiral Von Tirpitz would be so trustful in connection with the administration of his department.

Chief of Intelligence Staff.

General Sir Sam Hughes has boasted through the press that his chief intelligence officer overseas is a German by the name of Capt. Hahn. The duties of an intelligence officer are about, what the name would imply, and it is "intelligence" concerning the disposition of the Canadian troops which the German headquarters staff very much desire.

In fact it would save a lot of aeroplane reconnaissance work if that material could be got from somebody in the Canadian lines. Gen. Hughes states in defence of his officer that he is now in the front line trenches, and that in addition thirty-eight German Canadians have already died fighting for the allies' cause. No one doubts that there men may have been conscientiously fighting for the liberty of the world.

In the Post-Office.

It is related that very recently an altercation occurred in the postal note branch of the Post-Office Department between a man who had a son wounded at the front the other day, and another employe, whose name is Hermann Dohlmann, and who is reputed of German birth and origin. The irate father, whose resentment at the wounding of his son was not modified by the burning down of the Parliament Buildings, vented his wrath upon his German fellow-employe, and is said to have threatened dire reprisals upon his head if the Langevin block should happen to burn. Mr. Dohlmann retorted coolly by stating that he would discuss the war with anyone after it was over.

Kastella Heads Dredging.

A position of considerable emolument and influence in the civil service of Canada is that of Mechanical superintendent, of Dominion dredging. It carries with it almost a Cabinet minister's salary together with adequate expenses for travelling, for there is much travelling connected with it. In fact it is the duty of the superintendent in question to travel wherever there is dredging done in the Dominion and therefore to visit all the important harbor works which are under the jurisdiction of the department of public works.

This position, strangely enough, is now held by A. Kastella, who is of German birth and origin, and has the strongest possible Fatherland accent. Mr. Kastella's father and brothers are fighting for the great cause, but it is for the great cause as Germany sees it that they are fighting. And, Mr. Kastella was naturalized in September after the war broke out, and only after continued pressure had been brought to bear upon him by the Dominion police department. He has not held his present position for long, the duties of it being previously performed by a Toronto Canadian.

Director of Mines.

The head of the mines branch of the Geological Surveys is Dr. E. Haanel, a German by birth. He is reputed one of the ablest of Canada's public service, and he is in charge of all matters pertaining to mining matters in Canada. His duties take him to different places where mines are located.

Chief Botanist, Too.

Dr. H. T. Gussow, born in Germany, of German parents, is the chief Dominion botanist. Last summer Dr. Gussow was on Prince Edward Island during the time when there were rumors of German submarines in the gulf. He also conducted negotiations with the United States in connection with the potato embargo, which duties took him to the United States.

There are but a few of the examples of the supreme trustfulness of Canada in this hour of need. There are many others. Any similar trustfulness has not prevailed in England when men like Sir Edgar Speyer and Sir Ernest Cassel had to resign their Privy Councillorships.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 11—For Eyes, the Best is Cheapest

At a great many different stores a line of SPECTACLES is carried, and for a few cents, and up, you can buy a pair that SEEMINGLY give some assistance to the vision, when perhaps they are causing a strain on one part of the eyes to enable another part to do its work. These glasses have been selected by the simple means of trying on pair after pair till at last one seems to suit. There has been no test to try the separate power of the eyes, no distance test, and even if the best possible choice is made there is no guarantee of satisfaction, or redress if you finally find the cheap glass is useless. Compare this with Dr. Fowler's scientific "test and make sure" service, both eyes correctly fitted, with his high-grade Peblo Lenses, covered by his absolute guarantee, at his most moderate charges, and there can be but one conclusion, that the "Best is Cheapest."

Tells of Great Plain Black With Refugees

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—A letter written by Dr. Richard Hill, a member of the American Commission that went into the Caucasus to investigate conditions among the Armenian refugees who fled into Russia to escape the Turks, has been received by Dr. Samuel T. Dutton of the American Committee, under whose auspices the commission is working. Dr. Hill writes:

"I dined with a gentleman who had come up out of Persia about the time the last great exodus took place. He relates that he saw the great Erivan Plain black with a slow moving mass of humanity that seemed to fill and overflow the horizon. They must have numbered close to 250,000 and they were aimlessly, listlessly wandering in the torrid heat.

Children were dying by the hundreds, sometimes the frenzied mothers would, in their helpless mad grief, fling their children from them over the roadside into the fields, so as not to see the dying agonies of their emaciated and starved babies. Old women and men were dropping out by the roadside, too far gone to go another step. Epidemics had already appeared and were claiming their victims by the hundreds. From that throng, he said, there went up such an unutterable wail of woe and misery that he was compelled to close the window in his railway compartment to try to shut out the sound of that concentration of agony and pain.

"They had been on the march constantly for weeks. Children had lost their parents, parents their children. Out of hundreds of stories that are daily coming to hand it is hard to make a choice, for all alike are most touching. We hear, for instance, of Cossack transports picking up scores of little children left by the roadside to die, and of their bringing these in on their waggons, sharing their frugal meals with them; of women found dead by the roadside and a baby trying to waken the mother by pulling at her face and demanding food. Of new-born babies left just as they were born, carelessly flung aside the mother often dying shortly afterwards, or of a Russian officer out at the front sitting crouched over a little fire that he had made out of a few sticks, and of a little girl, stiff with the cold and hungry, slipping into the circle of heat of the fire, and without apology, snuggling up to him and going fast asleep in a moment in the kindly warmth of the fire, and of that officer sitting cramped for hours in order to let the little waif sleep in the folds of his big army coat.

"I have looked into the faces of hunted, haunted children prematurely old through the months of horrors that they have gone through; into the eyes of young women and girls, alas, too apparent the condition they are in. Hateful outrage and nightmare behind them, more and worse facing them, after a month or two."

How First Draft of Derby Volunteers Answered the Call

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The first drafts of England's Derby army mobilized to-day. Youths of years ranging from 19 to 23, who weeks ago answered Lord Derby's group system of enlistment, gathered throughout England to get into khaki. They came from workshops, bank desks, department stores and other walks of life. They are now being distributed in scores of training camps learning to form fours, salute their officers properly and wield the shovel and rifle.

There were remarkable scenes in London to-day. Recruits had been instructed to come in shifts at two-hour intervals. They flocked to the great central recruiting depot in Whitehall. The first recruit was a little early. He came from a big banking establishment where he had just bade fellow clerks farewell. He had been instructed to appear in his oldest clothes in order that they could be thrown away when he donned his suit of khaki.

The boy followed instructions. His coat and trousers might have been worn by a Weary Willie. His shoes were run down at the heel; yesterday he wore a morning coat and shiny silk hat to the bank; he had borrowed to-day's togs. A brief medical examination followed his arrival in Whitehall. Ten minutes later he left for a railroad station to join a regiment to which he had been assigned.

Six months from now the boy will be a full fledged soldier ready to go to the front. He will be bigger and broader and healthier. It's a ten to one chance that he'll never go back to the bank after the war. It's a one to ten chance that he'll go to Canada or Australia, where he can keep his lungs full of fresh air.

Hundreds of youths followed the bank clerk. Some were medically unfit and were immediately excused. The majority, however, quickly shed their rags for the olive green uniforms which they'll wear until the dawn of peace.

Hundreds of thousands of the Derby army men will be equipped at regular intervals from to-day on. They are more than enough to fill Kitchener's gaps, Lord Derby has announced.

DEATH DUE TO FALL

AVIATOR DROPS TROUSERS FOR EMBARRASSED FRIEND

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—A new illustration of how the amenities of warfare are observed by hostile airmen is given in a letter from a German aviator on the western front.

This aviator was a participant in an aerial battle in which a British aeroplane was shot down and one of the aviators killed. The second was uninjured in person, but, in landing, his trousers had been irreparably damaged.

The aviator thus afflicted, the German letter writer says, was so distressed that the German aviator mounted an aeroplane and dropped a note into the British lines. An hour later a British flier appeared, returning the call, and dropped a bundle containing new trousers for his compatriot.

APPEAL FOR CODERE.

Little Hope Held Out For Condemned Canadian Officer.

London, Feb. 11.—An appeal is being lodged against the conviction of ex-Lieut. Codere, now lying under sentence of death in Winchester for the murder of Sergt. Oxanne. Under ordinary circumstances the execution would take place on Feb. 28. Little hope is entertained of the appeal succeeding, but it will gain time. A petition for reprieve will follow. The condemned man's father and mother are now journeying to England. Codere seems totally indifferent to his position, declaring to one who saw him in jail yesterday that he would die like a man.

South of the Somme—Loaded Street Cars and Schools Appeared to Be Targets Aimed at By Zeppelins in Wednesday's Raid on Kent

LONDON, Feb. 11.—According to an official statement loaded street cars and schools appear to be the targets aimed at by Zeppelins in Wednesday's raid on Kent. There were no casualties.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Fierce battles have taken place in East Galicia. The Russians have penetrated enemy trenches northwest of Tarnopol.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Lord Northcliffe may accept a seat in the British Cabinet. It is rumoured he may be Minister of Aviation.

All Enemy Merchantmen To Be Treated As Warships

And Torpedoed Without Warning After February 29th, According to Announcement by German and Austrian Governments.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—New issues as grave as those revolving about the sinking of the Lusitania will arise between the United States and the Central Powers, officials here declared to-day as a result of the German and Austrian announcements that all enemy-armed merchantment will be treated as warships and torpedoed without warning after February 29.

It was stated on reliable authority to-day that Britain and her Allies under no circumstances will yield the right to arm merchantmen for defensive purposes, a practice recognized by all nations.

It is not believed here that the United States having already recognised this right will change her policy in the middle of the great war.

Should a German or an Austrian submarine, acting under the new instructions, torpedo without warning and sink a British or French liner carrying American passengers, the United States will take prompt and decisive action.

FIRST DEFINITE MOVE TO END THE WORLD WAR WAS MADE TO-DAY

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 11.—The first definite move to end the world war was made here to-day when a permanent committee to establish lasting peace met to formulate proposals for an armistice. Peace advocates from several neutral countries were in Berne for the meeting. The committee hopes to obtain the consent of the belligerents to an armistice of at least two weeks before the spring campaigns begin a fresh slaughter in Europe. They believe if the guns can be silenced for two weeks fighting will never be renewed.

Prince Buelow, former German Chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe and Baron Von Kraft, have arrived at Lucerne. It was reported to-day they are in touch with the peace movement here.

HUNS DISSATISFIED FEAR FINAL RESULT SAYS A NEUTRAL

"Do they suffer hunger? What is the economic situation? Are there still many soldiers? What is the feeling of the German people with regard to the war?" These and countless other questions are showered upon one on one's return home from a journey through Germany and Austria, and I shall give a sketch of my impressions and experiences of my journey. The following is an attempt to give answers by one who belongs to none of the belligerents, and who, apart from his personal sympathies or antipathies, believes that he possess the power to view the matter objectively and in accordance with the truth.

In almost every place, the villages not excepted, one saw one or more pointed roofs over which large Red Cross flags waved in token of the presence of wounded men. One's attention is also attracted by the almost entire absence of men of middle-age. On pasture and arable land the work is carried on almost exclusively by women, children and old men. Another thing that strikes one is the total absence of gold. When we left Germany at Bethheim our purses were narrowly examined, with the inquiry, "Have you any gold?"

What German Respects.

Between Cleve and Cologne a wounded German officer got into our compartment. He was decorated with the ribbon and the Iron Cross. We got into conversation, and he informed us that he had taken part in the Marne battle, but had only learned much later from the newspapers that the Germans had been repulsed there. "The two things for which we have the greatest respect," he said, "are, first, the French artillery, and, secondly, the Englishmen's fighting." I observed that the English soldiers had been called "mercenaries," etc., but he answered, "Yes, that may indeed be so, but they fight splendidly; they are all sportsmen." And of the French artillery he could not say enough. He stated that once he had had command of 80 men at some post or other on a road; he had not seen a single Frenchman, and he could offer no resistance, but in the evening he had only two men left.

From their newspapers, letters, and pamphlet every foreigner knows that the Germans were once animated by an intoxication of victory. After the fall of Antwerp it was said, "We go to Calias next week," and so on. Nothing remains of that temper. They are no longer jubilant, but rather they have become pessimistic.

Different Now.

The way they ask "How long do they think in Holland that it will last?" speaks volumes. Anyone speaking of the chance of Germany's losing last year received the brusque answer, "Out of the question." Now it is "God knows how it will end." If one speaks of the impossibilty of defeating England and Russia if those countries only hold out, and gives the reasons for this opinion one is answered, with looks of amazed reflection, "Can it really be so?" instead of, as a year ago, "We will, we shall." Several times we heard inquiries if, assuming that all the neutral countries desired it and could find a way of beginning, peace negotiations could not be opened. A merchant in the train said, "See how many dead and wounded—and why?" followed by abuse of "die grossen Herren" (the big men).

The number of soldiers one still sees in the German towns, while both in the east and in the west such gigantic armies are in the field, does certainly make an impression on a foreigner at the first glance; but it has to be remembered that a foreigner remains, as a rule, in the centre of the town, where the cafes and shops are, and that there naturally all the men on leave are accustomed to congregate.

On the way to Frankfurt we read a conversation with two wounded soldiers which was mainly interesting because it appeared from it so unquestionable that a great number of the soldiers have had more than enough and that there is a total absense of enthusiasm. Here also one heard the question, "Why?" asked bitterly, and, finally, there was open abuse of the diplomats and again of the "great men".

"Dear and Bad".

On the following day we proceeded from Frankfurt to Munich, and when a passenger in our compartment learned that we were Dutch he began—as, indeed, did nearly all with whom we spoke—with the remark: "Oh, really, Dutch! That's where we get all our fat and meat from." In Munich things are dear and bad. The sausages and the ingredients with which the food is prepared are not made more palatable by the frequent employment of substitutes.

I should say on the "Platteland" round Munich they ask themselves given more than elsewhere, "What are we really fighting for?" Secondly, they abuse England harder than elsewhere, but at the same time they understand less why they accuse England. Here also there is great lamentation about the dearness, and lively indignation that one gained so much from the war while another suffered want.

Roumania Threatened By Central Powers; Grain Deal And Irredentism Resented

MILAN, Feb 11.—The Secolo has received a delayed despatch from its Rumanian representative at Ungheni stating that the Vienna and Berlin Governments have formally notified the Rumanian Government that they regard the eventual election of two Transylvanian irredentist parliamentary candidates, to be balloted for at Galatz and Caracal, and furthermore the sale of over 80,000 waggon loads of grain to England as acts hostile to the Central Powers, which will take measures accordingly.

The Rumanian Government at once replied that the Constitution did not permit the Government to thwart the election of irredentist candidates to Parliament, the Government only having the faculty of nullifying such elections by declaring them illegal. Concerning the sales of grain, Bucharest answered that this was altogether an economic question and that the responsible authority must necessarily safeguard the economic interests of a country, which cannot be deprived of its sources of gain.

The latest messages report Bulgar and Turkish troops moving towards the Rumanian frontier.

Another message published in Rome from a German sources alleges that the Rumanian Government offered to compromise by supplying the Austro-Germans with an extra consignment of 100,000 trucks of cereals.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The tension between Rumania and the Central Powers appears to be approaching the breaking point, according to despatches from Italy and Rumania.

The Daily Chronicle's Marmornitz correspondent says that Vienna and Berlin are adopting a threatening attitude toward Bucharest and that there has been a sudden concentration of men and guns on the Bulgarian side of the western frontier, within fifty yards of the Austro-Hungarian lines.

It is also stated, the correspondent says, that the Central Powers have demanded "a neutrality favourable to the Central Powers," as well as the demobilization of the Rumanian army

THE PETERBORO' COUNTY BATTALION.

The Kaiser looked down,
And asked with a frown,
"Is the 99rd coming, I wonder?"
The Crown Prince answered
"Yes,"
Said the Kaiser, "I guess
This business is settled—by thunder."

"I have often heard
Of the strong 99rd
They are loyal, whole-hearted, and splendid.
And if they come here
We have reason to fear
That soon this great war will be ended."

I fear not submarines,
Torpedoes, or planes,
Or the men of all other Battalions,
But the 99rd boys
Are no Crown Prince's toys,
And my kingdom is sure to surrender.

So he'll saddle his horse
As a matter of course,
And make for his home without plunder.
And shout as he goes,
"The worst of my foes
Have come—as Peterborough County Battalion."

"So I'm conquered, it seems
In spite of my dreams
(To be monarch of Europe — my boast)
By this well-equipped host
Who will stick to their post—
The brave boys of Peterborough County Battalion."

So here's to the heroes
Who fought under Johnston
And made them a name that is glorious.
While we think of their fame
We shout till we're heard
"Three cheers for the boys of the 99rd."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

TO SEAL ITALY TO ALLIES

Premier of France Expects Much Good From His Trip.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The establishment of a closer and more fruitful collaboration between the Allies was indicated by Aristide Briand, the French Premier, as the chief purpose of his visit to Italy.

"I undertake this journey with the greatest confidence," said M. Briand to the Paris correspondent of the Corriere della Sera, of Milan, before he took the train for Italy. "I feel certain that I shall gain from your statesmen, who have given such splendid proofs of intelligence and wisdom, the strongest support in carrying out the task of establishing among the Allies a closer and more fruitful collaboration.

THOUSANDS OF BABIES DIE BEFORE ONE YEAR

It is estimated that thousands of babies die in this country before the age of one year, and it is stated that one-half of these deaths are needless if all mothers were strong and infants were breast-fed.

Expectant mothers should thoughtfully strive to increase their strength with the strength-building fats in Scott's Emulsion which improves the blood, suppresses nervousness, aids the quality of milk, and feeds the very life cells.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion; it is doubly important during nursing. No drugs. Every druggist has it. Always insist on Scott's—the white food-medicine. No advanced prices.

SALT AS A LUXURY.

In Most European Lands It Is Dear and Used Sparingly.

Along many parts of the Brittany coast where the land is low you may see the sea salt industry being carried on on a large scale. In the United States salt is cheaply produced at inland points by evaporation from salt water pumped from deep wells, but in most of the countries of Europe the bulk of the salt which is consumed is made by the evaporation of sea water.

Sea salt is not so pure as salt which is produced from wells, as it contains a percentage of salts of magnesium, potassium and lime, with traces of iodine and other elements in addition to the sodium chloride which is the desired substance. But it answers the purpose about as well.

The sea water is let into great shallow basins or ponds at high tide, the flow being controlled by gates. The sun, which shines very powerfully on the south Breton coast, gradually evaporates the water, and the brine becomes constantly stronger. More water is let in from time to time until a certain point of saturation is reached, and then the water is allowed to dry up, and the salt is left behind as a thin crust or coating on the bottom of the ponds.

The salt is then gathered by means of rakes and scoops. In this form, of course, it is very impure, for in raking it up a large amount of dirt is taken up with it. It is piled up, and in due course the action of the rain and weather serves to filter out most of the dirt, and the salt is left in fairly pure condition.

As you go along through the salt districts you will see hundreds of these white piles of salt, containing perhaps a ton or so each. The crude salt is finally taken to mills, where it is put through refining processes and made ready for market.

Salt brings high prices in most European countries. It is such a luxury that the people have to be sparing of it. You might wonder why this is when Europe has such a huge coast line and all that is necessary is to let the sea water evaporate under the influence of Old Sol to produce all the salt any one could want.

But here is where the law steps in. The government assumes that the sea is its property, and it will not allow ordinary citizens to make salt from it or in fact make any other private use of it without a license.

Poor fishermen in Turkey were put in prison because they boiled sea water and made their own salt. This illicit making of salt was against the law, just as the making of spirituous liquor without a proper license from the government is against the law in this country.

Bluntly Told.

A good story is told of the childhood of a noted singer. As a little girl she went to stay with a lady who gave her the family portrait album to look at. She turned the leaves quickly and in a few minutes closed the book.

"Don't you like it, my dear?" the lady asked.

"Yes, very much," said the little girl politely, adding, "We've got one at home, only the pictures are prettier."—Exchange.

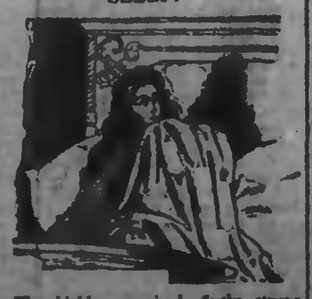
"WHY WOMEN CANNOT SLEEP."



The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which are necessary for happy womanhood, are only possible when the nervous organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restored womanly health as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription", invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce.

Chatham, Ont.—"A few years ago I suffered a general break-down and got very weak and thin. I was in an awful state. I was very much discouraged and at times thought I would lose my mind. I knew of Dr. Pierce's medicines so I got his 'Favorite Prescription.' It gave me immediate relief, and completely cured me in a very short time. My sister used it with good results also. She was in a very delicate condition. I got her to take it and two bottles cured her completely.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicines; they are all that is recommended of them."—Miss. Mabel Bryant, 87 Park Ave., Chatham, Ont.

The Janizaries.

The Janizaries were the most fearless soldiers the Turkish empire has ever known, and they were not Turks. It has been said that the most zealous religionist is the convert to the faith, and so it was with these converted Christians. When they took the faith of Mohammed under Sultan Orkhan in 1320 and formed the nucleus of his bodyguard they became the most extreme Mussulmans. It was they who stormed the walls of Constantinople in 1453, the city that had hitherto been considered impregnable.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Franklin's Fate Prefigured.

The fate of Franklin, the famous explorer, was unwittingly prefigured and on the eve of his starting on his last voyage at the hands of his own devoted wife. As he lay dozing on a sofa Lady Franklin threw something over his feet, on which he awoke in consternation, saying: "Why, there's a flag thrown over me! Don't you know that they lay a union jack over a corpse?"

Road Edges.

Experts estimate that unused land lying at either side of the country roads is capable in many cases of bearing 500 bushels of corn to the mile strip. Thousands of miles of the best European roads are only a rod wide, but Uncle Sam's edge trimming is largely a matter of theory.—Exchange.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities, which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes, and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

Boiled Nettles.

The countryman knows more about economy than the townsman when it comes to a matter of vegetables. A correspondent reports a conversation overheard in a village inn in Hertfordshire in this present year of grace. Vegetables were under discussion, and spinach was mentioned. "Not bad," one gourmet admitted, "but give me nettles," and inquiry has shown that the two are not dissimilar in taste. Another forgotten "vegetable" is the primrose. Primrose pasties were once a popular dish in Lancashire.—London Standard.

The True Enthusiast.

"Does your motorcar give you much trouble?"

"Trouble!" exclaimed Mr. Chuggins enthusiastically. "I should say it did! Why, repairing that car when it gets out of order is about the only real fun I get out of life."

The great fire of London in 1666 started in a house on Pudding lane and ended at Pierrest alley. Thirteen thousand two hundred houses were burned, including eighty-nine churches.

AT ALL STAGES OF LIFE

The Woman's Medicine, Good for All Ages, Mrs. Harold Smith's Experience.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—"I am writing to tell you the good your medicine has always done me and I hope my letter may be the means of helping some other suffering woman. When I was 16 years old I caught cold and had suppression for two months. I got so weak I could scarcely drag myself up the stairs. I went to two doctors, then my mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it. I never had any more trouble and got strong fast. Then I took it again before my little girl was born and it helped me a good deal and I give the Compound the credit for it. Then this spring I felt very badly again, but I took the Compound and have been well all summer. I cannot be grateful enough for your medicine."—Mrs. HAROLD M. SMITH, 470 Water Street, Clarksburg, W. Italy's Ancestral Glories.

Three times has Italy ruled over Europe. She has sat on the political throne under the Caesars, on the ecclesiastical throne under the popes from Gregory the Great to Leo X., and on the intellectual throne of the renaissance. These things every Italian family remembers. Augustus Caesar and Trajan, Hildebrand and Innocent III. Dante and Petrarch, Michelangelo and Raphael, Galileo and Bruno are in his mouth like household words. The Italian does not consider himself and us as equals; he accepts, he believes in, modern democracy, but deep in his heart he is an aristocrat, haughtily proud of his long descent and his ancestral glories. When thinking of Italians one must always bear in mind that they, out of all the peoples of Europe, have the most glorious past and that they are conscious of it to the quick.—Henry Dwight Sedgwick in Yale Review.

Balzac's Way.

Jules Sandeau related that one time while living in Paris Balzac locked himself up in his room for twenty-two days and twenty-two nights, refusing to see any one and keeping the curtains closed and the lights continually burning even in broad daylight. The only human being he saw during this time was his servant, whom he rang for when he felt the need of food, which he washed down with numerous cups of coffee. He would throw himself on his bed only when entirely exhausted from lack of sleep, and he remained in complete ignorance of what was transpiring outside, the state of the weather and even of the time and day of the week. He only freed himself from this voluntary captivity when he had written the word "End" on the last page of the manuscript he began when he entered his prison.

After Death.

It is irrational to think death ends all, for then life is gone and annihilated, and it is just as though it had never been. A life can in nowise be destroyed by death. What has once been experienced is an eternal and indelible constituent of reality never more to be erased or altered. It is a foolish doubt which Karl Moor expresses with the pistol in his hand, "If the paltry pressure of this paltry thing makes the wise man and the fool, the coward and the hero, the noble and the villain, equal"—That cannot be. Death severs the thread of the earthly life, but the content of life can neither be altered nor annihilated by it. Reality is eternal in its essence. Nothing that is real can, to quote Angelus Silesius, ever perish and cease to be.—Professor Friedrich Paulsen.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PLEASED WITH CHANGE.

South-west Africans Delighted to Come Under British Rule.

According to authoritative advices received from South Africa, the general situation in the conquered German South-West is a very encouraging one.

No little surprise appears to have been created among the general population by the manner in which British justice has been dispensed since the "great surrender," especially in the direction of establishing a state of equality before the law as between Germans and natives.

This feeling has been intensified by the recent punishment of a German for the shooting of a native.

The Hereros and Bastards are enthusiastic at having come under the Union Government and British laws. This, indeed, was evident by their behaviour as soon as the Union troops arrived in any of their districts.

In one instance the natives ventured to attack a German force, and there were some casualties on each side, when the Union troops intervened and stopped the fighting.

The Germans are accepting their lot with characteristic stoicism. They profess a strong conviction that present conditions will only last a few months longer. About 2000 are interned in the camp at Aus, which is strongly guarded, and no fears are entertained by the Union officials of any outbreak there.

The internment camp is in the sand-belt of the country, and, whilst there is water in the township itself, there is no other supply within 50 miles.

Moreover, while it is known that the Germans, after the manner of their kind, buried reserve stocks of munitions at various points in the provinces, there are no such stocks anywhere near Aus. Thus any outbreak, were one to be attempted, would be foredoomed to failure.

General Francke, the former German military commander, is on parole at his farm in the neighborhood of Karibib, and reports weekly to the local Union commandant. Ex-Governor Seitz, it is understood, has been repatriated in exchange for a prominent British civilian, who was a prisoner in Germany.

The civilian population now enjoys practically normal conditions. The agriculturists and the Army reservists who were called to the German colors on the outbreak of war were in many cases sent back to their farms with their stock when the Union forces advanced beyond Windhoek at a pace too hot for the removal of stock from one end of the country to the other.

The German authorities were all the more willing for them to go back when it was found that the Union troops were not burning or destroying, after the Teutonic fashion, and that enemy women and children were cared for and respected.

Food supplies were at the lowest ebb when the German surrender was tendered. Supplies from the Cape are now coming in freely at the ports and by the Upington railway line, but hitherto they have not reached the stores fast enough for stocks to be accumulated.

Food for the Union troops is sufficient, but for the present there are no delicacies. Bread and meat form the usual rations, with mealie porridge for breakfast. A wise regulation provides that all the news furnished in the country comes from Union sources.

Nothing Like Discipline and Drill.

That fine old English lawyer Sir Edward Clarke, K.C., put considerable heart into men who are getting on in years when he said the other day that since he had gone in for drilling as a volunteer soldier, he had never felt more fit in his life.

In Montreal, the members of the Home Guard, all men unfitted for active service, many of them elderly, or married business and professional men, say exactly the same thing. Sir Edward, by the way, relates a good story of the House of Commons. He was once on a visit to that famous place, when one M.P. described Ireland as a sheep-producing country.

"I wonder," said someone else jokingly, "whether a certain politician who has had some trouble over Ireland would wish all the Irish people to be converted into sheep?"

"Oh, no," echoed in another M.P., "because then he could not tax them."

Again, returned a quick-witted member who had been listening intently "surely he could fleece them."

Ancient Coins Found.

An interesting discovery is announced in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. It is a gold coin of Croesus the Lydian King, who reigned about 500 B.C., which was found in use as currency in Northern India. An Indian gentleman reports that he purchased the coin from a money-changer in Mari on the Indus. It is oblong with rounded ends bearing on its obverse the front part of a lion and a bull and on the reverse two square impressions, one of which is slightly smaller than the other. The gold coins of Croesus are the earliest coins known to have been struck in that metal. On the fall of the Lydian kingdom Persian Darics took the place of the Lydian coins in Asiatic commerce.

To Study Apes Again.

Richard L. Garner, who attracted so much attention twenty-odd years ago by his studies of the "languages" of the anthropid apes, has undertaken to secure moving pictures of the same animals (especially the gorilla and the chimpanzee) in Africa. He will also obtain motion pictures of other forms of African life, human included.

Rebels Released.

General Christian De Wet and 118 other Boer leaders of the German-inspired rebellion of last year, have been released from prison on the condition that they pay their fines, abstain from politics, and stay at home.

The watchwords for the New Year are "Duty, faith and endurance," and no man or woman has an excuse for not listening to the appeal.—Earl Curzon.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Simple Method.

I am a judge on the bench.

One morning when I was disposing of a number of cases, any one of which would make a refined and tender heart bleed, I saw a young couple, evidently still in their teens, come into the courtroom. Both looked sullen, and the girl wife especially wretched. Both were poorly clad, a consequence, I judged, of difficulties between them. The young husband gave every evidence of being able to make a living for himself and his wife except for some especial obstacle. The wife had a sweet face and was very pretty. While sitting on the seat of judgment, sending hardened criminals to their punishment, I kept my eye on this couple. Experience told me that one had come to make some complaint of the other's treatment; but, familiar as I was with real guilt, I knew that it did not belong to either. When I had disposed of the bulk of my cases I called the couple before me and without inviting either to state the difficulty between them I asked:

"How long have you two been married?"

"Just one year today," replied the girl sadly.

"And this is the anniversary of your wedding day. You come here with what you consider a trouble. Do you know that you have no trouble?"

There was no reply to this. Both stood mutely belying my statement by the misery of their appearance and the expression on their faces.

"How old are you?" I asked the husband.

"Nineteen, your honor."

"And you?" of the girl.

"Seventeen."

What should I do with this boy and girl to turn their antagonism into forgiveness and affection? Suddenly it came to me as an inspiration from heaven.

"Sit down there, side by side, and think pleasant things of each other. Mind, you are not to think anything disagreeable. If such things come into your heads, drive them out at once and begin again on something affectionate."

They did as I bid them, while I proceeded with the remaining cases to come before me. I still had my eye on them and found them an interesting study. The husband sat for awhile with a lowering brow, but he was evidently trying to do my bidding, and after awhile I noticed that it had relaxed. The wife apparently found it easier to think pleasantly of him, and presently I saw her steal a glance at him. It was anxious, pleading, loving. His hand was on the seat and partly covered by her skirts. Hers disappeared from view, and I knew that it rested on his. I waited a moment to see if he would withdraw his, and when he did not I knew that the case was won.

A pleasurable feeling came over my hardened judicial heart, and, looking from this comparatively innocent pair to creatures into whom only divinity could inject a mite of the good, I wished that I might be endowed with such divine power. I sent one who had inherited sin and had lived since birth in its environment to jail, another to the workhouse, a third I dismissed with a warning. Men and women, even children, I disposed of mercilessly. Then when I had attended to all I called the young couple before me.

"This is the anniversary of your wedding," I said. "You remember how happy you were on that day. You remember," to the husband, "how pretty she looked. Well, she is as pretty today, only senseless bickerings have kept you from work, and she is not so well dressed. And you," to the wife, "don't bother him about unimportant things, not importune him, but dust trouble off him every day as you dust your rooms. It is the wife's part. Now go and celebrate your first wedding anniversary."

They turned away, but I noticed that there was something on the man's mind. The wife came back and whispered to me:

"He has nothing to celebrate with."

I put my hand in my pocket and drew forth some bills. "This is for the supper," I said, "and this for the later tickets. Have a good time and don't ever come here again on such an errand."

As they left me the man had an abashed look, while his young wife's face was wreathed in smiles. As I looked at them I felt the justice in my charge to the girl that it was her part to ward trouble from her husband. Whatever he felt he had no ability to show; what she felt was as plain as the sun in heaven.

The case, though different from the thousands that came before me and refreshing as it was, had passed out of my mind when one day on taking my seat for my day's work I saw on my desk a cheap glass vase containing a bunch of ordinary flowers. Before it rested a card on which was written: "From the garden of our happy home. Second wedding anniversary of John and Mary Hilton."

Having no remembrance of John and Mary Hilton, I gazed at the plebeian gift puzzled. Looking up, I saw at the farther end of the courtroom a girl waving a handkerchief and smiling. Her face was familiar, and I knew she was bent on attracting my attention. Then it came over me that she was one of the couple I had by my simple expedient saved from a marital separation and its consequent miseries.

Once a year I find flowers on my desk, and once a year I am buoyed to endure the melancholy work which Providence has assigned me.

Victoria Water Lilies.

The giant water lilies which are known now as Victorias, after the late queen of England, are natives of the warmer portions of South America, where they thrive in lagoons and in the quieter portions of rivers. Haenke, a German botanist, first reported their discovery in 1801 and startled all Europe by his description of their gigantic leaves and flowers. Almost half a century elapsed in fruitless experiments to introduce the plant into the old world when in 1849 the first flower opened on the Duke of Devonshire's estate at Chatsworth, England.

Japan's Toothache Altars.

"Japan is dotted with shrines," said a traveler. "One that I examined closely resembled a little house about three feet wide and as many high, with a peaked roof and its front wall taken out. Attached to bamboo rods across the front were many slips of paper on which sufferers from toothache had written their prayers and promises to do acts of charity and kindness if the pain which brought them there disappeared. We were told that at least one toothache altar might be found in any Japanese town."

Did Him Little Good.

James W. Marshall, a native of New Jersey, was the first man to discover gold in California. It was in 1848 that he noticed a glistening object in the bed of a stream, which happened to be a nugget of gold. Notwithstanding this important find Marshall died in 1858 penniless and alone in his little cabin.

Many Women Suffer FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

TRANSLATORS' BLUNDERS.

"Lord, Kick Us Out, Softly, Softly!" as a Nunc Dimittis.

During the present year the following advertisement appeared in The London Times: "Jack F. G.—If you are not in khaki by the 20th I shall cut you dead.—Ethel M."

The Berlin correspondent of The Cologne Gazette was so greatly struck by this ghastly threat that he telegraphed the following version to his paper as a sample of the brutal English methods of recruiting:

"If you are not in khaki by the 20th I shall hack you to death."

The translation of hymns into barbaric languages and dialects is a ticklish business. "Go Labor on," in the language of the Congo, became "Go blunder on," but it was sung with equal gusto for months before the missionaries discovered the error.

Physical and spiritual ideas are a good deal mixed in the cannibal islands, and food and life are interchangeable terms. So when the missionaries translated "Wonderful Words of Life" they found that the natives sang and understood it as "Wonderful words of stomach!"

For some time the missionaries found that the closing hymn was sung rather charily. A good many of the congregation sang "Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing" in a distinctly chirping and weakly voice. What could it mean?

They found out presently that the literal translation of the well-known words of dismissal conveyed to the native ear not what they intended, but "Lord, kick us out, softly, softly!"

But translators can be wilfully in error. A certain law society in Edinburgh bought a baronial mansion for their offices and headquarters. The motto over the gate was "Olim amrte, nunc arte," which, literally rendered, means, "Once by war, now by skill."

When George IV. visited Edinburgh Sir Walter Scott was showman. The King observed the motto over the gate of the law society and asked its meaning. Sir Walter replied: "It means, your Majesty, 'Once robbers, now thieves.'"

The Dainty Muskrat.

The muskrat is one of the cleanest animals known. Not only is it careful of what it eats, but before eating a root or anything else the little animal patiently scrubs it free from dirt. Not until every particle is removed will it eat it. The name has had more influence in keeping people from eating the flesh than anything else. It is considered great fun to initiate a novice in eating muskrat. He is told that it is squirrel or any one of a dozen other animals to induce him to eat it. In ninety-nine cases in a hundred the novice is converted at once after the first mouthful and forever afterward never tires of singing the praise of the meat.—Exchange.

In Tropical Countries Liver Chill Very Common

In Northern latitudes also the liver is a very unruly organ and requires careful watching. The concentrated vegetable juices in Dr. Hamilton's Pills act directly upon the liver and stimulate its action to a normal basis. The blood is purified, the skin grows clear, headaches disappear and robust health is firmly established. No medicine for the stomach, liver or kidneys can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. box all dealers.

Nonroyal Headgear.

One of the attaches of an embassy at London once told a story wherein Michael Joseph Barry, the poet, who was appointed a police magistrate in Dublin, was the principal figure. There was brought before him an Irishman charged with suspicious conduct. The officer making the arrest stated, among other things, that the culprit was wearing a "Republican hat."

"Does your honor know what that means?" was the inquiry put to the court by the accused's lawyer.

"It may be," suggested Barry, "that it means a hat without a crown."

Then It Got Cool.

At a dinner in Dublin there were two sisters present. One had just emerged from her widow's weeds, and the other was not long married, but her husband was in India. A young barrister who was present was chosen to take the young widow to dinner. Unfortunately he was under the impression that his partner was the lady whose husband was in India. The conversation commenced by the lady observing how hot it was. "Yes, it is very hot," replied the barrister, "but not so hot as where your husband is."

GAVE LIFE FOR BLIND.

Sir Frederick Fraser Has Built Up a Great Institution.

Charles Frederick Fraser was born in Windsor, Nova Scotia, in the year 1850, his father being the late Dr. Fraser, M.D., the well-known and beloved physician of the countryside.

When a boy of six, while whittling with a penknife, he injured his right eye, and though every precaution that medical skill could suggest was taken to prevent the injury from becoming permanent, he finally lost his sight. Total blindness, however, fortunately, did not occur until he had gone to school for eight years to one of the best masters of the period, and although at great disadvantage, he was prepared to take the matriculation examinations and enter college. Finding that his sight was rapidly leaving him, his father sent him to the Perkins School for the Blind at Boston.

He was twenty-one years of age when he graduated from the Perkins School. It was then he was offered the position of Principal of the Halifax School for the Blind, which had only been opened a short time, and was in a struggling position. He declined. He looked forward to a business career.

Two years passed, but he had not as yet engaged in business. He kept quietly pursuing his studies. In the meanwhile he had not lost sight of the school. He was aware of its condition and its difficulties. He was ambitious to get on in the world, and there was not much glory or fame in being the mere pedagogue of a school for the blind.

But he faced the issue manfully and wrote to the Board of Managers offering his services to the school. In his letter to the Board he outlined a course of action for enlisting the sympathy and help of the general public, as well as the internal management, financial and otherwise. In concluding his letter to the Board, he offered to take charge, without salary or compensation, until such time as the school would be placed on a solid financial basis.

When he took charge, in 1872, it had but one building, with two teachers and six pupils. To-day there are five elegant brick and stone buildings, erected at a cost of $120,000. There is a staff of twenty-five teachers and instructors in different departments, ranging from music to kindergarten instruction, and an attendance of pupils from all parts of Eastern Canada, numbering, annually, about 150. Hundreds during the last forty years have graduated from the school and gone forth into the world of business activity. And the school directed and managed by Sir Frederick Fraser is now regarded as second to none of its kind in the world.

In one year from the time Mr. Fraser took charge there was a great change in the institution. A new force had taken hold of it. Money which had been impossible to get for new buildings, physical training, handicraft instruction, pianos, a library, and many other necessary things began to come in, because the sightless man at the head went after it. A fund was started to help graduates get positions. The grounds were enlarged and beautified. New buildings were erected. All these meant money and more money—which was obtained, because the man at the head understood from the blind man's "point of view" the psychology of the situation.

Then came the campaign to extend education for the blind over the province and to give blind children the same provincial rights in education as those who could see. The story of this campaign is an eloquent chapter in the life work of Sir Frederick Fraser, who, because of it was recognised as one of the real philanthropists of Canada.

Mohammed's Carpet.

Once a year a strange custom is observed in Cairo. A piece of carpet on which, according to tradition, Mohammed once sat and which is the most famous sacred relic of Islam is carried through the streets, and the khedive and his troops all receive it in review order and salute it as they pass. The relic is guarded most carefully at ordinary times, and the officer in charge of it each morning must salute it with his sword raised, while the bugler blows three blasts before it.

ONCE A BOBBY HIMSELF.

Princess Pat Sergeant Knew Something of the Business in Hand.

A big, in fact an enormous, sergeant of Princess Pat's Canadian contingent managed to dislocate traffic in Coventry street, London, recently, just about theatre time. With a woman and another soldier, he stood on the south side of the street waiting for a chance to get across. The traffic was apparently endless, as Coventry street is probably one of the most congested streets in London at just before 8 o'clock at night. The woman wisely declined to take a chance and dart between the vehicles as they sped on.

After waiting for several minutes and then seeing no apparent hope of a free chance of getting across, the sergeant authoritatively said, "Leave it to me."

He walked into the street with his hand up in a peculiar manner. The traffic instantly stopped. He then beckoned to his two companions, who made their way to the island in the middle.

On the other side of the island the sergeant again held up his hand and the traffic on that side stopped, and the soldier and the woman passed safely to the opposite sidewalk.

Meanwhile the policeman at the top of Haymarket found his traffic all mixed up. Somebody was interfering with his signals and orders.

In a fury he rushed the short distance between his point and the island, where the Canadian sergeant had been running things, and started to unload his congested epithets.

"What the blooming blazes," was as far as his anger got, when he caught sight of the sergeant's face. "Why, Bill, you old scoundrel," was the next phrase uttered in tones of kindly amazement, followed by affectionate handshakes between the two.

The sergeant, it seems, had been traffic policeman at that very spot years ago before he emigrated to western Canada, and the present Bobby was his mate.

While they shook hands and rejoiced at their unexpected meeting the traffic along Coventry street took care of itself far a few moments.

May Weddings.

In ancient Rome there was held in May a festival called the Lemuria, or feast of the Lemures, which was a ceremony in honor of the spirits or departed souls. It became with the Romans what we should call "bad form" to have matrimonial feasts at the season of a solemn ritual, being no doubt thought to be an insult to the dead to marry at such a time. From this a number of stories grew of the revenge made by the outraged ghosts upon those who dared to disregard them, and if anything unfortunate happened to a couple who had been married in May it would, of course, have been put down to retribution. So the repugnance to May weddings arose, and its influence has lasted ever since, even to our time.—Exchange.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Sage Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear; no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

England's Great Seal.

The great seal of England is, says the London Chronicle, a more elaborate article than most people imagine. It costs about $3,500 to make it, and it consists of two heavy silver plates, in one of which is cut the die for the front of the seal and in the other that for the back. When the seal is to be affixed to a document a lump of wax is softened in hot water and cooled in cold water, after which it is placed between the two plates and pressed. It comes out in the shape of a disk, with an impression on each side.

Formerly there was an official attached to the seal who was quite as proud of his office as the lord chancellor was of his. That was "Chaffwax," whose sole business was to melt the wax and to take the impressions of the great seal as often as required. The writer remembers the last of the "Chaffwaxes," a rosy cheeked old gentleman who lived long to enjoy the pension that a grateful country granted him for his important services. These services are now performed by an unnamed subordinate in the chancellor's office.

"TIZ" GLADDENS SORE, TIRED FEET

No puffed-up, burning, tender, aching feet—no corns or callouses.

"Tiz" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters, bunions and chilblains.

"Tiz" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "Tiz" brings restful foot comfort. "Tiz" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" now from any druggist or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

Facts About Bloodhounds.

No real reason exists for the common belief that the bloodhound is a fierce animal, ready to tear the person whom it may be tracking to pieces. It is, on the contrary, rather noted for its gentleness, even seeming timid, unless specially trained to attack.

The origin of the breed, according to Count Le Couteulx de Canteleu, the greatest living authority on the subject, is from St. Hubert of St. Hubert's Abbey in the Ardennes. It dates from the earliest ages, and the breed certainly existed in the time of the Gauls.

As regards the name bloodhound, the Count Le Couteulx believes that when fox-hunting in something like its present form was instituted it was found that the sleuth-hound was not fast enough for the purpose, and the present foxhound was evolved from various material, and about this time it became usual, in speaking of the old hound of the country, to call him a bloodhound, meaning the hound of pure blood (as might be said of a blooded horse) to distinguish him from the new hound or foxhound. There is only one breed of pure, genuine bloodhounds, and that is the English.

Big Medical Fees.

Half a dozen doctors are now being paid £5,000 a year by the Admiralty. Private practice is not forbidden, but duties.

On one occasion the late King Edward asked one of his medical attendants what a first-rate medical man would make, and was told that £15,000 a year would hit the mark. But the King's informant added that a big barrister would beat that by £10,000.

It is on record that for a journey to Petrograd to vaccinate the Empress Catherine II., the great Dr. Dimsdale received £10,000, an annuity of £500, and a Russian title. And much more recently, the Czar paid £15,000 to a Moscow doctor for two days' attendance.

But the biggest medical fee on record was paid to Dr. Gale, the blind medical electrician, for a few weeks' successful treatment of a millionaire's leg. He got £50,000.

The Spirit of Charity.

"I'm awfully sorry that my engagements prevent my attending your charity concert, but I shall be with you in spirit."

"Splendid! And where would you like your spirit to sit? I have tickets here for $2.50, $5 and $10."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Returned British Soldiers Tell of Terrible Treatment.

Men Exchanged as Unfit for Further Military Service Declare on Arrival in England That Wittenberg is by Far the Worst of the German Camps—Early Last Year the Prison Was Swept by Typhus.

THE terrible tales of life in German prison camps are told by exchanged British prisoners of war who arrived in England during the week from Germany.

By far the worst of all the German camps is Wittenberg, a point on which all the released prisoners are agreed. Early in the year the Wittenburg camp was swept by typhus. The German guards ran away, and the food was sent into the camp down shoots. Then six British officers volunteered to go to Wittenburg and treat the men. Five of them caught typhus, and three died.

Before the typhus was stamped out nearly 1,600 men died—a thousand Russians, 500 French and 99 British.

The wounded prisoners of war traveled from Germany by way of Roosendaal, the Dutch frontier station, and Flushing. Lying in the train cots at Roosendaal were soldiers who had fought in all the great battles of the war. There was a group of heroes from Mons, men wounded on Aug. 23, 1914, and the few following days. There was a young officer, Lieut. Ell of the 8th Royal West Kents, wounded at Loos a few weeks ago, with one arm clean amputated and the other cut off below the elbow. He was the brightest of all. "At all events I've got one elbow left," he laughed. 'And I'm jolly glad to be home."

The kindly Dutch were waiting for the ex-prisoners. Col. van Loon was there with a staff of nursing sisters and male attendants. The ladies of Roosendaal had come with food and tea, cigars, cigarettes, and fruit. They swiftly passed from car to car, giving every man all he wanted. "Tea," said one Tommy. "It's the first I've seen for 16 months." And he lifted the cup to his mouth and inhaled its fragrance as a connoisseur would a fine wine. Blessings on the ladies of Roosendaal! As they went on their work of mercy they seemed to me the most beautiful women I had ever set eyes on. Lady Johnstone, the wife of our Minister at the Hague, came bearing bundles of newspapers—perhaps the most welcome gifts of all—and with a cheery smile that brought sunshine as she went from man to man.

During the long pause at Roosendaal and while we were traveling on Tuesday from Flushing to Tilbury, many of the soldiers told me the story of their prison life. The most appalling tale of all came from 17 prisoners from Wittenberg, the notorious camp in Prussia on which the American Ambassador himself reported, so serious were the complaints. Among the men from Wittenberg whom I saw were Trooper Branch, of the 2nd Life Guards, wounded and captured at Dixmude, Sergt. Ward and Pte. Lee, of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, wounded with shrapnel and captured at Le Cateau on Aug. 26, 1914. Rifleman Parker, of the Rifle Brigade, also bowled over with shrapnel on Aug. 26 last year, Pte. Jones, of the South Wales Borderers, wounded at Poelcapelle, and Gunner King, of the Royal Field Artillery, Pte. Green, of the Somerset Light Infantry, and Pte. J. H. Riley, all wounded at Le Cateau. These men I interviewed individually and collectively. Their stories about Wittenberg agreed.

The camp at Wittenberg contains in all about 16,000 men, of whom under 1,000 are English, nearly 10,000 Russians, and the remainder French and Belgians, with some civilians. It has been conducted from the first in a brutal fashion. It is a threat in other prison camps, if a man is disorderly, "We will have you transferred to Wittenberg." During last winter the food was even worse than in other camps. Early in the year typhus swept the camp. The German guards ran away. They quitted the camp, left it to itself, and simply kept their guards outside. They sent the food over a sheet into the grounds to the prisoner cooks.

Hearing of the typhoid ravages, Majors Iry and Priestly, Capts. Vidal, Sutcliffe, and Field, and Lieut. Lauder volunteered, and were allowed to go there from another camp to attend the men. All those now living owe their lives to these six devoted officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps. Tragically three of the doctors themselves caught the disease and died, these being Iry, Field, and Sutcliffe.

Several prisoners captured in the early fighting had gruesome stories to tell of their experiences. Pte. Stanbridge, of the Queen's Royal West Surreys, was captured at Ypres, where his company was holding a line of trenches covering a retirement, and was surrounded. There had been a long fight, and the men were parched. "We asked for water," he said. "A bucketful was chucked straight over us. The fellows were so dry that they licked the wet off their coats. There were four Kilties and four Gurkhas in our party taken to Gustrow. At every place we stopped these were brought out for fun. The guards mocked at them, pulled their clothes about, and then kicked them back into their place. Pte. Pardon, of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, who was shot and captured in the first battle of Mons, said: "When the Germans first got us they treated us very, very badly. Our wounds were dressed as well as was possible, but our guards would kick our wounds, smack us in the faces, and knock us about. One thing they frequently did was to slash the legs of the Kilties with their riding whips as hard as they could."

EXPORTS HAVE GROWN.

Nearly One Hundred Million Added to Dominion's Output.

A decrease of $93,001,317 in imports and an increase of $91,283,933 in exports for the twelve months ended October is shown in a statement published by the Department of Trade and Commerce. These figures do not take into account the movement of gold, which shows a very heavy increase in the export column.

Imports for the twelve months totalled $421,584,000, of which goods to the value of $72,320 came from Great Britain, a drop of $32,700,000 in the imports of British goods. Imports from the United States amounted to $346,570,000, or $74,505,000 less than in the previous twelve months. Exports of merchandise totalled $550,548,000, including $41,455,820 of foreign produce. Exports to Great Britain amounted to $277,527,000, an increase of $73,000,000. To the United States, Canada sold goods to the value of $314,118,000, a rise of nearly $100,000,000. Imports from France dropped from $11,567,000 to $5,700,000, but exports to France increased from $8,940,000 to $27,620,000. To Belgium, Canada sent supplies of various kinds to the amount of nearly a million dollars.

The statement shows that $20,000,000 worth of hams and bacons, or about three times as much as in the previous year, went to Great Britain. It shows also that imports of tea amounted to $8,346,000, a 30 per cent. increase.

Exports of manufactures rose to $130,350,00, an increase of $65,000,000.

Laureate of the Lakes.

William Wilfred Campbell, popularly known as "The Laureate of the Lakes," is both a dramatic and lyric poet and a novelist. He was born at Berlin, Ont., in 1861, receiving his education at Toronto University and Cambridge, Mass. In 1906 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Aberdeen University. He was ordained in the Episcopal Church and was for a time rector of St. Stephens, N. B. In 1891 he entered the Civil Service at Ottawa, and for some years has been attached to the Dominion Archives Bureau with Dr. Doughty. He has written a great deal of verse for English, Canadian, and American magazines, his poem "The Mother" being placed by the Chicago Inter-Ocean among the gems of English literature. The same poem was referred to in Parliament in terms of commendation by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was presented to King Edward in 1906, and was present at the coronation in 1911. Among his best-known works are: Lake Lyrics (1889), The Dread Voyage, poems (1893), Mordred and Hildebrand, tragedies (1895), Political Tragedies (1903), Beyond the Hills of Dream, poems (1899), Collected Verse, Sagas of Vaster Britain (1906), Ian of the Orcades, historical novel (1906), Canada (in collaboration with T. C. Martin (1907), A Beautiful Rebel, historical novel (1909), The Canadian Lake Region (1910). The Scottish-Americas, reviewing the work of Dr. Campbell, said that as a dramatic poet he stands alone, supreme in his generation.

Logwood May Come Now.

An official announcement has been made by the Trade and Commerce Department that the situation with regard to shipment of logwood and dyes from Jamaica has been at last cleared up. Jamaica has now issued general licenses allowing the shipment of wood chips and extracts to all British, French, and United States ports. Canadian interests have been secured, in so far as is necessary for the obtaining of reasonable requirements from the United States. Logwood is permitted free exportation to Canada.

His Qualities.

"What makes you think Dauber will succeed as a painter?"

"He has the soul of an artist and the perseverance of a book agent."

The Grave of Cecil Rhodes.

"The grave of Cecil Rhodes, I think, is the most remarkably silent place I have ever visited," says Mr. Ambrose Pratt in his book, "The Real South Africa." "It is a serious though inspiring, somber, forbidding and desolately grand place. While one stands gazing at the tomb scores of lizards, blue, green and gray, crawl from the crevices among the rocks and steal like brilliant phantom streaks across the tor. They are almost fearless of intruders, but they make no sound. Sometimes the distant shrilling of cicadae wounds the stillness with a faint yet piercing dagger thrust of song. But soon and always the eternal hush returns, and silence reigns supreme again. The world is full of great tombs, vast and awe inspiring, but there is neither pyramid nor tomb nor monument in all the world which can equal that of Rhodes' sleeping place in simplicity and majesty."

Hospitable Anyway.

When Jones called on the Browns with an important message last night he had no umbrella. It was raining pitchforks, and he was soaked to the skin. Mrs. Brown was sympathetic and hospitable.

"I couldn't dream of letting you go away like that!" she cried. "You must come in and get dry and have some supper."

"Never!" demurred Jones. "I am soaked through and couldn't get dry. And I couldn't sit down at your table in these clothes."

"But Mr. Brown will lend you a suit."

"Wouldn't do. I'm twice as big as Brown."

"Well, he'll lend you two suits. He has a-plenty—come in!"—New York Globe.

Escaped Three Times.

Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, who recently received the birthday greetings of a grateful Empire, has three times escaped death by little short of a miracle. In 1880, when lieutenant on the Monarch, he volunteered to rescue the crew of a wrecked steamer off Gibraltar, but his boat was capsized and he swam ashore only after a terrific struggle. His second escape was from the ill-fated Victoria. The third and narrowest escape was during the Boxer rising, when he was shot through the lung, yet maintained a running fight against overwhelming odds for five days.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Purdie's Panacea.

Tom Purdie, an old manservant to Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books" and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels, and before I have read two pages it is sure to set me asleep."

Flooding the Magazine.

A flooding device to prevent the explosion of the powder magazine is fitted to most big battleships. By simply turning on a number of taps sea water is allowed to rush through pipes into the powder store, which is rendered harmless in case of fire.

The Idea.

"I see where a very clever dog is the star of a play lately produced."

"I suppose they did that to make it a howling success."

Colored Goldfish.

The artificial coloring of goldfish to meet prevailing tastes by keeping them in water containing certain chemicals is extensively carried on in Sicily.

Every base occupation makes one sharp in its practice and dull in every other.—Sir Philip Sidney.

MILITARY CURIOS.

How War Time Collections of Interesting Relics Are Gathered.

To-day few things are more treasured than the thousand and one souvenirs and emblems which emanate from our Army, and as Mr. Stanley C. Johnson points out in his interesting book, "Chats On Military Curios," whereas most forms of collecting require the expenditure of money, this is not one of the drawbacks which confronts the seeker after military curios.

"For a few pence," he says, "an old-fashioned bayonet can be picked up, a rifle bearing the date of last century will cost but a trifle more, while such odds and ends as badges and tunic buttons may be had for almost nothing."

Old curiosity shops and second-hand dealers who make a practice of buying up the contents of whole houses are good hunting-grounds. Mr. Johnson's favorite haunts in London are Rag Fair, held on Fridays in the Caledonian Meat Market; the stalls in Farringdon Road, Houndsditch, and Middlesex Street, the shops in Praed Street, and lastly, Charing Cross Road, the latter only for military books and prints.

At Rag Fair last Christmas Mr. Johnson picked up for half a guinea six perfect but much-begrimed medals, one of which was for the Defence of Lucknow—a set which was worth many pounds when cleaned and fitted with new ribbons. On a stall in Farringdon Street he recently picked up a few helmet badges, some of which bore the old regimental numbers used prior to 1881, at 2d. a piece. And elsewhere, a few weeks back, he chanced upon a bag full of military buttons, for which the dealer asked 1s.

"Medals, helmet and cap badges, tunic buttons, armour pieces, firearms, weapons of all kinds, so long as they have a military connection, medallions struck to celebrate military events, autographs of famous soldiers, original documents relating to Army work, military pictures and prints, obsolete uniforms, including such fragments as sabretaches, gorgets, epaulettes, etc., and many other military curios described by Mr. Johnson in his admirable book, are among the things which enthusiasts are adding to their collections to-day.

The Ideal.

Madge—Did he try to flatter you? Marjorie—Why, no, dear. He merely said I was the prettiest girl he'd ever met.—New York Times.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

PETERBOROUGH FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1916

YOU ARE GOING SOONER OR LATER WHY NOT JOIN THE PETERBORO BATTALION?

The British North Sea Squadron Is In Constant Battle Array

Everything is in Readiness For Instantaneous Action When the Wireless Cracks Out the Message "The German Fleet is Coming Out"---The Giant Battle Cruiser Tiger is Still in Action Despite Teutonic Reports to the Contrary.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER SUNK

With the British Battle Cruiser Squadron, Somewhere in the North Sea, Feb. 11.—Huge British cruisers, the fleetest scouting vessels, and a whole host of mosquito craft, are formed in constant battle line here, headed toward the sea.

They are jammed with men. Everything is in readiness for instantaneous response of the day the wireless cracks out "The German fleet is coming out."

Through the courtesy of the Admiralty, I was enabled to spend a day aboard the giant battle cruiser Tiger and the smaller cruiser New Zealand. The Tiger not only is larger than any dreadnought in the United States navy, but has a speed of thirty knots an hour. The Germans believe they sank her in the battle off Dogger Bank on Jan. 24, 1915. This report is said to have been taken to Germany by a Zeppelin that hovered ten thousand feet above the sea, bombarding British sailors while they were rescuing survivors of the German battle cruiser Blucher. The Zeppelin crew is said to have mistaken the sinking Blucher for the Tiger.

Scout ships for the British battle cruiser squadron are constantly at sea. They have accounted for several submarines which have attempted to enter the English haven. Thousands of men from ships occupy their leisure time making munitions and army supplies. They are the secret envy of their comrades with the grand British fleet because they have fought the only great action in the North Sea, and have the scars to show for it. The Tiger's armour is still bent from the impact of a shell, one of the last kicks from the Blucher before she rolled over and went down.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Norwegian steamer Vaarli, of 1,312 tons, struck a mine in the North Sea to-day and was sunk. Captain Koiel, chief engineer, and the second mate were drowned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Announcement will be made of Secretary of War Garrison's successor within twenty-four hours. He will be a Democrat. This information came from the White House to-day. It appears a dark horse probably will be chosen.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Major-General Hugh Scott, Chief of Staff of the Army to-day is Acting-Secretary of War, while President Wilson is making up his mind regarding a successor for Lindley M. Garrison, whose resignation announced last night startled Washington.

The immediate reason it was believed to-day was that Secretary Garrison considered humiliating the request from the President regarding the speech he was scheduled to make yesterday afternoon before the United States Chamber of Commerce. "Garrison," the President wrote, "should feel no hesitation about expressing the personal views of both these subjects, the Philippines and national defense," but he added: "I hope you will be kind enough to draw carefully the distinction between your own individual views and the views of the administration."

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Making his first statement as to his future plans since his resignation as Secretary of War, Lindley M. Garrison to-day declared he had retired from politics, and that he "could not conceive of his taking the stump against President Wilson."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Summing up the whole matter in a nutshell to-day, late Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge, intimated that the resignation of Secretary Garrison and himself was due to their belief that the militia system of National Guards, controlled by individual states, was no longer an efficient defence force for the United States, and should be supplanted by a Federal system. President Wilson was of another opinion.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE PETERBORO' RED CROSS SOCIETY

Society Voted on increased Amount to the Canadian Prisoners of War Fund—One Parcel is Forwarded Each Week—Statement of Receipts and Expenditures Hearty votes of thanks were passed to Mr. Might, of the Turnbull store, for his kindness in allowing the Society window space for their exhibit.

Arrangements for the lecture to be given by Professor Stephen Leacock on Thursday, 17th February, were completed.

The Society voted an increased donation for this month to the "Canadian Prisoners of War Food Fund," and is forwarding the sum of $250.

Mrs. Rivers Bulkely, who manages this department in London, for the Canadian Red Cross, is now sending one parcel per week to every Canadian prisoner of war, instead of fortnightly as formerly. The treasurer, Miss E. Morrow, presented the following financial statement:

Roosevelt Claims To Feel Annoyed

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Discussing the United States and Lusitania incident, Theodore Roosevelt waxed wrathy to-day. RECRUITING IS BRISK IN ONTARIO

January recruiting returns show anything but an abatement in enlistments, the Toronto division alone enlisting almost 7,000 men bringing the total for that division up to nearly 53,000. Reports from all divisions show that in the first month of this year nearly 1,000 men enlisted on an average per day. The London division enlisted 4,000 men, bringing the total for that division up to 20,000. In Eastern Ontario 25,000 men have donned the khaki.

New York Herald Says That United States Statesmen Are Posing as Sort of Half-Witted Beings

HAS LOST PRESTIGE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 11.—Under the caption, "The Crisis is Being Steadily Intensified," the Herald this morning says editorially:

"The Herald would be untrue to the public if it did not explain that the situation at Washington instead of being cleared by the reported understanding with Germany, is far worse than at any time since the European war began."

"The United States has suffered terribly in lost prestige in the last few days. But no one imagined that matters had been so manoeuvred by our statesmen supine under the influence of the German Ambassador, that we were now posing as a sort of a half-witted being, who had been slapped in the face repeatedly by German diplomatists at home, and yet who had been dragged into league with Germany for the destruction of merchant ships that do not conform to disarmament after March 1.

The presentation of the new instruments to the Band of the 93rd Battalion will take place a week from to-night at the Grand Opera House and will be a feature of one of the biggest and best concerts ever given in Peterborough. Not only will the band of the 93rd Battalion and the Peterborough Patriotic Chorus take part, but there will be a number of solos by well-known artists. Altogether it will be the musical treat of the season. Two thousand tickets have been issued and there is already a ready sale. The admission will be 25 cents.

The numbers by the 93rd Battalion Band will be as follows:

March—"Albion" ..... Dodsworth
Overture—"Poet and Peasant" ..... Suppe
Selection—"William Tell" ... Rossini
Descriptive—"A Motor Ride" ..... Bidgood
Synopsis—"Early Morning; Clock Strikes seven; arrival of motors; the start; a pack of hounds; collision; repairs at the Village Smithy; return home.
Saxaphone Quartette ... Selected
Bandsmen T. Smith, J. James, E. Keane, A. Tottenham.
Trombone solo—"Asleep in the Deep" ..... Petrie
Bandsman H. Gilbert
March—"Relief Column" (with bugles) ..... Farrell

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Battalion Orders by Lt.-Colonel T. J. Johnston, officer commanding the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.—No. 35.

Duties—Orderly officer for to-day, Lieut. Cook; for to-morrow, Lieut. McNab; for Sunday, Lieut. G. D. Mowat.

Parades—Saturday—6.30 to 7, physical training; 8.30 to 10, squad drill, sects. 35-46; 10 to 10.30 orderly room; 10.30 to 11, physical training, 11 to 12, march out.

Strength taken on—The following men having enlisted are taken on the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., and posted to the companies placed opposite their names from the date given:

Pte. M. E. Hartley, C Co., Feb. 10.
Pte. J. Dineen, C Co., Feb. 10.
Pte. C. Wiggins, A Co., Feb 11.

Attachment—Lieut. Grant D. Mowat, of the 57th Regt., having reported for duty and instructions as per division letter No. 5-D-35-4,35-2, is taken on the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion C.E.F., from Feb. 1st and posted to C Co.

Strength struck off—Private Adams having been found a deserter by a board of enquiry, is struck off the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion from January 15, 1916.

Private F. Tucker having died is struck off the strength of the 93rd O.S. Batt., from Feb. 7th.

Pte. R. Parker from A Co. to D Co., Feb. 11.
Pte. V. Dellen, from A Co. to C Co., Feb. 11th.

Promotion—The commanding Officer has been pleased to grant the promotion provisionally of Pte. James O'Brien to be Corporal D Co. from Feb. 29.

Repeat Order—Company commanders' attention is called to Battalion Order No. 14, Jan. 20th, re N.C.O.'s leave.

Divisional Letter—Divisional letter dated Feb. 5 requires that No. 43-367 Canadian K.R.O., or 451-462 British K. R. O. be read frequently on parade.

Company commanders will please take notice and act accordingly.

Transfers.—It has been brought to notice that in some instances officers of some unit of the C.E.F. have endeavored to entice junior N.C.O.'s and men of some other C.E.F. unit to exchange—offering promotion as an inducement. This practice is strictly forbidden.

It is published for general information that far too many transfers are being applied for. No transfers will therefore be authorized excepting in very special circumstances, such as in the case of brothers as laid down in Para. 345 K. R. and O. (C.M.) 1910.

Discipline—It has been frequently been noted at gatherings of men in uniform, that a large percentage fail to stand to attention during the playing of God Save the King.

It has also been noted that frequently when two or more men walking together meet an officer, the senior only, salutes.

Commanding officers are requested to have these omissions corrected at once.

Retreat for the ensuing week will be sounded at 5.40 p.m.

Adjt. 93rd Overseas Batt., C.E.F.

The Norwood Register says: At the meeting of the Norwood Women's Institute on Saturday, the Agricultural Office was filled to the doors to hear Sergt. Allen, of Peterborough, and late of the 10th Battery, C.E.F., describe his actual experiences at the front. His address, which lasted over an hour was not only thoroughly interesting but instructive, and throughout he held the rapt attention of the children as well as those of more mature years. The only regret was that the room could not accommodate more, for many were disappointed because they could not gain even standing room. After Sergt. Allen was wounded he was fourteen days recovering his senses and was paralyzed for several months. Such men as Sergt. Allen, who has done his "bit" at the front, and with his gentle persuasive manner, would make good recruiting officers. His experience showed the great need of more courageous men at the front.

The squad of the 93rd stationed in Havelock was entertained on Tuesday, Feb. 1st, by the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist church there. About seventy-five men sat down to an oyster supper at seven o'clock. A very happy social hour was spent and shortly after eight o'clock the men settled down to the programme of the evening, which was provided by local talent, military and civil. The pastor of the church acted as chairman. The president of the class and Lieut. Worth addressed the men. Messrs. Harry T. and William J. Andrews delighted all with recitations. Solos were rendered by Messrs. Black, Danard, Lewis and Pickering; a trio by Pies. Black, Balfour and Ruttan, and a cornet solo by Mr. J. Carter. Mrs. Danard kindly acted as accompanist. "Enthusiastic" is a word quite inadequate to describe the manner in which PROPOSED CHANGE IN STREET CAR SERVICE.

Cars Will Stop Before Crossing Intersecting Streets — Committee on Railways Approve of This Scheme—Want Round House Removed.

WILL ISSUE WARNING

The Railways Committee of the City Council met last evening, and decided to have City Solicitor G. N. Gordon prepare the necessary papers, authorizing the Peterborough Radial Railway to stop their cars before crossing intersecting streets. As it is now, cars stop on the far side of the crossings. This may prove an objectionable feature in muddy weather, unless passengers are permitted to enter the front end of the car, which is hardly likely, as some of the cars now in use are of the pay-as-you-enter type. It is claimed that the proposed change will minimize accidents as it will give the motorman a chance to look each way along intersecting streets before crossing over.

The Company will also be informed as to a number of complaints regarding the speed of the cars on some of the outlying lines, and also as to the apparent need for an improved service in the west end of the city.

The Roundhouse.

The Superintendent of the G.T.R. will be asked if there is any possibility of having the roundhouse located at Bethune and King streets removed, as some of the residents in the vicinity complain of the nuisance caused by the noise and smoke from the locomotives.

City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to write to the superintendents of the schools, managers of factories, and to the clergymen of the city, and ask them to have the people advised of the danger of trespassing on railway tracks. Chief of Police Thompson will also be asked to warn people against this practice and to discourage it.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will be asked whether they will construct for this city or permit the city to construct a footbridge in connection with their bridge over the Otonabee River, and if so, that they be requested to give an estimate of the cost of such a footbridge and the conditions upon which they will maintain it or permit it to be maintained.

ARE SUPPRESSING NEWS OF TROUBLES

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Mailed stories from the United States correspondence, in Berlin, indicate that the German censors are rigidly suppressing stories of food riots, butter shortage, and criticism of the government by the Socialists in the Reichstag; also peace discussions. On January 11th, in the Reichstag, the Socialists bitterly attacked the Government because of dissatisfaction with the way things are going on, but the correspondents were not permitted to cable one word about it.

CALGARY RIOT IS BEING PROBED BY THE OFFICERS

Soldiers Stormed and Wrecked Two Restaurants Because They Claimed Returned Soldiers Had Been Dismissed For German

CONFINED TO BARRACKS

CALGARY, Alta., Feb. 11.—Brigadier-General Cruikshanks, formerly of Niagara Falls, Ont., now commanding this military district, has commenced a rigid investigation into last night's riots, when four hundred soldiers brushed aside the city police and stormed, looted, and wrecked two restaurants, where it was rumoured the manager had dismissed returned soldiers and substituted Germans. All troops here are confined to barracks to-day. Some officers assert that although many soldiers were in the mob the real damage was done by their civilian friends.

CALGARY, Alta., Feb. 11.—Following last night's riots by soldiers and civilians, in which two restaurants were wrecked by the infuriated mob, with a damage estimated at $30,000, the management of Croon's Rathskeller, one of Calgary's higher class eating places, was warned this morning that unless a large electric sign bearing the word "Rathskeller," was taken down at once the place would meet a similar fate as the other two restaurants. The sign was removed this afternoon.

BROCK STREET RINK TO-MORROW NIGHT

Refreshments to Be Served by St. Paul's Auxiliary to the Red Cross

With three nights of hockey over to-night, skating enthusiasts are looking to to-morrow afternoon and evening to get on the ice again at Brock street rink.

There will be a special attraction to-morrow night in addition to the 93rd Band. The St. Paul's Church Auxiliary to the Red Cross is serving refreshments in the ladies' waiting room for the benefit of their fund, and as there will be no charge for non-skaters to-morrow night, no doubt a large number as well as the skaters will drop in for a hot drink and sandwiches or roll. Don't forget Brock street rink to-morrow afternoon and evening.

17 Below Zero Last Evening

Cold Wave Strikes Peterboro'—Was Five Degrees Below This Morning

This morning at daybreak the thermometer registered 5 degrees below zero. It had been much colder during the night as the self-registering instrument marked 17 degrees below as having been recorded since last evening. This is the lowest figure of the present season, the previous lowest figure having been 11 degrees below.—W.P.

KITCHENER TO STAY.

Not to Leave Cabinet for Egypt or Other Campaign.

London, Feb. 10.—The report that Lord Kitchener is soon to leave the War Office, and is to be succeeded by Lord Derby, was denied in well-informed circles to-day. It was stated that no changes in the ministry are being contemplated. It was also denied that Kitchener will go to Egypt in the near future.

A SUBSTITUTE.

Ontario has lent her mace to Ottawa. We must have it back before a session of the Legislature can be held. The work of law-making and speech-making cannot go on, constitutionally, without the mace—the symbol of our parliamentary liberties and of the dignity and decorum of parliament. At a pinch, however, things might go on without a mace. If Mr. J. R. Fallis, the amateur horse buyer, is elected, as he probably will be, a white-washed representative, would be a new symbol of a popular ideal of patriotism and of qualification for a place of responsibility and trust. A calcimined member might in the view of the electors of Peel, be a good substitute for a gilt "bauble," as Oliver Cromwell considered it.

WORTH FIGHTING FOR.

Sir Henry Smith-Dorrien has, on account of ill health, resigned his command of the British troops operating against the Germans in East Africa; and the British government has filled his place by the appointment of General Smuts. Both are veterans of the South African war. A dozen years ago they were fighting on opposite sides, one to maintain British interests and ideals, the other to supplant them. The General Smuts was conquered by force of arms; but later he was conquered by a much greater and beneficent force—British magnanimity—the conception to the conquered of self-government and free institutions of the British brand. Is not the genius of British freedom which gives freedom to all men; makes friends of foes; a priceless boon—that has made the world a place worth living in — something worth fighting for, especially when it is attacked by a power whose object is to subvert all that British civilization stands for, and whose ambition is to impose its policy of organized brutality and denial of human liberty, upon the rest of the world. The British idea is especially worth fighting for in Canada, which, if it does not do its share in the fight, would come, with German success, under German domination. Every Canadian capable of fighting is called upon to fight if he would preserve to himself his home, his kin his country, his empire and the world, the free institutions that make Canada, with its resources and opportunity the noblest home on earth.

SAFETY FIRST.

The influence of the widely placarded and employed motto, "Safety First" is an evidence of the efficiency of the process of hammering in an idea. We see the motto, "safety first," placarded about our railway properties, on the street hoardings and in the press, till it has become a by-word amongst, and an influence in, popular life. We have our associates and companions quoting "safety first" in a way that shows it has become an influence and motive in every day life. If we ever had need to take this motto to heart in a national sense, the incendiary destruction of the Parliament Buildings furnishes it. We are putting on guards at munition and war supply plants, where we never had them before, and doubling guards where they were before employed. We do this as a proper precaution. Such precautions may not be necessary; but with a proper spirit of prudence we are, according to the vernacular, "taking no chances." We are guarding against the danger of outrage, by the emissaries of Germany.

We know these plotters of outrages are busy all about us in our own country and in the neighbouring country; in this respect a dangerously convenient country. We know too, that Germans, or men in sympathy with German ideals and methods, are not to be trusted. We have had evidence that these persons have moved amongst us unsuspected and even respected, but have proved wolves in sheep's clothing. This is a time of justified suspicion, when we do not know whom to trust; we have had ample warning of the danger of trusting anybody having the least association or connection with a country whose name is the synonym for deceit, lying, spying, plotting and outrage.

We have men of German birth, occupying positions of public trust, under the government of Canada. These men may be perfectly trustworthy—or again they may be emissaries of a country which places, and has placed in all allied countries, skilled agents of the most dangerous character—men of education and ability and shrewdness, and cultured in the German way of perilous proficiency. Should men of German birth, and German possibilities of deceit be retained in the service of the government of Canada and in positions where, if so disposed, they can be of the most use to Germany and of the greatest danger to Canada?

It may be an injustice to suspect these men, and a hardship to replace them, but there are interests at stake that justify stern measures. We should "take no chances." The present government should not feel diffident in filling the places of these men of German birth, possible German sympathisers, if not spies, with loyal patriotic Canadians. A government that cut off heads of employees by the thousands in the interests of party, need not hesitate in making a few dismissals in the interests of patriotism—in the interests of the safety of the country. It seems unthinkable that we should have possible German spies and plotters occupying positions of trust, paid by the people they may be plotting to blow up; and keeping as capable and unquestionably loyal and patriotic Canadians "out of a job." One does not want to be unduly severe and unduly exacting, but one thing we should exact is first regard for considerations and procedure that will promote national safety. It may be considered a harshness and a hardship to vacate a fat office in the interests of public safety, but it will be a much greater wrong and outrage and hardship to see our great public buildings and factories and public works blown into the air; and a much sadder thing to follow our thus murdered dead to their graves. If these things come from a criminal trust in persons of a nation that cannot be trusted; from giving criminal opportunity, and virtual encouragement, to the emissaries and agents of our inveterate enemy.

PROVINCIAL PRESS VIEWS ON THE FALLIS CASE

Toronto World, Feb. 5th, 1916: "Should he be re-elected that will be the end of any attempt to better political life in Canada. If he comes back De Witt Foster will come back to the Commons from Nova Scotia, and Mr. Garland from Carlton; and Sir Robert Borden and the whole Conservative party will be that much discredited."

Toronto News, Dec. 7th, 1915: "Horse trading in time of war, which robs the country, is an offence which even with all the traditions in its favour, cannot be overlooked. Moreover, when a representative of the people fills his pockets by dishonest methods he proves himself unworthy of public confidence and unfit for public position."

Toronto Star: "The party convention in Peel which nominated Mr. J. R. Fallis to be returned to the seat in the Legislature from which he resigned after the enquiry before Judge Davidson had revealed the nature of his dealings in connection with the purchase of army horses, did a poor day's work for the country.

Toronto Globe: "The electors of Peel should resent the attempt to cram Fallis and the Fallis toll gate down their throats. . . . Is that the type of public men Peel wishes to see in office? Is "pull" to count for more than principle?"

Hamilton Herald: "J. R. Fallis, M.L.A., for Peel, has presented to the Peel Overseas Battalion the money he made on the horse deals, which Commissioner Davidson condemned, and the Executive of the Peel Conservative Association has officially vindicated Mr. Fallis. It won't do. The offence shows through the whitewash."

Brantford Expositor: "Fallis committed no illegal act, but he used unfair means to turn the necessities of the nation in war time to his own private advantage, and, therefore, deserves the condemnation of all patriotic Canadians."

Hamilton Times: "While men are giving up their lives for the Empire, and men and women are daily making sacrifices on their behalf, we hardly think that they will approve of the action of a man who tried to make money in this way out of the agony of the country. If Fallis is elected, then Garland of Ottawa, and Foster of Nova Scotia, may as well be returned to Parliament."

Windsor Record: "Mr. Fallis lacks the fine perception to distinguish between the duties of an honorable representative and the personal profiteering of the arch-self politician."

Woodstock Sentinel-Review: "After the thing was exposed—some time after—he handed over the money he had received to an overseas battalion, thus admitting that he had no proper claim upon it. But if it was not his to keep it was not his to give away, and it is difficult to see how he could relieve himself of his responsibility in such a way."

Guelph Mercury: "Mr. Fallis would have done much better to have quietly dropped out of public life. When a country is facing the greatest crisis in its history, the demand is for big men at the head of affairs. Mr. Fallis has demonstrated, in a rather painful manner, that he is not of this type."

THANKS CANADIAN EXPRESS COMPANY.

A letter has been received to-day at the headquarters of the Canadian Express Company, through the European Traffic Department, London, England, from Lieut.-Col. D. W. B. Spry, A.A. & Q.M.G., Canadian Training Division, dated Shorncliffe, Jan. 9th, 1916, which reads as follows:

"I have pleasure in complimenting all concerned at the very satisfactory manner in which Canadian Express parcels for Canadian Troops at this station have been handled. It may be stated that at 10 a.m. on Christmas Day every parcel received up to that time had been delivered to the Unit to which addressee belonged. I take this opportunity of complimenting your representatives at Folkestone for the very courteous way in which they met the suggestions made by the Canadian Military authorities, and for the splendid co-operation which they gave to our plans."

Lessening the Trouble.

"These are the smallest sandwiches I ever saw for the money," complained a tourist in a seaside restaurant.

"Yes," replied the waitress; "there was so much complaint of the quality of them that I thought I would make them smaller, so that there would not be so much to grumble about."—London Globe.

A Matter of Improvement.

Mr. Henry Clay Pinckney, an Afro-American of deepest ebon hue, lay very ill. The mistress of the plantation called to ascertain his condition. "How is your husband this morning, Marinda?" she asked.

"Mis' Jane," was the reply, "dey hain't no imp'rovement one way or de yudder."—Argonaut.

What France Missed.

France once refused the services of a famous soldier. In the French archives is a letter, dated March 29, 1674, which runs: "Sir—This letter will be handed to you by M. Churchill, whom I presented yesterday to his most Christian majesty as from the king of Great Britain, with a petition that he might be granted a commission as colonel of infantry in his majesty's service." The "M. Churchill," whose wish was not granted, lived to conquer at Blenheim and Malplaquet.—London Standard.

Sports and Slang.

One of the most fertile sources of slang is found in our sports. When a man breaks a shoe lace when he is in a hurry he goes to the golf game for the expression, "I'm stymied."

Other expressions which have their origin in sport are "to get by," from football; "serve a hot one," from tennis, and "slip one over," from baseball. Then from the great national game we draw such phrases as "auto up," "stand pat" "raw deal" and "all in."—Pittsburgh Press.

The Value of a Reputation

The skipper of a British trawler who refused to take on board the crew of a Zeppelin which had been winged and was floating helpless on the sea, decided for himself, as he had a perfect right to, the line of duty he held to be expedient for him. The crew of nine men on his unarmed fishersboat had no weapons of any kind and did not find at all alluring the prospect of taking twenty-two lusty Teutons on their craft each of whom may have had a pistol in his pocket. Their airship had started or was returning from a raid on England, and they would have felt a natural reluctance to go there for interment during the rest of the war. The skipper, unskilled legician though he was, possessed a noetic faculty somewhat highly developed for an untutored man, and considered it more than likely that his passengers would throw him and his fisher crew overboard, and navigate the craft to a German port.

Naturally the Teutons protested that they would not do such an unkind thing as that, and represented themselves as men of rare and remarkable scrupulosity in matters of this sort. But the skipper was a cautious man. Experience had taught him that everything that glittered was not gold and that everything that sounded like verocity was not truth, or gold and truth would both be commoner and cheaper than they were. He bethought him of the pean of joy that would go up in Germany when the Zeppelin crew sailed into Wilhelmshaven with their captured ship and lined up on the wharf to receive the iron crosses their clever strategy had earned them. He reflected that people for whom a treaty was a scrap of paper would not be likely to consider as of binding obligating a mouthful of hot air, and having his life, his craft and his reputation for sagacity at stake, he considered it unwise to risk them on such security. It might be a safe investment, but it was the only life and craft and reputation he possessed, and he thought it imprudent under the circumstances to make the venture.

The fact of the matter is that reputation for honour is a flower that can be raised only by assidious culture from pedigreed seed. When once perfected it is a rare and beautiful bloom of priceless value, worth all the trouble it cost to grow it; but it cannot be developed hastily to meet a sudden need. There must be a life of earnest endeavour behind it. We need not argue that the instantaneous generation of a fine sense of honour is not among the possibilities. It might occur and in the most unpromising soil; but the reputation which makes a spoken word pass current as readily as a coin with an eagle and olive branch on it is of painfully slow growth. As the bishop of London sadly but impressively put it: "The Germans have killed chivalry in warfare." The ideals on which their government acts are supposed to be their own; and while this supposition does great injustice to hosts of individual Germans, it is the only hypothesis on which their enemies consider it safe to act. Frightfulness being a national policy, the burden of proving that it is not an individual policy rests upon the man who says it is not, and satisfactory evidence on this point is not always easy to advance.

There are many Americans who refuse to believe that the great Teutonic peoples who have so many excellencies of character will long endure a government whose redreance to principle is accepted as conclusive evidence that its citizens do not keep their faith. Germans, and there must be many of them, who are as high minded as the noblest nationals of other lands will not forever be content to be branded with unmerited infamy and cut off from eternal friendly and commercial intercourse with other peoples because they tolerate a government with which no nation can safely enter into the relations of peace.—Rochester Post.

Keir Hardie's Rough Attire.

James Keir Hardie, the British labor leader, never relinquished his working class garb, and many were the occasions when his rough attire led to mistakes on the part of others. One story is that Keir Hardie, then many years an M. P., was challenged by a policeman outside the house of commons. The officer asked Mr. Hardie if he was working there. "Yes." "On the roof?" (which was undergoing repair). "No," answered the leader of the Independent Labor party, "on the floor." Another time a landlady refused to let him have rooms until he gave references. He looked too rough. The good woman was astonished when Mr. Hardie named a number of the most prominent men in parliament. He was arrested in Belgium once on suspicion of being in collusion with a notorious anarchist whom the police had detained. The Belgian police never could understand why a British M. P. was not elaborately attired.

How to Slay a Grudge.

"I forgive you once, and I won't forgive you again." This is what we heard one brother say to another who had unwittingly broken his chisel for the second time. He would not listen to an explanation. "You shall not use another of my tools," he continued. The next day he wanted to borrow a book from that brother. But before he asked for it he remembered he had said he would not lend his tools any more. He said to himself: "Well, I don't care if I did. He owes me something for breaking the tool, so I will just ask for the book." And he did. "Certainly you can have it and keep it as long as you want it," replied the brother without one bit of grudge in his heart. The effort was good, for the very next day he asked his brother to go with him into the tool room, and there he said, "You can use any of them if you wish, only please be careful not to break them." The grudge had disappeared.—Christian Herald.

The Oldest Death Sentence.

The oldest death sentence extant is found in the Amherst papyri containing the trials of state criminals in Egypt, about 1300 B. C. The criminal in this case was found guilty of magic, which his judges state "was worthy of death, which he carried out, and he killed himself," apparently by stabbing, as in the Japanese harakiri, which is also of very ancient origin.

Among less civilized peoples drowning would seem to have been the earliest method of legal punishment, for about 450 B. C. the Britons killed their criminals by throwing them into a quagmire. Of other than capital punishments the oldest recorded comes from Chaldea, where it was enacted some 6,000 years ago that when any one maimed a slave "the hand that thus offended should pay him each day a measure of corn."

Her Example.

"The hen is at once a model, and a rebuke to human beings of overweening ambitions."

"How so?"

"Although the rival of the American eagle himself as a great national institution, her highest ambition is to keep on scratching for a living."—Baltimore American.

The Nerve of Him.

Young Alfred had been reading the evening paper and paused contemplatively for a few moments.

"Father," said he, "what is 'inertia?'"

"Well, if I have it, it's pure laziness, but if your mother has it it is nervous prostration," responded father, with a yawn.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mystery of Stonehenge.

Stonehenge, on Salisbury Plain, which has lately been sold by auction, was at one time counted among the four wonders of England.

As long ago as the 12th century Henry of Huntingdon classed it thus, and even in these days of marvels it still ranks as one of our greatest "show places," and one of the unsolved riddles of the world.

Why and how it was erected has always been a matter of dispute and puzzle among historians and archaeologists. No one knows when it came into being or why people built it.

It has been attributed to the Phoenicians, the Druids, the Saxons, and the Danes, by various authorities, while the object of it is equally uncertain. It has been "recognised" as a temple of the sun, a temple of serpent worship, a shrine of Buddha, a gallows, and a calendar in stone for the measurement of the solar year. The general belief nowadays is that it was a place of burial during the bronze age.

How these huge masses of stone—the largest stands about 23 feet out of the ground—were in primitive times placed in position or brought the many miles which are between Salisbury Plain and the nearest seashore has never been satisfactorily explained. The labor involved must have been stupendous.

Hymns in the Trenches.

Brig. McKenzie, Salvation Army chaplain with the Australian forces, writes from Gallipoli: "I had three meetings yesterday, and all of them were very helpful, profitable seasons. At night, 'mid the booming of the guns, we sat on the hillside in the fading twilight, and as we sang the familiar hymn, 'Jesu, Lover of my Soul,' the strains of the grand, helpful prayer wafted down and around the valley, and it was taken up by the men on all sides.

The sentries standing on guard at the mouths of the trenches nearby, with bayonets fixed, likewise joined in the refrain, and while we were singing, 'Plenteous Grace With Thee is Found,' a platoon of armed warriors marched right past us to take up their position in the support trenches, and they, too, passed on singing 'Let the healing streams abound, make and keep me pure within.' Men realize as never before that the most manly thing to do is to worship and glorify God."

Lady Lawyers.

In England women are debarred from practising either as lawyers or barristers, though in 1913 many efforts were put forth to open these closed professions to women. Our Colonies have shown far more gallantry in this respect, and in Canada, Western Australia, and India women are practising successfully as barristers. France has several distinguished women advocates and one judge—Mlle. Jusselin, whose special province it is to try disputes between employers and employed. South Australia now leads the way in being the first of our Dominions to appoint women justices of the peace. Among them is Mrs. Price, wife of the late Premier.

The Fruit of Experience.

"The longer I live in this world," observed Mr. J. Fuller Gloom thoughtfully, "the more I am surprised at the enormous amount of good advice that I can get along without."—Woman's Home Companion.

"I HEAL SORES"

To heal sores, does not mean to heal over the outer skin, only to have the sores break out again. Real healing, means going to the root of the trouble and curing from the blood upward. That is the way Zam-Buk heals, and that is why Zam-Buk cures are lasting.

Zam-Buk, as soon as applied to a sore, commences three processes. It soothes the pain by drawing out the inflammation. Being a strong germicide, it thoroughly cleanses the sore by destroying all germs; and then by its marvellous healing power, it promotes the growth of new, healthy tissue. As the new tissue gradually develops, it casts off the old, until the diseased patch is replaced by new, healthy flesh.

Effected by this unique method of healing, Zam-Buk cures are thorough and permanent. Send this article and 1c. stamp for return postage, to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and we will send you a free trial box.

SERBS LOSE THEIR ARCHIVES

Capture by Austrians Due to Sagacity of Red Cross Nurse.

Notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the Serbians to rescue all archives, those belonging to the ministry of state have been captured by the Austrians and taken to Vienna. The discovery of the important documents is due to an Austrian Red Cross nurse.

During the Austrian crossing of the Save river, the general staff of one division quartered itself in an old cloister inhabited by a monk, and an Austrian nurse who had been captured by the Serbians and forced by them to cook at the cloister. She had been there two months, she told the officers.

Just after her arrival, she said, a huge motor truck rolled up one night. It was manned by fleeing Serbians who forced those in the house into a room and locked them in for six hours. When they were released the motor truck and the huge cases it had contained had disappeared. The nurse was sure the truck had been unloaded at the cloister.

The general staff immediately began an investigation of the premises. In the wine cellar they finally come on traces of newly-turned earth. When they excavated at this point they found 64 cases containing all the state archives.

Just One Application and the Hairs Vanish

(Modes of To-day)

A harmless, yet very effective, treatment is here given for the quick removal of hairy growths: Mix enough powdered delatone and water to cover the undesirable hairs, apply paste and after 2 or 3 minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. One application usually is sufficient, but to be certain of results, buy the delatone in an original package.

Surprising Statements By Berlin, Ont., Pastor

Says Canadian Papers Have Printed Numerous Untrue Things About Germans and Have Called Them "Ugly" Names Such as Hun and Barbarian.

The following appears in the Toronto Star:

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 10.—Rev. Reinhold Tappert, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church, one of the largest congregations in this city, gave The Star the following interview, the sentiment of which is surprising, to say the least. Mr. Tappert, who was born in Germany, but who was a citizen of the United States, is not naturalized in Canada. His remarks following were given very freely and unpreceded by any discussion to lead up to them. The Star merely asked him for his interpretation of the present situation in and around Berlin.

"There is a great deal of bitterness here,' said Mr. Tappert, "among Germans and those of German descent, arising out of the numerous untrue things that have been and are being said about Germany in the Canadian papers. Not only untrue statements of all sorts, but ugly names such as Hun and barbarian have been directed against Germans as a people. The press should have been more considerate. I believe if all these tales had not been printed, that bitterness would not have been called forth."

"The racial feeling has been aroused?" asked The Star.

"I don't know just what you mean by racial feeling," said Mr. Tappert. "Love of one's Fatherland is more than a noble thing. It is a highly moral thing. Everyone knows that ninety per cent. of these things said about the Germans are untrue. Of course, we make allowance for the war feeling in Canada. But these people of German descent know what conditions are in Germany. These charges against the army are against the nation for it is a nation in arms.

"But here in Berlin," said he, "except for that bitterness, there is no sedition. The story that there are four hundred families here who toast the Kaiser is utterly false."

Wouldn't Mind Busts of Kaiser.

"I suppose there aren't even busts of the Kaiser in the homes?" asked The Star.

"Well, I haven't seen any, but why shouldn't there be?"

"As the pastor of a large Lutheran congregation, you, of course, correct these untrue impressions of Germany?" asked The Star.

"The people know they are untrue themselves," replied Mr. Tappert.

"Is there any possibility here or in Waterloo County of any acts of violence arising out of the bitterness?"

"None whatever," said he.

"It is said that out in the country there are many farmers who are loyal to Germany?" asked The Star.

"How loyal?"

"Who hope Germany will win in this war."

"The same untrue stories and ugly names have created the same bitterness in the county as elsewhere," said Mr. Tappert.

In concluding this interview, he said:

"I am only a guest in this country, otherwise I would speak out much more freely and fearlessly on some of these matters I now avoid. I respect, however, the obligations of a guest."

Case "Too Hot to Handle."

Shortly after the outbreak of war, Mr. Tappert's opinions got him into trouble with the authorities of Berlin. He was taken before a magistrate, but the case was immediately dropped, so everyone states in Berlin, owing to the political unpleasantness that would arise. Mr. Weichel, the member for North Waterloo, having the support of the population of German descent besides a large following of other Canadians. Ottawa, in the person of Col. A. P. Sherwood, tendered Mr. Tappert a written apology for the arrest.

No Registrar of Aliens There.

Aside from this bitter spirit which Mr. Tappert refers to, the most serious feature of the Berlin situation, is that German agents from the United States, on mischief bent, would find a safe retreat in Berlin from which to plan and operate their outrages. In the first place, there is no registrar of alien enemies in all the county to check up the bolder spirits bound to exist under Mr. Tappert's own analysis of German sentiment in Waterloo. Such German agents would be likely to find sympathy in that "bitterness" of spirit. The number of Germans in, and around Berlin would at least render the agents of destruction inconspicuous. This feature is the one that alarms Berlins the most.

At police headquarters The Star was assured that steps were taken to guard against such men. Daily the police visit the hotels and investigate any suspicious-looking cases. As to whether Col. Sherwood has any secret service men stationed in Berlin or not, the police could not say.

"We would not be informed of it in any case," they declared.

Europe Will Need Money After the War

ROME, Feb. 11.—While Europe will have to pay tribute to the United States as the centre of the world's wealth after the war, the United States will also be compelled to make huge investments in Europe, according to George B. Page, banker and financier.

Mr. Page, who has been established in Italy for a quarter of a century, although a Virginian born, said during an interview on the present and future relations of the United States with Europe, and particularly Italy:

"The whole world is now considering tariff problems, the Europeans to get money to pay interest on their war loans, and the United States to shut out products of foreign industry that it expects will come into sharp competition with its own manufacturers as soon as the war is over.

"I think it will be a mistake on both sides of the water to raise tariffs indiscrimately. The situation is coming to this: The United States is prospering as the only big nation not at war. She is piling up gold and credits against Europe, her consumer. As a result she will have too much money soon, so much she won't know what to do with it. On the other hand Europe's energies and money are going into the war. When she gets rid of the war, which I believe, will be within a year, those energies will have to be turned back into business.

"I do not look for any wholesale commercial disaster in Europe, such as the South met after the civil war. I do not look even for a devastated country like Belgium to be permanently ruined. It is an industrial country, and its losses will be made up within a remarkably brief period.

"If all these countries put up tariff walls, they won't be able to do business together. It would be the case of a man biting off his nose to spite his face. Italy, for instance, now welcomes, and will continue to welcome, trade with the United States. Capital from the United States would find good employment, but Italy needs her raw cotton, her coal, and in particular, here electrical machinery, her agricultural machinery, her utensils for starting factories going.

"If the United States desires to do business here, the right kind of business men must be sent over, those speaking French or Italian, and men who are willing to stay in the country long enough to learn its ways. The only Americans who have ever come here previously were those mere bent on pleasure, or during the war to sell munitions or coal or something of that sort. Frequently these men, because of their lack of proper training, have fallen into the hands of intermediaries of questionable character, and their ventures have not turned out well.

"Italy will be a virgin field for American business. Before the war her foreign business was largely in the hands of the Germans, because the English and French had neglected the markets. The Germans offered long credits, say of six months to a year, asking only a part payment down. While the Germans have not, as has been stated, any large investments of capital here, they did succeed in doing a prosperous business."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable." writes Mr. Fred Hiss, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

More Extraordinary.—Mistress Macgregor—"Can ye no' wash yer stairhead without scalin' a' the watter, Mistress Bain? See the wey it's rinnin' doon my stair. Accompanists—Miss Ida Sanderson, and Miss Gwen Smith.

EDITH CAVELL.

The world hath its own dead; great motions start
In human breasts, and make for them a place
In that hushed sanctuary of the race
Where every day men come, kneel, and depart.
Of them, O English nurse, henceforth thou art,
A name to pray on, and to all a face
Of household consecration; such His grace
Whose universal dwelling is the heart.
O gentle hands that soothed the soldier's brow,
And knew no service save of Christ the Lord!
Thy country now is all humanity!
How like a flower thy womanhood doth show
In the harsh scything of the German sword,
And beautifies the world that saw it die!

G. E. Woodberry.

Home Breaker Is Sentenced

Contemptible Toronto Man Gets Two Years in the Penitentiary

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—"The meanest thing to come before your Worship for some time," was Crown Attorney Corley's description of the action of Louis Styles, charged before Col. Denison in the Police Court to-day, with breaking into the house of Pte. Arthur E. Goddard, 141 Lappin Avenue.

The evidence showed that "housebreaking" not "house-breaking" would have been a more appropriate charge.

Goddard is a member of the first Canadian contingent, and, on escort for a party of returning wounded soldiers, came back on six weeks' leave. He came home to find his three children neglected, his wife in the Infants' Home, compelled by the Juvenille Court to remain there in lieu of jail, and nurse a child that was not his, and to discover that Styles for the greater part of the time he had been fighting, had loafed at his home, and assisted his wife to spend the allowance that he had saved for her from his pay and the Patriotic Fund's check, which amounted in all to $70 a month.

"To think that this man, fighting over there for your Worship, for us, and for this hound, should be treated like that—it's contemptible," said the Crown Attorney.

The charge of housebreaking was inspired by Styles' act returning to the scene of his infamy, and breaking into the home and transferring some of Goddard's private papers to his own trunk.

"You will go to the penitentiary for two years," said the Colonel.

DANGER OF SHORTAGE OF SOCKS AT FRONT.

The executive of the National Service Committee in Toronto has received from Mr. J. G. Colmer, the London secretary of the Canadian War Contingent Association, a cable to the effect that there is danger of a shortage of socks for the men in the trenches, and that further shipments of socks from Canada are desirable in the interests of the soldiers' comfort.

Socks and other field comforts can be contributed through any nationally organised women's society, which will forward them to their destination over seas. Or they can be sent direct to the shipping point, Reid's wharf, St. John, N.B. They should be addressed to the Canadian War Contingent Association, and plainly labelled, "Field Comforts."

Mountains—these great cathedrals of the earth, with their gates of rock pavements of clouds, choirs of stream and stone, altars of snow and vaults of purple traversed by the continual stars.—Ruskin.

Though I know that in the long run religion is secure, if Germany with her hellish doctrine of might overruling all right and all law were to win, the world would not be worth living in for me or my creed. —Rev. Hugh Black.

PERMANENT CURE OF PILES CERTIFIED BY MINISTER

Sixteen Years Ago This Man Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment —Had Suffered Keenly For Twelve Years

You might almost say that there is only one actual cure for Piles, and that is Dr. Chase's Ointment. Every day this conclusion is corroborated by reports from persons who had tried one thing and another without success. Some have even been operated on, only to have the old trouble return, and finally to obtain cure by use of this ointment.

Why not avoid waste of time, waste of money and needless risk with operations by using Dr. Chase's Ointment at once?

Some will say "that is all very well for itching Piles, but my trouble is from bleeding Piles." Well, here is a letter from a man who had bleeding Piles for twelve years, and suffered most keenly. For sixteen years he has had no return of the old trouble and naturally considers the cure permanent.

Mr. O. B. Peters, Salmon Arm, B. C., writes: "I was troubled with bleeding Piles for about twelve years, and suffered everything but death. I was so bad I could scarcely walk about, and though I tried many things, could get no relief. At that time I lived at Sharbot Lake, Ont., and a friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, saying he would guarantee cure. Less than two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. That is sixteen years ago, and I am O.K. yet, so think you can consider the cure permanent. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough, as it saved me from a great deal of pain and suffering."

Rev. W. J. Beamish, Salmon Arm, B.C., writes: "I have been acquainted with Mr. O. B. Peters, and have always found him to be a man of his word. I can therefore most thoroughly endorse what Mr. Peters has written concerning the merits and value of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

A test of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince you of its merits. Relief comes almost immediately, and cure follows persistent treatment. For sale by all dealers. Sample box free if you mention this paper and write direct to Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

LOOKING AFTER SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

MONTREAL was the birthplace of the Patriotic Fund. Montreal made the record of over $1,612,000 collected in the six days whirlwind campaign, September, 1914, and the organization under which the Montreal Branch distributes relief is considered a model of effective and economical administration.

Montreal and the Island of Montreal have been divided into twenty-seven districts, the interests of which are looked after by fifty-six ladies acting as Ward Heads, under the supervision of Miss Helen Reid. These are assisted by about six hundred lady visitors who undertake to make periodical visits to the families of soldiers at the front, investigate and report on cases where relief is requested, and generally act as friends to those who might otherwise be friendless. Although there are certain Government allowances, these are often found to be insufficient for large families, and at times, especially in the case of illness, immediate relief has to be given. The mothers are given expert advice on hygiene and the care of infants, and encouraged to keep their children regularly at church and school (twenty prizes are given for the best school reports), are taught principles of thrift and given free legal advice. The slogans under which the lady visitors work are such as "Provide Opportunity not Charity—and be a friend," "Guard the Fund—do not patronize—do not promise" and "Your service is personal, patriotic and civic. Let it be kindly, loyal and efficient."

The French speaking families are cared for by French speaking ladies, each ward having a French-Canadian, as well as an English-Canadian head. During the summer months lectures have been given in the both languages on hygiene and domestic economy, and the Parish Priests, the Ward Alderman, Ministers and Teachers are encouraged to take an interest in cases in their district or parish. There is a Patriotic Burial Fund and Cemetery Lots, a storage for furniture, and baby outfits and clothing for special cases. Over 200 doctors give their services without charge.

A wonderful system of card indexing and filing enables the Relief Committee to handle all cases with promptness and efficiency. There are between forty to seventy-five advices each day of changes in address, desertion, births and deaths, illnesses or discharges. In one single month 1,500 removals have been notified. The average daily attendance is about 300 mothers. Great care has to be taken that the Fund is economically spent and that no duplicate or unnecessary payments should be made, and this is only possible when the office organization is businesslike. The filing room alone occupies the time of three ladies, and efficient, however, has been the Montreal administration, that the Boston Charity Organization Society has asked for a report and it is likely that the Montreal methods will be adopted in this and other cities of the United States.

the choruses were entered into. There was altogether a spirit of good fellowship and when the National Anthem was sung men seemed in no hurry to leave and for nearly an hour groups chatted, and the evening left a memory of pleasure and profit.

Lt.-Col. A. C. Pratt, M.P.P., is circularising Norfolk County in raising the 133rd Battalion, C.E.F., using the following letter:

"Your name has been forwarded to the officers of the 133rd Battalion as an eligible soldier, and it is the opinion of your neighbours and your friends that there are no insurmountable obstacles to prevent you going overseas.

"The young men on every side of you are enlisting and I feel quite confident that you have no desire to shift the responsibility of your own fight upon the shoulders of a neighbour boy. Returned soldiers unresistatingly tell us that this war will be lost if sufficient men do not come forward. The call has come direct to you from your King, and that call is imperative.

"The young man who has not offered his services, and who expects to continue his civilian occupation in Norfolk County, while the soldier boys are away at the front, certainly does not lack courage, because it is going to be no easy task to daily face the men and women who are compelled by age or infirmity, to stay home. We believe that you would face ten Germans any morning rather than see the boys go without you, and then meet mothers whose boys have gone out across the sea to fight your battles, while you pretend that your duties keep you here.

"We believe that the business of Norfolk County is WAR and determined WAR, until the Germans are beaten. We believe that there is a section of a trench in France or Flanders, or at Saloniki, held by a Canadian who is looking to you to relieve him, and to take your turn while he gets necessary rest.

"The soldier's life is pleasant, the training the very best, and you will be placed among your friends, and you will be kept with your friends and beside your friends until you are brought back to Norfolk County.

"A thousand starving Canadians look out to-day from German prison camps, praying you to come and set them free. Are you content to stay home with your excuses and let them starve? When may we get your uniform ready for you? Canada pays her soldiers well."

The Toronto Star says: The sporting men are still flocking to the Sportsmen's Battalion as a result of Lieut.-Col. Greer's talk at the T. & D. football meeting Tuesday night. S. McMurray, goalkeeper, and T. Savage and R. McKelvie, full backs of the Ulsters, joined. George and Howard MacNamara, of Sault Ste. Marie, the well-known professional hockey players, both interviewed Lieut.-Col. Greer yesterday, and will likely join. Both are big, upstanding 200-pounders.

So many hockey players, both from Toronto and around the country, are coming in with the Sportsmen that Lieut.-Col. Greer is forming a half company of hockey players. He should arm them with hockey sticks and skates and tell them that there is no referee—that everything goes.

Signaller William McKim of the 21st Battalion, now in France, writes to his mother as follows:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and hope you are all the same. I am receiving your mail quite regular. I received two parcels from you while in the trenches in the past two weeks. We are back a mile and a half from the firing line at present, supposed to be having six days rest, but I'm not getting much rest as they put me on as cook for 33 signallers. I get up at 5.30 a.m. to get breakfast ready. I am just cooking for the six days we are out. We are going back to the trenches on Sunday so you see our "rest" is nearly over. We have not had our leave yet and I don't know whether we are going to get it next time out or not. I don't think any of the Peterborough boys have been killed but a few have been wounded. One lost a leg. It is pretty cold here at night as we have only one blanket and if we had two we would not be able to carry them. I saw a pretty sight this other afternoon. Twenty aeroplanes passed over our heads on the way to Germany. The Huns shot at them but didn't hit one. I have a nose off one of the shells and am trying to keep it as a souvenir. I had several souvenirs of the battle field but they got too heavy and I had to do away with some of them.

LAKEFIELD'S HONOR ROLL

Following is Lakefield's roll of honor—a list of the residents of Lakefield or ex-residents who have been enlisted. The presence of the names of some well known Peterborough boys in the list is explained by the fact that a number of them, such as Eldred and Keith Cumberland, Lieut. Stewart, the Blanchard Boys, Harry Leahy and others, formerly lived in Lakefield.

PAID ALIMONY IN PENNIES.

Husband Ships 3,500 Coppers by Express, Collect, in Oil Can.

Mrs. George Arbuckle, divorced wife of the city manager of the Winton Motor Car Company in Kansas City, has received her first month's alimony from Arbuckle. The alimony, $35, was all in pennies, packed in a can, that had contained lubricating oil. Before she could deposit the money in a bank Mrs. Arbuckle was forced to wash off the cents.

The can was sent collect, and she paid 45 cents express charges. After Mrs. Arbuckle had washed the pennies, carried them to the bank and deposited them she learned she need not have accepted them, as cents are not legal tender for amounts over 25 cents.

CURLING

The next feature of the curling season will be the local bonspiel, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thureday, Feb 15th to 17th. It is altogether likely that there will be a big gathering of curlers from this district, and a successful bonspiel is expected.

While it is not very probable that they will come, there is some mention of a Parliamentary rink attending the bonspiel, consisting of Hon. G. P. Graham, Col. Sam Sharp, W. A. Boys and J. Douglas. Col. Sharpe was here last winter, but is tied up to the 116th Battalion just now, and requires only 50 more men to fill it up.

SHOT THREE AND HIMSELF.

A NEBULOUS REFERENCE TO DR. HARPER'S ADDRESS ON NEBULAE

Emphasizing the Point That the Aforesaid Nebulae Are Not To Be Trifled With by Strangers to the Outskirts of the Universe

A nebula is a misty, gaseous entity in the far-fringes of the solar system that on a first acquaintance, repels familiarity from the novice in astronomy. One may speak of the sun as Old Sol, and the moon as Fair Luna, or in a moment of pique and disappointment, scorn her as a piece of cheese, and green at that. He may turn from the brilliant, unresponsive Venus to the inviting glow of Mars, guide his footsteps by the polestar, and listen intelligently to the myths of the constellations and kick up star dust in a dreamy ramble along the milky way. But a casual introduction to individuals of the nebular family brings little promise of intimacy. Mr. W. E. Harper of Ottawa proved a very happy intermediary between this group and a numerous body of Peterborough citizens who gathered in St. Paul's Sunday School last night for the presentation. Evidently he is a friend of long standing in the nebulae mansion, and he acknowledged that Peterboro's hospitality was charming. Hence to Mr. Harper it was a welcome occasion to which he responded graciously and gracefully. But it is safe to say that most of his Peterborough friends are due for a disappointment if they imagine they have been admitted to the inner circles of the nebulae on that short acquaintance. These aloof individuals have to be sought and wooed, if their friendship and knowledge is to be cemented and completed.

Fortunately there are two bright exceptions that are easily approached, the nebulae of Andromeda and Orion, but to study their origin, customs, composition and other details you have to begin with the long distance method of employing powerful telescopes. And this is the only means of locating the multitudes of nebulae less conspicuously placed than those in the girdle of Andromeda and in the sword hilt of Orion. Hence, the whims of the whole nebular tribe must be consulted at every opportunity, in other words the novice in astronomy must persevere in his attentions before he reaches a degree of intimacy that would begin to compare with Dr. Harper's. And even then his knowledge of the nebulae will be far from complete. For example, Dr. Harper said that the question had been proposed as to whether or not the nebulae formed distinct and separate universes from our own. No wonder the nebulae are baffling. The infinite possibilities of such a nebular theory are overwhelming, that these gauzy pompons as they appear in the telescope might be entire planetary systems similar to that in which our earth has a secondary place, the idea blinds the average mind.

Dr. Harper's slides were both luminous and illuminative. They showed that although nebulae appear as lagoons, stars, spirals and mere wisps or streaks of light, the great majority of them are spiral in form, each revolving around its nucleus with flaring, spreading arms, the composite image representing a glorious pinwheel that delights the small boy in his fireworks display.

Discussing the composition of the nebulae, Dr. Harper covered a range of probability from that of immense masses of particles reflecting light, to gaseous bodies, or gaseous bodies partly solidified and so on, even two separate universes. Their motions was another interesting section of the lecture which also paid tribute to some of the men who discovered the nebulae.

Mr. Logan presided as chairman, and Dr. Harper was cordially welcomed by Rev. Robt. Pogue and Mr. O'Connell, the latter deputed by Mayor Duffus who had a previous engagement. At the conclusion a vote of thanks was extended to the speaker on motion of Chief Howard and Rev. J. R. Webb. Mr. Stratton contributed a Lauder imitation that won an encore. A noticeable feature of the event was the large percentage of ladies in the audience.

SIX STEAMERS MISSING.

Lloyds Has Posted Six which are Long Overdue.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—London despatches said that Lloyds has posted the following six steamers as missing, Satrap, Tynemouth, Hummerres, and Glenariff, all British; Initiative, Italian, and Benilure, Spanish. All sailed late in December. No word has been heard from any of them, excepting the Spanish steamer, which wireless on December 27 that she was sinking off the Scilly Islands.

LAUGHING WITH LEACOCK

Professor Leacock of McGill University, who is giving his services on behalf of the Red Cross Society and the Belgian Relief Fund, without money and without price, is lecturing in the Collegiate Institute Hall on Thursday evening, February 17th, under the auspices of the local Red Cross Society, is admittedly one of the greatest living humorists, and he has an extraordinary power of conveying his humour to an audience, so go early and hear the author of "Sunshine Sketches," "Moonbeams from the larger Lunacy" etc.

Toronto Saturday Night says of him:

"Mr. Leacock has the unspoiled gaiety and merry frankness of a nice schoolboy; and yet, when he came to speak of the tragic times in which we are living, there was shown a depth of feeling, a realization of life's greatest issues, which appealed at once to the convictions of the audience. The imaginary sketch of the British House of Commons in an after-the-war session of 1916, with Mr. John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson real chums, and the Rt.-Hon. David Lloyd George being assured by Tory members that he had never expressed himself too violently on any subject under the sun, made a fitting close to an afternoon of sheer delight. And 'Stiggins' the Professors on the platform enjoy it all? Principal Hutton's Oxford countenance was wreathed with Mark Tapleysmiles; President Falconer forgot all the depressing Presbyterian theology he had ever known and chuckled gleefully; Dr. J. A. Macdonald let all thoughts of Conservative iniquities fade from his 'Globular' horizon; Professor Squair shone as one of the merriest youngsters in a smiling semi-circle; and Sir William Mulock was a cheerier chairman than has been. Let us parody 'Fuzzy-Wuzzy' and break forth into a mad March melody.

"Then here's to you, Mr. Leacock, at your home in Montreal,
For, of many Sunshine Sketches, you're the brightest of them all;
You may read to us, and laugh with us, and in our hearts will stay
The man who smiled the sorrow of a dreary world away."

AN AGED WOMAN'S "CRIME"

She Told German Soldiers Not to Kill on the Sabbath.

Cologne, Feb. 11.—Elly Renss, a woman missionary at Cologne, the head of a small section of Seventh Day Adventists, who preached the practical application of the Commandment "Thou shalt not kill," was sentenced by court-martial to nine months' imprisonment in a fortress on the charge of attempted treason by inciting soldiers to insubordination. She is 74 years of age.

The woman had advocated in speech and print the principle that soldiers must not slay on the Sabbath. A court physician pronounced her mentally sub-normal.

Report Russian Defeat in Persia

Constantinople Hears That Tribesmen Under Haidar Bey Won Big Victory

BERLIN, (by wireless telegraph to Sayville, L.I.) Feb. 11.—Constantinople reports given out to-day by the Overseas News Agency state that Russian forces in Persia have met with a severe defeat at the hands of Persian tribesmen, and that they retreated in disorder.

The Persian forces according to these advices, were under command of Haidar Bey. They attacked the Russians near Sandshulak, which was reconquered by the natives.

75,000 Serb Troops Landed at Corfu

PARIS, Feb. 11.— The number of Serbian troops which have reached the Island of Corfu is estimated at 75,000 by a correspondent of the Petit Parisien, who says in two days 100,000 Serbs will have arrived there and the evacuation of Albania will have been completed.

The despatch says Bulgars have occupied Tirara, twenty miles east of Durazzo, and that important fighting apparently is imminent. The Austrians in front of Durazzo are hampered by the bad condition of the roads.

A French detachment, the correspondent reports, has occupied the Greek island of Fano, to the north of Corfu.

GERMAN DESERTER PROBLEM BAFFLES DUTCH OFFICIALS

THE HAGUE, Feb. 9.—The question whether a deserter who enters a neutral country in war time should be interned, and if so, whether he should be extradited with his ordinary interned fellow soldiers at the end of the war—that is to say in most cases delivered up to certain death— are aspects of the deserter problem that have been raised in acute form in Holland.

However good the general spirit in the German army, German deserters have been slipping over Dutch border, especially that adjoining Belgium, every now and then ever since the first two or three months of war; and although many of them either manage to get hold of civilian clothes before hand, or obtain them on this side of the frontier, in which case they usually escape arrest, there are at present between thirty and forty German deserters actually interned in this country, several of whom have been in that position for many months.

During the great Ypres offensive of the Germans in an early stage of the war, when their losses were so heavy, the number of deserters was reported to be considerable. Since then such arrivals have been less frequent, but they still continue. The causes that lead to desertion are many and varied. In one case the horror of the trench warfare and slaughter so grips a man that he takes the desperate step. Perhaps a regiment sent back for rest and recuperation after such an experience receives the order to return to the fighting line, and for some of the men suffering from the moral and physical strain the prospect proves too much; they grasp at an opportunity of escape.

In another instance the deserter attributes his act to bad treatment on the part of the officers, the sort of things to which German socialist deputies have recently been drawing attention. One deserter has related that he was one of a family of five brothers, of whom all but he had been killed and wounded, and urged thereto by his family, he had taken to flight. One young officer was wounded and invalided home, and when the order to return reached him it so preyed on his mind and nerves that he deserted. Occasionally a French speaking native of German Alsace-Lorraine makes a dash for freedom, and in some instances goes from her to join the French army.

Desertion is as dangerous, perhaps, as service in the trenches, if not more dangerous in most cases. Some men have arrived on Dutch soil by swimming across the River Scheldt from the Belgian to the Dutch bank. Not seldom would be deserters have been caught, and there can be little doubt of their fate for those acquainted with military discipline.

For some time the agitation in favour of liberating the German deserters actually interned at Bergen, in North Holland, had no result. Its promoters enlarged on the mental torture which these men were suffering, with the prospect before them of possible extradition and certain death, added to the ordinary discomforts of internment. Then, finally, the matter was brought up in the Dutch Parliament, and elicited the declaration from the War Minister that those who could show they were really deserters would not be delivered up with the others when peace came.

Petitions on the subject still continue, however, the latest setting forth that "this internment was not in accord with strict neutrality in that every action which is not prescribed by law or treaty and which has the appearance of covert intervention in behalf of a belligerent nation is not neutral and, further, because a deserter is only answerable to and punishable by his own military authority."

Such a recent petition—which mentioned incidentally that means were promised for eventual emigration to America—was signed by several thousand Dutch, including many prominent persons, but it still is doubtful whether the War Office will change its mind on the matter once it has been made up.

SOLDIERS HEALTHIER IN WAR THAN PEACE

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Life in the trenches is healthier for the French soldier now than in barracks during peace times as shown by the official figures issued to-day by the army medical department.

The cases of measels, scarletine, mumps, diphtheria, and cerebro-spinal meningitis were more numerous in the army during the year 1911 than in 1915. These diseases, together with typhoid and dysentery, averaged 7.11 per thousand men in 1911, as compared with 6.02 per thousand men last year. Although the total was lower, typhoid and dysentary were somewhat more prevalent.

Typhoid cases last year numbered 4.4 per thousand men as compared with 1.88 in 1911. Dysentery, formerly the deadly enemy of armies in the field, attacked only eighteen men out of 100,000, as compared with eleven in 100,000 before the war. The mortality was twelve for each 100 cases of typhoid in 1911. In the field mortality was 2.55 per cent. owing to improved methods of treatment.

HOW TO "ECONOMISE."

"I think we ought to have someone in to cut up that old tree for Christmas logs," said the wife.

"Nonsense," replied the husband. "It will be fine exercise for me. I'll go out and saw the logs myself."

For one hour he persisted. The net results were two logs, a broken saw, a pair of trousers scarified by saw. It was at this point that he went indoors and said: "My dear, after all, I think that at this time of the year the jobbing gardeners will need work. I'll ask a man to come round and finish the job."

"Yes," said the tactless wife, "and at the same time you might leave those trousers at the tailor's and see if you can get a new handle fitted to our only saw. The worst of this war is the way you men will economise."

Breakfast was being partaken of at a seaside boarding house, recently and it was thought that the "funny man" of the company had expended all his anecdotal loquacity.

But it was not so.

The irrepressible one raised the cup of tea to his lips, and after taking a little sip laid the cup on a chair beside him.

Wondering what was the matter one of the visitors asked her reason for doing so.

This was his opportunity. "Well," he replied, confidently, "the tea is so weak that I am giving it a rest."

ADVERTISING HINTS

Advertising is news: make your advertising newsy and it will be read with interest by the general public.

It is better to have an ad. of a given size appear in every issue of a daily than to have twice as large an advertisement appear in every other issue of the same paper.

In an ad. four inches long (56 agate lines) the maximum number of words used should be 106. Of course if a cut is used the number of words should be reduced in proportion to the space occupied by the cut.

Many an advertiser has seen his advertising fall to iron flatness, because he stopped it at a critical period in its life.

Oftentimes one can reach more buyers by advertising in a half dozen publications of acknowledged circulation, than he can by spreading his advertising appropriation over a hundred publications which all together do not amount to the volume of half of the six great media.

BRITISH LIFE AND CHARACTER FROM BELGIAN VIEWPOINT

Professor Leon van der Essen (of the University of Louvain) has contributed to the columns of the London Star an appreciation of British life and character.

A great many Belgians, since the beginning of the war, have (he says) made the acquaintance of England for the first time. Among these there has developed a conception of Great Britain and of the British character which is entirely opposed to the malignant picture drawn by the German press bureau. Every Belgian now staying in this country, whatever his social or intellectual condition, has had deeply impressed upon his mind the conviction that the main characteristics of British are loyalty and kindness.

By loyalty he understands keeping his word and doing his duty in all circumstances, both in private and public life. That is exactly what the British have done. The Belgian man-in-the-street did not read the British Blue Book, and perhaps he does not understand the imperishable grandeur of the attitude taken by Sir Edward Grey on the Belgian question, and he sees on the one hand Germans—that Germany who overran his country with bank-clerks, reserve officers, and spies—ruthlessly breaking its pledged word, and, on the other hand, England—that England whom he knew so implicitly—keeping its pledge.

Duty Without Tears.

And for generations to come, the Belgian man-in-the-street will have but one idea of the attitude of England in the hour of trial; that she is a loyal nation.

"Loyalty" was the motto we printed on the British coat of arms when we were still in Belgium. Then came the apostles of "kultur" and burned Louvain and sacked a large part of Belgium. Great Britain was still loyal to her Belgian friends; she received the refugees with a great heart and wonderful smile, and the poor remnants of humanity who reached Folkestone, their eyes widened by the horrors they witnessed on their native soil, could but repeat, when they crowded together the first night on English soil: "This is indeed a loyal nation!"

What strikes every Belgian staying in this country is the simple, unboastful way in which the British are doing their duty. Americans often say: "The Englishman takes his pleasure sadly." They should complete the sentence and say: "But he does his duty gaily and sees the thing through." When the men and women of Great Britain have realised what honour or charity of religion requires of them, they take the burden, however heavy it may be, and go on, undisturbed, stoically to the end. And that is true in public and in private life. In private life the Belgian refugees have seen with what dogged determination the committees who promised them shelter and support are doing their work of charity, even in circumstances which might have discouraged and indisposed the most patient people in the world.

The Refugee Shopper.

In so many things did the Belgians discover the British kindness that it would be difficult to record all the instances.

But one indication of it is constantly appealing to their appreciation. When a Belgian enters an English shop, in his endeavour to make himself understood he often expresses himself in such a weird mixture of English, Flemish, and French that he himself afterwards blushes at the recollections of it. But the English shopkeeper never laughs at his barbarous "pseudo-English"; he does his best to understand, and he retains his patience and his courtesy.

Such is the tactful kindness which, with that other grand characteristic of loyalty, the Belgians will always associate with the English. And the appreciation of the highest qualities of the British will be one of the best and happiest results of the imperishable friendship which is bound to unite Great Britain and Belgium in the future.

NERVOUS--NO APPETITE

Hartford Woman Tells how She Regained Strength.

Hartford, Conn. "I was run-down, nervous, no appetite, could not sleep, and had no strength. An old lady told me how much Vinol had helped her when in a like condition. I tried it and noticed an improvement within a week. It soon built up my strength, my nervousness disappeared and I can sleep well. I have never found any remedy equal to Vinol to create strength." Mrs. Clara Burr.

It's the tonic iron, the medicinal extractives of fresh cods' liver without oil, and beef peptone contained in Vinol, that makes it so successful in enriching the blood and creating strength for run-down, nervous, overworked women.

We have seen such wonderful results right here in Peterborough from the use of Vinol, that we will return the money in every such case where it fails to give satisfaction.

Two Women and One Child Said To Have Been Hurt

In Recent Raid By German Airmen on the Coast of Kent

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Two women and one child were injured yesterday afternoon when two German seaplanes raided the Kentish coast, dropping bombs. Three missiles fell on the outskirts of Ramsgate and four near a school at Broadstairs. The material damage is said by the War Office to have been confined to the shattering of glass.

The attack was made in broad daylight. At 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon two seaplanes were reported approaching the Kent coast, and a few minutes later they flew over Ramsgate and Broadstairs.

A number of naval and military aeroplanes and seaplanes ascended to attack the Germans, but they immediately retreated. As no engagement between the airmen has been reported, it is presumed that the Germans made good their escape.

Of the four bombs dropped in Broadstairs, all fell near a schoolhouse. Three of them exploded.

The county of Kent forms the southeastern extremity of Great Britain, running north to the Thames. It includes part of the city of London.

This portion of the English coast was the object of the last German attacks by aeroplanes, made on January 23 and 24, in which one person was killed and six were injured.

Bombs Fall in Field.

RAMSGATE, Feb. 10.—Two German aeroplanes, dying abreast at a great height, and moving slowly, approached Ramsgate from the sea about 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. When barely 150 yards over the cliffs they dropped six or eight bombs in rapid succession. All of these fell in the fields between Ramsgate and Broadstairs.

The raiders turned seawards, and soon disappeared. Hundreds of people flocked to the scene hunting for fragments of the exploded bombs as souvenirs.

Land in School Grounds.

BROADSTAIRS, Eng., Feb. 10. — Four bombs from German aeroplanes fell into the grounds of a girls' school here yesterday afternoon. Another landed in the garden of a private house and sank deeply into the ground, but did not explode. Both the German machines were light in colour, and, owing to the bright sunshine, it was difficult to detect them in the clouds.

JOHN BULL'S BRAVEST FIGHTERS HIBERNIANS

For over 400 years England endeavoured to tame the Irish fighting spirit, but the sons of Erin are as full of fight as ever. To-day many of the bravest men in the British army are of Irish blood, and many of Johnny Bull's fistic champions are of the same race. Men like Bob Fitzimmons, Charley Mitchell, Jem Carney, Owen Moran, Jem Driscoll, Jack Burke, and others. And even such old departed champions like Jem Ward, Deaf Burke, and Ben Ryan. The fighting Irish produced also many fistic gladiators from Australia. Among them are Frank Patrick, Slavin, Dan Creedon, Billy Murphy, Bill McCarthy, Paddy Gorman, Mick Dunn, Tom Tracy, George Dawson, Les Darcy, Hughie Mehegan, Herb McCoy, Mick King and a host of others.

Although brave Dan Donnelly has been dead almost 100 years, his valiant deeds of glory in the ring are fresh in our memories. For it was the gallant Dan who defeated George Cooper for the championship of all England on the Curragh of Kildare, and after this decisive victory Donnelly invaded England and defeated the great Tom Oliver and all other Britishers whom he could induce to meet him. We often read about Bob Fitzimmons' wonderful victories over big, heavy men when he was only a middleweight, but we should not overlook game Jack Randell, "The Prime Irish Lad," who went to England when oly a lightweight and conquered such heavyweights as "West Country Dick" Belasco the Jew, Jack Turner, Deaf Burke, and all other comers. Nor should we forget courageous Jack Lanagan, nor Ned O'Baldwin, nor Joe Coburn, former heavyweight champion of America; nor John Morrissey, who also held that title; nor Jim Dunn, another champion; nor gallant Jack Dempsey, nor Jack McAuliffe, Ike O'Neil Weir, the Belfast Spider; Tom Sharkey, Dave and Spike Sullivan, Jim Coffey, Peter Maher, George Gardner, and a whole bunch of others who first saw the light of day on the Emerald Isle. —Buffalo News.

TO THOSE THEY LEFT BEHIND.

(A Poem for the Patriotic Fund.)

Your wives flit round about your homes,
And give you of their care;
Some of the boys who went left wives
As kind and just as fair;
Your wives have all the joys they need,
Their dresses warm and neat—
How could you see a soldier's wife
Ill clad upon the street?

You have your little children safe,
You watch their happy play,
They laugh and romp about your knees
Till you are glad as they;
Some boys who went have children too,
Who oft their days beguiled;
God loves the children; He'll love those
Who help a soldier's child.

You still possess a mother
To give her love to you;
The boys who went have mothers
Who dearly love them too;
Then for the fond old mothers
Who watch, and fret and pray
Arise above all selfishness
And give your mite to-day.

You have your father living,
But age has round him clung,
Yet he proclaims how he would fight
If he were strong and young;
The soldier boys left fathers
As noble and as true;
Give, give for those old grey haired men
Who gave their sons for you.

And there are others dear to you
Whom you are joyed to tend,
Old folks to whom you long have been
A comforter and friend;
The boys who went left these ones too
Appealing to your store;
You will not miss all that is asked,
So give a little more.

Thus giving and thus helping
You will be aiding on
The struggle that will have no end
Till victory has shone;
Each bill you give is as a shell
Shot at the Kaiser's heart;
Shoot, shoot, and shoot until that hell
Is shot and rent apart.

Oh! drop those dollar bombs until
Our fiendish German foes
Are beaten back to the abyss
From which at first they rose;
Give, give your brave assistance
Until the earth is free—
Upon the struggle rests the fate
Of you as well as me.

How He Would Treat Him.—A class of raw recruits was being put through an examination in first-aid work. At last it came to Pat's turn to answer. "Now, Pat," said the instructor, "supposing a man were to fall down in a drunken fit, how would you treat him?" "Faith, sorr," replied Pat, "Oi wouldn't trate him at all. I'd consider he had had enough."

THE RUSSIAN CAPITAL CITY OF GREAT BEAUTY

An Inspiring Sight is the Traveller's First View of Petrograd—Gaiety and Chivalry Combine

One of the most ancient and beautiful cities of the eastern world is the capital of the Czar's dominion. St. Petersburg as it was known until the great war, is situated at the head of the Gulf of Finland and the mouth of the Neva river. Owing to its wonderful connection through the Neva with all the other great cities of Russia, Petrograd (as it is now called) has remained for upwards of 150 years the principal port for the export of raw produce and the import of manufactured goods. The traveller on entering through its massive forts is impressed by the wonderful architecture of the great buildings of the city proper. Drained on all sides by the Neva it is a remarkable fact that there are but two bridges which span the river. By far the most important thoroughfare in this massive city is the Nevski Prospekt, a street considered by many travellers to be the finest in the world. Facing it on the east is the magnificent Winter Palace of the Czar, a building which contains upwards of a thousand rooms. The manufactures of Petrograd are textiles, tobacco, raw silks, and leather. The city with its one and a half millions of people, ranking as the seventh city of the world, is unsurpassed as an educational and scientific centre, its academies for women drawing students from all over the world.

When King Winter Reigns

Petrograd in summer differs very little from the average European city, but it presents a vastly different aspect in the winter. Cold to an intensity such that no country outside of Russia ever experiences faces the inhabitants. Skating and skiing are the great winter pastimes and accidents are few as on many occasions it has been possible to drive a twenty-ton truck over the frozen Neva. Petrograd to the stranger presents a dazzling sight, its balls are the talk of the world, it is a city where gaiety reigns supreme, and a city of beautiful women. The chivalry of the Russian is too well known to admit of any discussion. There is no country in the universe which honors its women more than the Russian Empire.

The Little Father

Czar Nicholas, the ruler of this mighty Empire, is a man who has done more for Russia than any ruler that country has had. Although the majority of his ancestors have met their death at the hand of the assassin the Emperor shows by his constant appearance in public, that he does not fear any discontent amongst his people. The Russian in private life is a hard working man, God-fearing upright, and cosmopolitan to an extraordinary degree. This war has proved the wonderful worth of a nation whose sole desire is to be left alone in peace. But the Russian Bear aroused to war needs no compulsion. They will fight to the death for their liberty and freedom. In the meantime Petrograd waits—and grits her teeth. They remember 1812 and Moscow. It was Russia that started the downfall of Napoleon.

Russia has started the downfall of Wilhelm II.

Natives of U. S. in Canada.

A reminder that the United States has furnished Canada with many of her great men in the political, railway, and commercial world is furnished by a list of persons to whom certificates of naturalization have been furnished under the Naturalization Act, recently passed, up to December 31 of last year.

The first eight names on the list are those of Hon. Sir George Halsey Perley, Lord Shaughnessy, Sir William Van Horne, E. J. Chamberlin and Howard G. Kelley, of the Grand Trunk Railway; E. G. Deville, Surveyor-General of Canada; C. F. Sise, jr., manager of the Bell Telephone Company, Montreal, and P. F. Sise, vice-president and general manager of the Northern Electric Company, Montreal, all born in the United States. Further down the list appear the names of Charles Newton Candee, vice-president of the Gutta Percha Rubber Company, of Toronto; of Jacob Lewis Englehart, chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, and of Elmor Randolph Carrington, vice-president of the Thiel Detective Service, Montreal, all former Americans. Baldwin Larus Baldwindson, Deputy Provincial Secretary, a former native of Denmark, has also been naturalized, as have, under another section of the Naturalization Act, Gustav Heidmann, secretary to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and John Henry Stanford, civil servant.

THERE WILL BE 53 SUNDAYS DURING YEAR

This is Due to Leap Year Beginning on Saturday—Such a Circumstance Will Not Occur Again For Eighty-four Years

EASTER WILL BE LATE

Easter Sunday this year will be on the 23rd of April—within two days of the latest date on which it is possible for it to occur. Many think that a late Easter means a late spring, and others are more interested in the fact that it will be nearly three months before Good Friday, the first holiday.

The extra day in February which constitutes the entire year "Leap Year" provides a calendar different from any enjoyed since the centennial year 1876 forty years ago and different from any that will follow for twenty-eight years longer when 1944 twaty-eight years longer when 1944 beginning on Saturday containing fifty-three Saturdays and fifty-three Sundays such as no person under 40 years of age ever knew before and such as possibly a very few will see again till the millenial year 2000—84 years hence.

"Corpse Coins."— "Corpse coins" are treasured in the north of England. They are the coins that have lain over the eyes of the dead. By this means infection has been spread, but superstition causes the custom to continue. PENNANTS' STRONG FINISH FEATURES CITY LEAGUE GAMES

Murray St. Aggregation Outscored Bachelors by 7 to 3, Getting Four Goals in Overtime—Americans Were Successful in Beating the East City Team.

Americans 10, East City 4.
Pennants 7, Bachelors 3.

The Standing.

	Won.	Lost.
Pennants	2	0
Americans	1	1
Bachelors	1	1
East City	0	2

Next Week's Games.
Pennants vs. East City.
Bachelors vs. Americans.

The City League weekly doubleheader at Brock St. Rink last night provided a good programme, and in the Pennant-Bachelors clash, the second game of the night, one of the best games of the season. The Pennants, who showed a sensational finish over the Americans last week, came back with another last night. The Bachelors forced them to go overtime, but in the extra ten minutes the Murray St. aggregation romped home with four goals.

The first game between East City and Americans was a hard-fought struggle in spite of the Americans' 10 to 4 win. The winners nailed the game in the first period when they outscored the boys from across the river 7 to 2, but after the bad opening, the East City bunch steadied down and had as much of the battle for the last two periods as had the winners, and but for wild shooting, and over anxiety when in close would have closed up the gap. As it was they divided the scoring in the last forty minutes.

The Americans showed better team work than in their game last week, and combined nicely, especially in the first period. Jackson, Richardson and Wheeler all did good work on the attack, and Phelan was good on the defence.

For the losers "Soldier" Cullen and Lipsett on the defence both did excellent work. All the forwards worked hard.

The teams were as follows:

Americans.	East City.
Goal
Catchpole	McDonald
Defence
Phelan	Lipsett
P. Long	Cullen
Rover
Perry	McIlmoyle
Centre
Jackson	Mein
Right Wing
Wheeler	Phillips
Left Wing
Richardson	O'Brien

The second game was a hummer all the way, with both teams showing clever hockey. The pace was fast throughout, keeping the fans on their toes. In the first period there was no score, while in the second the Pennants scored once leaving the tally 1 to 0 at the end of the second period. In the last period the Bachelors outscored their rivals 3 to 2, and it was 3 all at the finish. Just before full time Stuart of the Bachelors was hurt and had to retire, and the overtime period hard hardly started when Moore, the Bachelor defence man, was injured. The Pennants dropped Frost and Lapp, and for the greater part of the overtime the teams were five a side. The conditions suited the Pennants, who were in the better shape of the two, and they made a runaway finish, scoring four goals in quick order.

Both goal keepers starred, the work of Darling for the Bachelors being a feature. The ex-Y.M.C.A. goaler was in grand form, and saved the situation time after time. Mulhern on the defence, and Kennaley on the forward line, were the Pennant stars, while Darling, Moore and Stuart were the best of the losers.

The teams lined up as follows:

Pennants.	Bachelors.
Goal
O'Brien	Darling
Defence
Mulhern	Moore
McIntyre	Neary
Rover
Soden	Barnett
Centre
Frost	Stuart
Right Wing
Lapp	Hill
Left Wing
Kennalley	Corrin

Billy Breen refereed both games.

LOU MARSH'S COMMENT ON LOCAL GAME

PETERBOROUGH, Feb. 10.—It looks very much as if the 93rd Battalion team will be the survivor in this intermediate district. The soldier lads showed Coach Billy Breen's Electric squad the way home last night 7 to 2 in the first of a two-game series to break the group tie. This gives them a 5-goal lead for the final game to-morrow night.

While the Electrics, as usual, presented a patched-up squad, the Soldiers exhibited considerable class, and should make a good showing in round two if the Electrics do not do the unexpected to-morrow and reverse the score.

The Electrics played three juniors last night, Legros in goal, Montgomery at rover, and little Freddie Graham at centre, and they proved to be the best men on the team. Legros stopped many a shot, while the diminutive Graham was as good a stick-handler and as fast a man as there was on the ice. He lacked weight and condition, however, and was forced to retire when he got a body check just before full time. The 93rd team is a sturdy bunch, with considerable speed all around, fair combination, and lots of experience. Percy Windsor, the ex-Cobalt boy, at centre, was their most useful man last night. He landed three of their goals. Lieut. Sexton, the latest addition to the force, played a smart game and got two goals. He is is chunky fellow, and meets all-comers fearlessly. Blewett got one goal. Montgomery, the Soldiers' rover, was strictly in the game all night, while Dupuy, on the defence, showed some high-class stick-handling. He went from end to end a dozen times all alone, but failed to get more than one goal. Lieut. Widdfield, in goal, showed his best game this season. Ketchum was hurt several times, but came back each time and was on the ice at the final gong.

The score by periods was 2 to 1, 5 to 2, and 7 to 2, with the Electrics looking as good as the winners at the end of the first period. After that they went to pieces.

EDDIE PLANK LOSES CASE.

Commission Refuses Application to be Declared Free Agent.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 11—The National Commission denied the application of Pitcher Eddie Plank to be declared a free agent. Plank based his request on a paragraph in the Players' Fraternity agreement which relates to an unconditional release after a player has served ten years in one team, and because the Federal League no longer has a claim to his services.

The Commission ruled that the first contention did not hold because Plank left the Philadelphia Americans before waivers had been obtained upon him and before he had been released by that club, which was contrary to the Players' Fraternity agreement.

In answer to the second contention the commission says: "His transfer to the St. Louis American League Club is a matter of record and his salary for 1916 is a matter for negotiation between him and that club."

EXPECT ANOTHER HOT GAME TO-NIGHT

Soldiers and Electrics Will Clash in the Second Game for District Title and the Right to Meet Belleville Here on Monday Night—Fans Are Looking For Warm Battle

Although five goals looks like a big handicap, the Electrics are going into to-night's game with the 93rd Battalion determined to make the Soldiers play out the string, and from all appearances to-night's game will be even more exciting and hard fought than was Wednesday's battle. The Electrics are making one change in their line-up with a view to securing better team work on their forward line. Roy Cherrett, the Junior centre man, playing that position to-night, while Montgomery will go back to his proper place on the defence. This makes four Junior players on the line-up. As Montgomery and Cherrett are each eligible for four more seasons after this year as Juniors, the Electrics' team to-night averages probably the youngest and lightest in Intermediate company. Altogether no less than eight Junior players have been used by the Electrics in Intermediate circles this year, which must be pretty close to a record. The 93rd team will pin their faith on the line-up that has represented them in the last three games.

Either Lou Marsh or Dr. Jerry La Flamme will referee the battle, which will start sharp at 8:30 o'clock.

The teams will line up as follows:

93rd.	Electrics.

Defence
Sexton	Spratt
Dupuy	F. Montgomery

Peterborough Won In Bobcaygeon

Curlers Secured a Margin of 15 Points in Home and Home Games

Peterborough won the first section of the Fitzgerald-Bottum trophy games from Bobcaygeon last night away from home by the score of 61 to 46, returning this morning with a margin of 15 points. They were warmly received and entertained, and enjoyed themselves as they usually do in Bobcaygeon than which there is no club local curlers would rather visit. The scores were as follows:

HOCKEY

Here is a team of Peterborough old boys who all figured in O.H.A. games elsewhere this season, which would look pretty sweet to local fans this year:

Goal—Janes (40th Battery) or Dwyer (Sarnia).

Right defence—Parker (Hamilton Rowing Club).

Rover—Halpin (Sarnia).

Centre—Park (Brockville).

Right wing—Burritt (Argonauts).

Knapman (93rd Battery) or Sailes (Brampton).

Left wing—Crane (Riversides) or Kelly (London Overseas).

ARMENIAN ATROCITIES

Turks Tied Victims in Fours and Bayonetted Them

Capt. C. E. W. Bean, the official press representative with the Australian forces, recounts horrible tales of the massacre of the Armenians from the mouth of an Armenian prisoner, who was an eye-witness. The prisoner and his brother had disguised themselves as Moslems, and re-enlisted in a Turkish camp. "At the end of the third day in our new quarters," he said, "the major came and said, 'I want forty of the best bayonetters for a special business.' I took the hint, and did not move. My brother, who did not understand what was up, made a move but stopped short at a push from my elbow. The forty went up, but returned the following day. Could there be any doubt any longer what this 'special business was?' Next day the same officer said, 'I want forty men, this time different ones.' We stood still. The officer noticed our apathy, and bawled out, 'You blockheads, you ought to be ashamed of your big bodies. Line up quick, else I will break your heads.' We had no choice but to obey.

"At midnight we marched through the streets guarded by gendarmes, and at last halted at the prison, and as the big gates opened and the poor unfortunates came out abreast, and tied together with a rope, one of the long line of gendarmes stepped out to escort each four until all eight hundred were out and each of us had his share of prisoners to look out for. We marched them through the dimly-lit streets out into the open air. At sunrise we reached a place where we found six or seven policemen, a few gendarmes, and an officer. After some consultation with our own officer, we saw the ground covered swarming with gendarmes. Then our officer gave the command 'about turn.' We marched back, leaving our prisoners there lying on the ground, four by four, tied together. After ten minutes' march he said, 'Now, boys, don't let me see your faces saddened—I had planned otherwise, but never mind. Now, though you will be denied the pleasure of killing infidels, you will enjoy the sight of it, nevertheless. Watch now.' The rest is too horrible to describe."

When he came to this point in his story the man broke down and could not for a time go on. Afterwards he continued: "What I saw was about about one hundred human wolves plunge among about ten times as many defenceless beings, also human, tearing them to pieces with bayonets. The Armenians were unable to run away—they were tied together four by four, and were utterly exhausted. The assassins simply nailed them to the ground."

NO TRACE OF B. B. LAW.

Body Not Found in the Ruins of the Parliament Buildings.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—Although there has been a continuous search of the ruins of the Parliament Buildings for the body of B. B. Law, the member for Yarmouth, it has not been found. Mr. Law was supposed to be either in the public telephone booth or in the room occupied by himself and some other members. A large space has been dug around the telephone booth without result, while the only thing found in Mr. Law's room was a pair of scissors.

THOMAS LEOPOLD WILLSON.

Canadian Scientist Who the Discoverer of Cheap Acetylene Gas.

The death of Mr. Willson at the somewhat untimely limit of fifty-five removes one of our eminent Canadian scientists from the arena of research and discovery. He was born at Princeton Ontario, and was educated at the Hamilton Collegiate Institute, where he displayed the bias toward original research that became strongly developed throughout an active life. His most interesting discovery was a method of producing acetylene gas both cheaply and abundantly, and of utilizing it for illuminating purposes. This discovery was in some measure accidental, but only a trained scientific intelligence could have discerned the practical importance of the outcome of an accidental combination of circumstances.

Acetylene gas had been known as a laboratory product long before Mr. Willsons' discovery, but when it was analytically produced the compound used in conjunction with water—potassium carbide or sodium carbide—was too limited in quantity to enable the gas to be generated in sufficient abundance for common use. While using an electric furnace to fuse carbon and calcium for some other purpose altogether Mr. Willson was disappointed with the result, which proved to be not what he expected. He threw the hot fused mass into cold water to cool it, and noticed that gas with the familiar garlic odor of acetylene began to pass off into the air. This was the necessary hint to the trained thinker and practised experimenter. He discovered that the calcium and carbon separated in contact with water, and that the carbon of the carbide united with the hydrogen of the water to form acetylene, while the calcium of the carbide united with the oxygene of the water to form lime.

By one of the curious coincidences in the history of research, the same discovery was made almost contemporaneously by Moisman in France; a fact which obscured somewhat the prestige due to Mr. Willson. The latter devoted himself for some time to inventing and perfecting mechanical devices for the practical use of acetylene as an illuminator. Both prussic acid and sugar have been made from acetylene, and so has alcohol, so pure as to cause a surmise whether it might not be produced in sufficient quantities to displace the more or less toxic alcohol of commerce.—Toronto Globe.

Canada's Asbestos Trade.

Closing of the German and Austrian markets and abnormal sea freights adversely affected the international asbestos trade in 1915. Germany and Austria could not obtain Russian asbestos. Even if they had access to Russian supplies they could not have benefited thereby, for the material produced by the Russian mines is unsuited for weaving purposes and could not be used for automobile parts. Inferior grades of asbestos—shingle and board stock—were confronted by curtailed allied markets and by stagnation in American and Canadian building trades, but those producers so situated that they could supply crude, and cater to the demand for short fibres, had no difficulty in getting satisfactory prices, provided delivery were made to the Allies. Sales of crude hit high spots, and it is to be noted that asbestos—Canadian asbestos—played an important part in the construction of those guns, more especially of the French, which have wrought havoc with enemy entrenchments. For months the chief trouble was in securing space in transatlantic vessels at rates not altogether prohibitive.

Some of the Younger Social Set Preparing For Office Positions

Reported That a Number Are Fitting Themselves to Take Places of Young Men If Vacancies Occur as Result of Enlistment.

It is learned that a number of young ladies, prominent in social circles in Peterborough, have enrolled at the local Business College, and are there preparing themselves that they may take business positions. These, heretofore, society leaders, believe they should fit themselves with the proper training, in order that they might fill the places of young men whose services are needed in the cause of their king and country. From time to time, as the war progresses, business houses will have to release the male members of their staffs for the front. If such a situation should arise, that the war should cause a depletion in the working staffs of business institutions in the city, these young ladies will be ready to fill the vacancies. Already some of the local banks are employing girls on their staffs.

BIRTHDAY PARTY WAS A SUCCESS

The Society were privileged indeed in having with them the district organizer, Mrs. J. K. Moore, who gave a most interesting report of the meeting of the Board of Managers.

The gathering was then favoured with solos from Mrs. J. Locke and Miss Addie Dixon, also an instrumental by Miss Jean Anderson and a reading by Mrs. J. Speer.

The offering received will materially add to the funds of the Society.

Refreshments were served and a vote of thanks tendered our devoted pastor and his wife, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Whattam.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. G. JACKSON.

The grim reaper has been very busy in Cobourg during the past few weeks. This week it is our sad duty to record the death of another most estimable citizen in the person of Mrs. J. G. Jackson, which took place at the Cobourg hospital on Friday, January 28th, following an operation. The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, fifty-nine years ago. In addition to her bereaved husband, three daughters and two sons survive. Miss Jean Jackson, of Peterborough Central School staff; Mrs. T. A. Dinsley, Wilkie, Sask.; Mr. J. A. Jackson, London, Ont.; Mr. G. E. Jackson, Toronto, and Miss Florence, at home.

The funeral took place from the family residence, Albert street, on Sunday, at 2:30, to the Union cemetery. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which the late Mrs. Jackson was held.—Cobourg "Sentinel Star."

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Stock market opened with irregular changes today from yesterday's closing prices. U. S. Steel was down 3-8 of a point, but later was firm around its closing figure. New York Central opened up a 1-2 a point, then reacted fractionally. Coppers were active.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—The feature of the local stock market this morning was the advance in Canadian General Electric shares, which sold at 112 here yesterday to 116¾, a rise of nearly five points, this morning. Like so many of the moves in Canadian stocks lately the advance is general from Montreal origin.

Montreal has been taking a much keener interest in this stock than it did in the old days. The basis of the movement is the discounting of a strong annual statement.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 11—For Eyes, the Best is Cheapest

At a great many different stores a line of SPECTACLES is carried, and for a few cents, and up, you can buy a pair that SEEMINGLY give some assistance to the vision, when perhaps they are causing a strain on one part of the eyes to enable another part to do its work. These glasses have been selected by the simple means of trying on pair after pair till at last one seems to suit. There has been no test to try the separate power of the eyes, no distance test, and even if the best possible choice is made there is no guarantee of satisfaction, or redress if you finally find the cheap glass is useless. Compare this with Dr. Fowler's scientific "test and make sure" service, both eyes correctly fitted, with his high-grade Peblo Lenses, covered by his absolute guarantee, at his most moderate charges, and there can be but one conclusion, that the "Best is Cheapest."

Mrs. Knox is visiting Mrs. Chas. Armstrong, in Havelock.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hubble have returned to their home in Havelock after spending the last three months in Peterborough.

The many friends of Miss Lulu E. J. Lockhart will regret to learn that she is lying seriously ill at her home suffering from severe results which developed last Saturday, following an attack of la grippe.

Mr. Reginald Brown of London, formerly a resident of the city and connected with the Cressman Co., is renewing old acquaintances in town. Mr. Brown has taken out a commission for service overseas, but at present is unattached.

Mr. A. S. Wilkinson of the Norwood branch of the Union Bank, has arrived in Peterborough to take charge of the local branch, succeeding Mr. C. H. Pennefather, who leaves for Toronto to-morrow, where he will take the officers' training course for overseas service.

BESIEGED IN CHITRIL.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Sir George Scott Robertson, the member of parliament whose death has been announced, was the most talked about man in the British Empire 21 years ago when he was the most central figure in the siege of Chitril.

Robertson's campaigning experiences began immediately upon his joining the Indian Medical Service in 1879, after finishing his medical training in London. He saw fighting in the Afghan war of 1879-80 and for the eight years following worked in the various districts of India as a civil surgeon. He was then transferred to duty on the Cashmir frontier. Because of his success in dealing diplomatically with the tribesmen, he was made chief political officer with the Hunza-Naga expedition of 1891-2. Afterwards he undertook a mission to Gor, and had a narrow escape when besieged by the natives.

These little wars attracted no attention in the world at large and Dr. Robertson was unknown to Chitril, at the extremity of the tribal country over which the government of India exercises its influence. His instructions were to control the external affairs of Chitril in a direction friendly to British interests.

War now broke out at Chitril with the murder of its potentate as the result of the ambitious projects of Umra Khan. Robertson with his British and Sikh forces of 545 men, including 137 non-combatants, were besieged between 3rd March and April 20, 1895, when relief was effected by a British expedition after great hardship. Robertson was severely wounded. But the gallantry and determination of himself and his forces, so necessary for the maintenance of British prestige, won him fame and honors. He later returned to England and entered parliament.

AGAINST REPRISALS.

London Paper Opposes Ruthless Methods of War.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The Daily Sketch editorially argues against Zeppelin reprisals. It says: "We are fighting in this war for so great a cause that we must be very careful not to muddy it. Who it was that first began the air raids would be quickly forgotten by history — this would simply have been a ruthless war on both sides."

DIMES FOR BATTLESHIPS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Children of the Hinsdale (Illinois) Public School to-day took up the task of campaigning in the Middle West for a "children's dime" battleship.

Belgian Embassy Denies Offer Of Separate Peace Terms

TWO OF GERMANY'S LARGEST BANKS FAIL WITH HEAVY LIABILITIES

Germans Forced to Retire to Second Line of Defence Along the Russian Front—Another Outbreak of Soldiers in Calgary

GENEVA, Feb. 12.—Two of Germany's largest banks have failed with liabilities of one hundred and twenty-five millions.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 12.—Germans were forced to retire to the second defence lines at many points along the Russian front, the offensive spreading along the whole line.

CALGARY, Feb. 12.—Another outbreak of soldiers and civilians occurred last night, Riverside Hotel, owned by a German, being wrecked.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—It develops that the British cruiser claimed by the Germans to have been sunk off Dogger Point was only a mine sweeper.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Belgian Embassy here denies that separate peace terms had been suggested to them by Germany.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A total of 2,834 munition plants are now operated and controlled by the Government.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Eye witnesses returning from a visit to the Western front report Canadians all along the line cheerful and optimistic. They are much feared by the Germans in hand-to-hand fighting.

PAYS DEBT AFTER 40 YEARS

Son of the Original Debtor Gets a Cheque for $9.

Homer Taggart, a real estate man of South Bend, Ind., has received a letter with a post-office money order in it caling for $9. More than 40 years ago Mr. Taggart's father, long since dead, sold a second-hand buggy to F. D. Airgood, a country blacksmith, at Servia, Ind. A note was given in payment. Part payment had been made on the small original sum. A balance of $8.50 remained unpaid. The note was later destroyed in a fire, and the unpaid part was forgotten. Mr. Airgood, now an old man, had just thought of the money, and mailed the South Bend man $9, which is the unpaid part of the debt and the interest on it.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR INDIGESTION OR SOUR, ACID STOMACH

In Five Minutes No Dyspepsia, Heartburn or Any Stomach Misery

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gasses and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin. It makes all stomach misery vanish in five minutes.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Pape's Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favorite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin. There will not be any distress—eat without fear. It's because Pape's Diapepsin "really does" regulate weak, out-of-order stomachs that gives it its millions of sales annually.

Get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. It is the quickest, surest stomach relief and cure known. It acts almost like magic—it is a scientific, harmless and pleasant stomach preparation which truly belongs in every home.

Bishop O'Brien Spoke At Lindsay

Big Recruiting Meeting Was Held Last Night

LINDSAY, Feb. 10.—Preparatory to holding a military census in the town and county, a monster gathering of citizens was held in the Armories to-night under the auspices of the Citizens' Recruiting League. Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, being the speaker of the evening. Patriotic speeches of a fiery nature and well calculated to inspire the youth were delivered by Chairman C. E. Weeks, Capt. C. O. Williams, Bishop O'Brien of Peterboro, Rt. Rev. F. R. Casey and Lieut.-Col. Fee. O. C. 109th Victoria and Haliburton battalion. During the evening the work of the local representatives, Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, was commended, and the good results of the united efforts of the citizens and officers of the 109th battalion dilated upon. In his opening remarks, Hon. Mr. McGarry emphasized the fact of Canada's great debt to the Motherland. He referred to the first call for men and of the noble response to the present call for 250,000 men, which he declared, would be forthcoming in part, the speaker said.

From the time the flag of Great Britain was taken up to the Plains of Abraham she has been our protector ever since, not in hundreds, thousands, billions, but in billions of dollars have the people of the Motherland given to the advance of railway construction, and to the increase of this country's resources. We owed a great debt to the Motherland previous to August 4th, 1914, but that debt has increased, manyfold.

It was no easy task to force the German machine to retreat from Paris, and when the Germans retreated Canada was saved as well as Paris.

I say we are with Premier Borden when he sent the cable to the Motherland. "We are with you until the last man and the last dollar."

The speaker referred to the brave deeds of the Canadians at Neuve Chapelle and at Ypres, and said: "Just so long as the stories of war are written will the honor and glory of Canadian soldiers be heralded. As in the charge of the Light Brigade, so at Ypres our Canadian boys had cannon to the right of them, to the left of them; in front of them and behind them; they had more aeroplanes over them, mines beneath them and obnoxious gases about them, and yet they failed not but held fast and won a glorious victory."

"There is no greater honor than to don the King's uniform. The moment a man does that he becomes a hero, and to the men who speak in scornful tones of these men I hurl the fact back at them that it is a greater honor to wear the King's uniform than to be without it."

The speaker in addressing the women, who perhaps resented others asking their sons to enlist, urged them to remember the privations suffered by sister women in Belgium, the unfortunate women and children who lost their lives in the sinking of the Lusitania, the death of Edith Cavell in a Belgian prison, the disaster at Ottawa, where two mothers lost their lives, which many believe was due to the murderous tactics of the Hun.

"Answer me, you women, if you do not want to avenge the wrongs of womanhood."

STORMY WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The stormy, blustery weather which we have during February and March is extremely hard on children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them in the house. They are often confined to over-heated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which racks their whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will not fail to break up colds and keep the health of the baby in good condition till the brighter days come along. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GIVEN HONOUR BADGE FOR WRITING LETTERS TO BRITISH SOLDIERS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—Decoration of the silver and gold honour badge of the Scottish "Black Watch" regiment has been conferred upon Mrs. Wm. R. Taylor of this city, "in recognition of her kindly act in writing more than one thousand letters to British soldiers in the trenches." The Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, sent the decoration by Sir Wm. K. McNaught, who told Mrs. Taylor her letters are highly prized by the soldiers.

The letters were addressed to "Some Soldier in the Trenches," and each one was concluded with an original verse. "I do not make a copy of the letters," said Mrs. Taylor, "and I cannot say what was in them, except in the vaguest was merely words of comfort."

It was said this is the first time the "Black Watch" badge has been conferred upon an American.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

ITALY HAS FORBIDDEN THE IMPORTATION OF GOODS FROM GERMANY OR AUSTRIA

"We Have Completed the Steel Wall Around Germany" Declares the French Premier to the Correspondents

ROME, Feb. 12.—The last gap in the ranks of the Allies has been closed by the issuance of a decree by the Italian Government forbidding under heavy penalty the importation of any products from Germany or Austria.

The announcement was made after Aristide Briand, the French Premier, had conferred for several hours at the Foreign Office. Shortly afterward Premier Briand declared to correspondents:

"We have completed the steel wall around Germany."

Under ordinary circumstances Italy's act of hostility would provoke an immediate declaration of war on the part of Germany. For financial as well as military reasons, however, it is not believed here the Kaiser will care to enroll Italy among his open enemies at present.

A serious decree, similar to the one forbidding imports from Germany, will be issued within the near future it was stated to-day, all for the purpose of crushing Germany economically.

Successful Class In Agriculture At Warsaw Complete Course

Instruction Given By Experts in Live Stock, Dairying, Soils and Fertilizers—Class Extended Over Four Weeks

Messrs. McRae and McDowell of the local branch of the Department of Agriculture, have just completed a four weeks' course in Agriculture at Warsaw. This class commenced on Jan. 11th and continued four weeks, terminating on Feb. the 4th. There were thirty-nine students on the roll with an average attendance of twenty regulars. These averaged in age from fourteen to thirty years, most of the class being between twenty and thirty years of age.

Instruction was given in live stock, dairying, soils and fertilisers, common diseases of farm animals with the method of treatment, under-drainage, diseases of farm crops with methods of prevention and treatment, poultry, farm arithmetic, public speaking and letter writing. The course throughout was made as practical as possible.

Six special men visited the class for a day. These men were all specialists in the line of work they took up and those who attended had the opportunity of obtaining advice from men who had made a success in the different lines of work they had undertaken.

During the course a debate was held. Resolved: "That the world is growing better." For this debate half the boys upheld the affirmative while the remainder argued in favour of the negative. This was an opportunity for the members to express themselves on a public platform and, needless to say, all did remarkably well, considering it was their first appearance at work of this kind.

Those men under thirty years of age who attended the class in agriculture for four weeks have the privilege of entering into a competition known as the Acre Profit Competition. The purpose of this is to create an interest in Agriculture and also to determine the amount of profit which can be made from an acre of any crop.

The prize to the man making the greatest net profit is a free trip and living expenses to the two weeks' course in Agriculture at the O.A.C., Guelph. The men in this class decided to grow an acre of mangels and an acre of corn. It is expected there will be twenty contestants. Besides the Acre Profit competition, a similar prize is offered to the young man making the greatest profit from the feeding of three hogs from weaning until they are marketed at six months of age. A number also entered into this competition.

At the conclusion of the course a Junior Farmers' Improvement Association was formed, with the following officers:

President—James Hawthorne.
Vice-President—Allan Payne.
Sec.-Treas.—Allan Edwards.

This Association is open only to members who have taken the course in Agriculture. Its object is to bind the class together, to stimulate an interest in agriculture and to conduct experiments under the direction of the local branch of the Department of Agriculture. Some of the experiments to be conducted this summer are a comparison of O.A.C. No 72 oats with others commonly grown. Comparing treated and untreated seed for prevention of smut, using the formalin solution. A variety test of potatoes to determine the best variety or varities for this section. A variety test of corn to determine the most suitable variety for this district. An experiment with hardy strains of alfalfa.

The success met with at Warsaw should place the work of the Department on a sound footing in that district and should be an incentive to the boys to do a bigger and better work in their chosen occupation.

GAS PLANT EXPLOSION DESTROYS A KEENE RESIDENCE

Dr. C. W. Ross Loses His Home and all Personal Effects This Morning

Front of House Blown Out

The residence of Dr. C. W. Ross, Keene, was totally destroyed by fire this morning at 7.20. The cause of the fire was a gas explosion in the cellar, the entire front of the house, which was built of brick, being blown out. Mr. J. H. Fletcher, who was in the cellar at the time, had to be dug out. The other occupants escaped with slight injuries. The house was formerly occupied by Dr. V. McWilliams. The contents were completely destroyed.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sour water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO AUSTRALIANS WHO FELL AT GALLIPOLI

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 11.— It has already been planned in Australia to send native trees to Gallipoli to be planted on the graves of the brave Antipodeans who fell in the Anzac struggle, and it has been suggested that the Turks be asked, after the war, to cede to the Commonwealth the fringe of ground where the graves are. This gives a pathetic interest, therefore, to this paragraph in Captain Bean's official dispatch:

"The uppermost thoughts in the mind of every man I have spoken to is regret at leaving the little mountain cemeteries, which every valley and hillside contains. For a week past, at any time of day, you saw small parties of men carefully lettering in the half obliterated name of some comrade on a rough wooden cross or carefully raking the mound, and bordering it neatly with fuse caps from fallen shells. The demand on ordnance for wood for crosses has been extraordinary. I noticed some chaplains sowing wattle (from Australia) and manuka (from New Zealand) on the graves.

"The men believe the Turks will respect these graveyards. Indeed, many Australian soldiers have been writing letters to leave in their dug-outs for 'Abdul,' telling him what a clean fighter they think he has been, and wishing him 'au revoir.'"

And "Nobody"

SYNOPSIS.

Dudley Larnigan, district attorney of New York, attacks the liquor and vice trusts. He is killed by an agent of a secret society, the committee of fifteen. His son, Bruce Larnigan, is elected district attorney and takes up the fight. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, whose father is head of the insurance trust.

BRUCE LARNIGAN had won the first battle in his fight against the fifteen, a mysterious graft syndicate which, composed not of cheap politicians, but of great business men, had strangled New York in its nefarious grip and was planning to spread its activities to cover the whole country. But Bruce had no illusions. A final and despairing attempt to beat him on election day itself by attempting to prove that he had accepted a bribe from the liquor interests to secure lax enforcement of the law had failed, thanks partly to his own cleverness and partly to the help of Dorothy Maxwell, his fiancee.

But Bruce knew that the real fight was only just beginning. The graft syndicate was intrenched in power. It had warned his father, Dudley Larnigan, that death would be his reward if he did not desist from his efforts to expose its corruption. It had made good the warning, and Bruce had sworn not only to finish his father's uncompleted work, but to avenge his death as well.

To Bruce, Stanford Stone appeared to be a great capitalist, a distinguished financier, a man justly honored by the community and worthy of respect and confidence. Yet Stanford Stone was the head of the graft syndicate. It was Stanford Stone who had decreed Dudley Larnigan's death and Stanford Stone who had led the assault upon Bruce himself. Moreover—and this Bruce did not suspect, either—a personal motive lay behind Stone's enmity for him, for Stone was in love with Dorothy Maxwell.

Bruce had determined that his first move must be to strike at the evils of the tenement house district, which his father had been planning to take up.

"I want the man higher up," he told his mother. "I know there is one, and it is he that I must get. I don't know yet who he is, but I'm going to find out!"

"Look at this," said Bruce, showing Stone the letter.

He was at home when he said that, leaning over his mother's chair. And even as he spoke a tiny dart whistled by his ear and was buried in the back of his mother's chair. So faint was the sound, so tiny the missile, that his mother knew nothing of it. Bruce got it out and found that around the dart was wrapped a note. He read it. It was brief:

"Warning: Stop investigating the tenements. The Fifteen."

Bruce smiled rather grimly; there was a drawing of a skull on the note. He stepped to the window, hoping that whoever had thrown the dart might be within sight. But no suspicious character of any sort rewarded his searching glance; instead he saw Dorothy Maxwell and Stanford Stone approaching the house. They looked up and waved to him.

"I certainly didn't expect to see either of you!" said Bruce, laughingly. "Have you seen any suspicious looking character around?"

"No one except you—you look pretty suspicious!" laughed Stone. "Why?"

"Nothing—no matter," said Bruce. "Come in and see my mother, won't you?"

"I'll tell you why I asked you that question, Mr. Stone," said Bruce when they were alone. "Look at this."

He handed him the note, first drawing a line through "The Fifteen."

"Only fourteen now," he said. "I got rid of Murphy! I'll run them down and get even with my father's murderers!"

Outside they separated, Bruce and Dorothy to go downtown, Stone to hurry to his office, his face set in lines of grim determination. He strode rapidly toward his office. And there he called a meeting of the fifteen. Anton Dow, head of the tenement house trust, appeared, angry because of newspaper stories about Bruce's determination to get the man higher up in the tenement evils. Dow knew, as Bruce did not, that he himself was the man higher up, and his nervousness was unconcealed.

"We've got to strike at him before he can hit us!" said Stone angrily. "Our whole position is menaced by this one man. Dow, you are the one chiefly interested. You own some property in the tenement district of a—well, a questionable sort?"

"I suppose I do," said Dow. "I'm not responsible for my tenants."

"Well, trap Larnigan with a woman in one of your houses."

"Ye-es—that can be done," agreed Dow, after a moment's thought. "We'll plan the details later, Stone."

There was more talk, and then Dow had to hurry home to lunch. Dow was a model father and husband. He was devoted to his wife, and his love for his two children, Harold and Lillian, knew no bounds.

And meanwhile, even while Dow played with his own children in his luxurious home, Bruce and Dorothy were seeing other children in a house that was also owned by Dow. But this house was a tenement that disregarded law and decency alike. There were no fire escapes; the heating system was out of order, and there was running water from only one tap on each floor.

"Fruit-a-tives" means health. In years to come, people will look back to the discovery of 'Fruit-a-tives' and wonder how they ever managed to get along without these wonderful tablets, made from fruit juices.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is excellent for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Sour Stomach. 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only certain remedy that will correct chronic Constipation and Liver trouble.

'Fruit-a-tives' is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world and many people have testified to its value in severe cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Pain in the Back, Impure Blood, Headaches, Neuralgia, Pimples, Blotches and other Skin Troubles.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" has been one of the great successes of the century and the sales are enormous, both in Canada and the United States. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Bruce, sickened, went to the street. Other children came to talk with him, and he sat down on the stoop and played with them. Across the street was a saloon, and from this emerged a burly, ill favored man, at the sight of whom the children shuddered.

"Hey, youse! Beat it! We don't want no dude reformers down this way—see?" said the fellow, whom Bruce recognized as a cheap ward politician named Black.

Bruce smiled, took out paper and made a note. Black shook his fist in his face and, turning, made a signal that set several roughs across the street in motion. Bruce started to rise; Black knocked him down, and the gang came tearing over.

But a sudden and remarkable intervention came to Bruce's aid. As if by instinct the children flung themselves upon him, covering him with their soft bodies. The gang stopped; even their brutality shrank from attacking the children. Bruce had time to draw his revolver and rose, the weapon in his hand. Black turned and ran; the gangsters drew guns and looked for shelter. But the children's screams had brought the police, and Bruce was safe for the time.

From that moment Bruce went to work with redoubled energy. And Dorothy, painfully impressed by what she had seen, had helped by trying to do what she could for the tenement children. She knew she could not do much for the whole city, but in that one house she improved conditions vastly. One night she was visiting the Dows, old friends of her family, and described the class she had established for the children of the tenement house.

"And tonight," said Dorothy—"tonight we're going to have a Christmas tree for them down there. I'm going down now to give out the little presents."

"Mother, can't we go and see?" cried Lillian.

"Oh, yes—please!" echoed Harold.

Mrs. Dow hesitated. But they pleaded so eagerly that she gave in at last, and Dorothy took them with her. On the way she stopped and telephoned to tell Bruce and ask him to join her. His voice as he answered was excited.

"I'll come if I can—as soon as I can," he said. "Dorothy, I'm on the trail at last, I do believe! Tonight I've got a chance to get the evidence I need."

What had happened was that that afternoon a woman had come to Bruce in his office, a woman whose profession no one could mistake.

"Say," she said, when she was with him alone, "You want to get the goods on all this tenement stuff, don't you? Well, you come down to my place tonight, and I'll see that you get it. You've got to come to the house."

Bruce laughed at her.

"Do I look as easy as all that?" he said. "Do you suppose I can't recognize as obvious a trap as that?"

"Aw, I knew it wasn't any use!" she said. "I told them you wouldn't come. But I'll get the devil—the main guy's goin' to be there"—

"What?" said Bruce sharply. "He in, eh? Well, that might make a difference"—

He hesitated, questioned her sharply. But in the end he decided to go—taking certain precautions.

The time came, and Bruce, still hesitating a little but determined to face the risk that he saw could not be avoided, went with the woman to her house. The whole thing filled him with disgust; the woman herself and the girls he saw in her house revolted him.

"You see, you can find out what's going on here," said the woman. "It's plain enough—my God, what's that?"

There was a thunderous knocking at the door. Heavy blows fell against it, and it came crashing in. A squad of police followed.

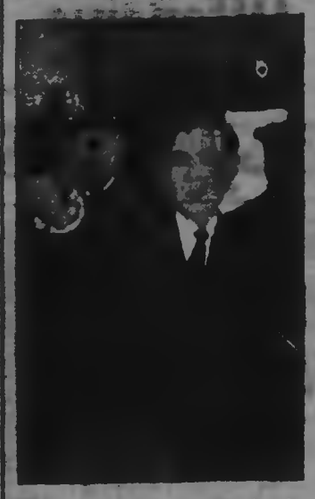
"Now don't blame me—the joint's pinched!" screamed the woman.

Abruptly Bruce saw what had been planned and went white. But just as a policeman stepped up to him another man in plain clothes appeared.

"Officer, leave Mr. Larnigan alone," he said. "He's here to get evidence. Arrest the woman—no one else."

"Yes, Mr. Commissioner," said the man, saluting.

This was Bruce's counterstroke. He had arranged for the police commissioner to accompany any raiding party and had told him his plans in advance. His reputation was safe.



"There's one of your houses—burning up!" he cried.

But now a new factor came into sight, Anton Dow, furious at the frustration of his plans, suddenly appeared.

"Arrest both those men!" he cried. "I demand it!"

"Anton Dow!" cried Bruce. "So you are 'the main guy' here! You are one of the Fifteen—one of my father's murderers!"

Dow realized his mistake. But he tried desperately to secure Bruce's arrest. Only a sudden commotion outside the house checked him.

"Fire!" yelled some one at a window. "In the house across the street!"

Bruce tore over to look. Flames were pouring from the door and the lower windows of the house, which had no fire escapes! He understood the full horror of it in a moment. Dorothy was there! He turned frantically to Dow.

"There's one of your houses—burning up!" he cried. "No fire escapes! Dorothy Maxwell is there, trying to help the children you oppress! And with her are your own children!"

Dow, stricken, never doubting, collapsed. Bruce raced to the street. The policemen followed. Firemen were arriving. Ladders were going up. Bruce knew the window where Dorothy must be. He was up the first ladder and found her with the two Dow children. He brought them to safety and then helped in the work of rescue. Dow, stammering, incoherent, came to Bruce.

"I've been wrong—I've been a sinful man!" he said. "But I see my wickedness. I will reform every building I own. And tomorrow morning I will give you the evidence against the rest!"

"Come to my office at 9 o'clock," said Bruce.

Neither saw that Black, lurking near by, heard. Neither knew that Black got word to Stanford Stone.

Bruce was up all night. On Christmas morning, when he had done all he could for the fire sufferers, he went to his office to wait for Dow. He looked at the clock—6:30. His mother called him up. She begged him to come to her at once—said that she must see him. He hesitated, then scribbled a note. "Dow," it read, "I will be back at 9:30. Wait."

Outside his office he met Dorothy.

"I was afraid," she said. "I wanted you to come home."

"Come with me," he said with a laugh. "I must hurry back, but I'll have breakfast at home with you and mother."

Dow came, found the note and sat down to wait. He had gone to pieces. The escape of his children had unnerved him. He glanced at the clock. Nine o'clock.

In his own office Stanford Stone, too, looked at his clock. He watched the minutes pass slowly till five had gone.

And at the fifth minute, when, as Stone supposed, Dow would just be beginning his revelations to Bruce, an explosion shattered Bruce's room. A bomb connected with the clock was set off, and Dow was instantly killed. Only an accident had saved Bruce from sharing his fate.

CONSTIPATIENTS
Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a cold blood poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health. 1

A Serious Soldier.—In some respects Sir Douglas Haig looks very different from his predecessors. He has no twinkle in his eye and he seldom smiles. Indeed, he has a somewhat sulky mouth and one of those chins that thrust forward in a truculent manner. His forehead sloped backward a little and his hair is none too plentiful. He will probably never have the big personal following of Sir John French or Lord Roberts. On the other hand, he has the rather rare gift among soldiers of saying the right thing at the right time, and he is never chary of praise.

Twisted Titles.—The humorous twists given to book titles by library borrowers may be illustrated says H. T. Coutts, by the following requests, which are but a few of many: "I come (or Mr. A——. Will you please send him 'Indecent Orders' (In Deacon's Orders)? "Have you a novel entitled 'She Combeth Not Her Head' ('He Cometh Not, She Said')? Very disarming to the librarian was a request received on a postcard from a male teacher:—"Kindly reserve 'A Damsel or two.'"

A Girl and A Garden.

By Fygal H. Williams.

"I could love you," said the pretty neighbor, and then as the man impetuously reached for her she added quickly, "for your garden!"

The man's face fell.

"Now, I call that downright mean," declared the man vigorously. "You're a nice, pretty neighbor. Here I've been courting you and making love to you for months, and now I find that it's not me, but my garden, that's made an impression. I'll sell the garden," he added roughly.

"Oh, don't!" she cried. "You don't really mean that! Think how long it's been in your family! Think how much care your mother and your grandmother and your great-grandmother spent on all those dear flowers!"

"Time I was selling it!" growled the man. "I'll get an old factory, a bakery or something of that sort here!"

"Oh, oh!" cried the pretty neighbor.

Wholly distressed, the pretty neighbor, her hands tightly clinched, watched the man as he went down one of the paths toward a gay little summer house.

She was standing near a wall, beside a little fountain, and all about her the garden was a bower of beauty. Vistas between the trees radiated from the spot where she stood. Birds sang in the trees. She could hardly realise that the big, hurrying city was just on the other side of the wall.

"WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO?" THE GIRL ASKED.

From the summer house she saw the man come out. In one hand he carried a big white board, in the other a bucket of paint and a brush. When he reached the pretty neighbor he placed the board against the wall and without a word took up the brush.

"What are you going to do?" the girl asked somewhat tremulously.

"Paint," answered the man laconically.

With fascinated eyes the girl watched him as the letters grew under his brush. Across the top of the board he painted in big brutal letters the words, "For Sale."

The pretty neighbor caught her breath as the cruel sentence, flaring red, stared at her from the board. Underneath these words the man worked industriously for a little time.

While he worked the girl gazed back at the garden with tear dimmed eyes. When he had finished the man gave a little sigh of satisfaction. The girl looked at the sign again and gasped. "For Sale," it read. "This Garden, Suitable For a Factory. Apply Within to Martin Connor."

"You—you aren't going to nail that sign up, are you?" questioned the girl, perilously close to tears.

"Sure!" ejaculated the man.

The man picked up the sign, holding it awkwardly to save his clothes from paint, and, with the bucket and brush in the other hand, again went toward the gay little summer house. He whistled as he went, but the girl, who followed, with difficulty stifled her sobs.

At the summer house the man deposited his painting utensils and secured hammer and nails. Still whistling, he led the way through a secluded little iron gate to the street.

Once outside, the man carefully nailed the sign to the wall. When the mark was finished he stepped back a bit to admire it. The girl, who had watched the proceedings, cried out at this.

"You're perfectly horrid!" she cried. "I hate you!"

Then the pretty neighbor, frantically dabbing at her eyes with an absurd little handkerchief, ran across the street to her own home.

When the pretty neighbor awoke the next morning she could not think at first what sorrow was near her. Then it came to her in a jump. The garden was to be sold! She shuddered as she thought of the heartless sign and decided that she would never, never look at it again.

A moment later she was at the window, peering out at the garden wall opposite. Her heart gave a little bound as the blank face of the wall met her gaze. The sign was gone.

It was a very merry pretty neighbor that hailed Martin shortly after.

"Ho," cried the pretty neighbor, boldly walking through the little iron gate into the garden—"ho, I knew you didn't mean to sell your garden! You thought you'd scare me into loving you!"

The man, who had been weeding, looked up at her. He wore an old broad brimmed straw hat that in some undefinable way made him seem even more strikingly handsome than ever.

"You're wrong," he declared slowly. "It's sold!"

"What!" cried the pretty neighbor in consternation.

"Yes," replied the man.

"Perhaps," said the man listlessly. "I'm glad you came over," he went on. "I was afraid I'd have to go without saying goodby to you."

"Goodby?" asked the girl, her face a picture of surprise and dismay.

"Yes," the man went on, "I'm going away. My train leaves at noon. You may never see me again."

"Why—why are you going?" stammered the pretty neighbor very woefully.

The man looked up at her quickly.

"There's nothing for me to stay here for," he replied without animation, evidently not finding what he hoped in the girl's face.

"I'm sorry," said the girl finally.

She extended her hand. In silence he shook it. Slowly she went toward the gate. When she was almost there the man called to her.

"I'm a brute," he declared contritely, "for letting you think for a minute that I'd ever really let a factory be erected here. Since you love the garden so you're a right to know that the man who has bought it is your father. He will not disturb it for some time—not for the present at least."

"Oh!" cried the girl. For a moment her face was radiant, then suddenly it went sad again.

"Wouldn't you—won't you come back some time and visit my father's garden?" she asked.

"No, I'll not come back," the man replied. "It—it would hurt too much. Goodby."

"Goodby," repeated the girl and slowly went through the little iron gate, across the street to her home.

Several times during the next hour she looked at the clock and involuntarily sighed. The morning was going very fast, it seemed. Faster and faster the time flew on toward noon. Presently it was 10:30, then 10:45 and then 11 o'clock.

When the morning reached this point the pretty neighbor was suddenly galvanized into action.

"Good gracious!" she cried, jumping from the chair where she had been endeavoring to read a book. "Good gracious, he may be gone, and I haven't found out where he is going!"

Without more ado the pretty neighbor raced out of the house and across the street to the little iron gate. The gate was locked! Wildly she tore around the wall to the great front gate. Through this she ran up the shady, curving path to the big house.

Suddenly, as at high speed she bore around a particularly sharp curve, she plumped right into the arms of the man. The latter, when he saw that it was the pretty neighbor, dropped the suit case he had been carrying and drew her closely to him.

"Dear, dear sweetheart," he cried, "I simply can't leave you! I can't do it!"

He hugged her so tightly that she fairly gasped for breath. However, the pretty neighbor had enough breath left to gasp a reply—a very faint reply.

"Don't go," she said, burrowing her head into his coat. "Don't go. It's not your garden I want. It's not your garden I'm in love with. It's you!"

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bringing Sunshine to the Darkest Day

THE SPRING BRIDE

Her Frock, Veil and Bouquet

FLOWER GIRLS AND PAGES

NEW YORK Feb. 12.—Fortunate indeed is the young daughter of the American home, who may indulge if she wishes, according to the old-time custom brought down through the ages, in the filmy, dainty wedding gown of white, with its ethereal veil of net, bordered, perhaps with an edge of rare old lace which had long ago decked the gown of her grandmother. Were she compelled by tradition to wear a jacket of red or black, or cumcades, she would lose much of her spiritueelle charm and take on a buxomness not suited to her type.

The wedding gown of to-day has lost some of its dignity with its train, but it has gained a youthful charm which is to be preferred. In the wedding frock to-day, there is much of the quaint charm and sweetness of grandmother's gown; smocking, puffing, quilling, shirring and numberless other handmade trimmings are used in its garniture, and it is fashioned of the sheerest, most airy of fabrics and laces.

The Short Bridal Gown.

The Attractive Use of Lace and Chiffon.

Laces, chiffons, and nets were never dainter or more fairy-like than they are this season. It is to be a season of laces and transparent fabrics. Laces as graceful as the web of the spider, or the glinting, shimmering wing of the butterfly, vie for favor with the more substantial. Spanish and thread-run patterns; the sheerest of silk crepes and the crispest of organdies are modish for frocks. Paper-like taffetas are often used in the gowns of the bride's attendants and then, again, they are of organdy, in the palest of tints, trimmed with bands of taffeta. This combination of taffeta and organdy will be of noticeable feature of all imported frocks this summer; it is an unusually attractive notion although not a particularly practical one, for Americans. The tub frock as such, is not known in Paris. One may say that, owing to the climate, it is solely an American idea. In most parts of Europe it is cool enough to wear a frock of silk or lightweight wool the summer through, even for sport purposes.

The Formal Wedding Gown.

For the demure little bride who wishes to tread the beaten path of custom, for reasons sentimental or otherwise, there are gorgeously brocaded satins with a touch of silver in the motif. A court train lends formal dignity to such a gown even though the frock itself is considerably shorter than would have been dreamed of in mother's or grandmother's time. The smallest of pages or flower girls are often a detail of such a wedding, lending a novel, pretty note. They are softer satins, too, which may be used for the formal or informal frock equally well.

Simple Veil Arrangements.

Quite the most important part of the frock for June, October, February, or any other bride, is the veil. It is often a simple length of tulle draped over the hair and caught with a draped over the hair and caught with a wreath or cluster of orange blossoms or white clematis; then again it is a cap or rouche, but always there is the cluster of dainty waxy blossoms, so absolutely necessary to the true wedding spirit. The veil offers the best way of introducing the bit of rare old lace without which the wedding gown is incomplete, if such a bit is to be found in the family treasure chest. If there is none, the bride must be content to bring in her "something old" in a bit of brocade, cleverly introduced on bodice, or girdle; a piece of antique jewellery, also will serve to keep the spell.

The newest outing hat for summer wear is of panama straw, with the trimming painted either on the brim or crown.

Evening dresses are mostly skirt, the bodice being only a chiffon, and of sleeves there are none. Shoulder straps alone support the bodice.

Suit jackets are somewhat shorter They have bells and pockets; also flaring tails.

Running Nose Colds Cured Sneezing Stopped Instantly

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis, and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand,—it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

Scotch Repartee.

An eminent Scotch clergyman happened to dine with some learned lawyers of the Edinburgh bar. He appropriated to himself a large dish of cream, upon which he fed voraciously. Erskine, wishing to admonish him for his discourtesy to the other diners, remarked:

"Doctor, you remind me of Nebuchadnezzar in his degradation."

"Aye, do I mind ye o' Nebuchadnezzar? Doubtless because I am eating among the brutes," answered the Scotch worthy.

Settled the Difficulty.

An insurance agent had vainly tried to persuade a man to insure his valuables against burglary. "A safe's all very well," he admitted, "but look at the constant trouble of locking up and unlocking to see if your things are all right."

"I've got over that difficulty," declared the weary listener.

"Indeed!" said the agent incredulously. "How?"

"I've had a window put in the safe," growled the other.

Artery Of An Ox Reunites Nerves

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—At the convention of the German Orthopedic Society, which is now in session here many inventions of methods for repairing the wastes of war have been exhibited or discussed.

Dr. Ferdinand Sauerbruch, professor of surgery at Zurich University, showed to the delegates an artificial hand which was able to grasp objects of all forms and to lift weighs up to twenty-two pounds.

An entirely novel feature of the hand is that the fingers are controlled by muscular action in the upper arm, which is prepared for such work by two operations. The muscular power afterward is transmitted to the hand through a system of wires and pulleys, to which all the fingers respond.

Dr. Karl Ludloff, professor of surgery at Breslau University, described a method for uniting severed nerves and reviving the muscular action of nerveless limbs. Dr. Ludloff showed that the natural tendency of severed ends of nerves to reunite is hindered by the fact that the cicatriced new flesh between them is impervious to growing nerve fibres.

Professor Ludloff restores the connection by a piece of an artery of an ox filled with gelatine, through which nerves readily grow, even bridging gaps of several inches. After several weeks crippled limbs regain their motor activity. The Professor said that many cases already had been successfully treated where permanent lameness otherwise would have followed.

Professor Hoerstmann, of Koenigsberg University, described a method for treating joints left stiff after wounds have healed. Through the use of hot air, massage and mechanical appliances Professor Hoerstmann said he had been successful in eighty per cent of the cases treated by him.

New blouses are in pretty color combinations. For instance a blouse of blue handkerchief linen has a fichu of pale pink batiste.

THE RIGHT WAY

THE secret of SUCCESS in shopping lies in being able to LOOK at the garment before you pay for it. You not only LOOK at it. You try it on. You have the chance to try on several. If one does not suit, another WILL. If alterations are needed, the fitting can be done on the spot. There MAY be other ways to shop. But this is the only RIGHT way. This is the "trade-at-home" way. And it brings not only SUCCESS to you, but adds prosperity to your town as well. Every purchase you make in this way creates a permanent value in your community, apart from the value and pleasure YOU get out of it. And you become a community builder. Then why shop any other way? Keep this picture in mind and you will not fail in your duty to yourself and your town.

Home Health Club

Drug Dangers: As the season advances and cold winter months cause people to close up their houses even more thoroughly in order to shut out the cold, we find epidemics of colds, La Grippe and Pneumonia increasingly prevelant and fatal. Old people and those that use whisky, alcohol, beer, opiates and tobacco have less powers of resistance and are therefore the greatest sufferers.

In order that one may know the real danger of drugs, not only those deadly drugs enumerated above, but also the so-called "cold cures" that are so easily obtained at the drug stores, it is well to know something about the real cause of colds, then the danger can be avoided instead of reaching an acute stage and requiring a "cure".

In most of the cases that are presented to the Home Health Club, the sufferers say, "this whole trouble began when I took a severe cold at such and such a date", possibly the time may be several months or even years past and very many tell of severe attacks of La Grippe through which they passed 20 years ago and from which they never seemed to fully recover. Now, as a matter of fact one does not "catch" cold or La Grippe of even pneumonia suddenly. The acute manifestation of these conditions is frequently sudden and fatal, but the slow, steady and sure preparation for the acute attack may have extended over a period of several months or even years, through an accumulation of waste and poisonous matter in the system and in 90 per cent. of the cases impacted fecal matter in the colon. In many such cases, as I have frequently told you before, the sufferer quickly denies being constipated, has a movement of the bowels every day, but admits being troubled with piles. I then know that the sufferer is troubled severely with constipation. The daily movement is from 1 to 3 days late. The poisonous waste matter that should be promptly eliminated, remains too long in the colon and much of it is reabsorbed into the system. The natural moisture which should cause it to pass out in a soft mass, is eliminated through the pores of the skin and we find that the patient suffers from a vile and offensive odor from the sweat that pours out under the arms and in females in the form of leucorrhoea or Whites.

Frequently also we find that the kidneys are inactive, there is no desire for drinking pure, cold water. The sufferer bathes frequently and uses disinfecting and deodorizing powers, but the offensive discharge persists. The appetite is good and wholesome foods are used, but still there is a severe cold whenever there is the slightest exposure.

What's to be done? Take dope for colds, stay indoors or in bed? Impossible to remove the cause in that way. Now, let's go at it in a sensible manner and remove the danger of all these diseases and the danger from drugs at the same time. Eat less, if necessary in order to give the alimentary canal a chance to do some house cleaning, fast a day or two or three. Use oil freely. If the trouble is in the colon, and this is usually evident by headaches and piles, leucorrhea and offensive perspiration, then you should use mineral oil and use it regularly, not only for a week but for months, every night just before retiring. If the fault is in the liver which is quite likely to be indicated by biliousness, sallow complexion, etc., then you should use olive oil freely. A wine glassful at night before retiring and in either case if the trouble is severe, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar in a cup of water the first thing after arising in the morning for 2 or 3 days, will help the house cleaning along and enable you to better resist colds and their dangerous after effects and also avoid the use of drugs.

There are many people that must have drugs, they are necessary but poisonous drugs, liquors, opiates and narcotics are not necessary and only make matters worse, reduce the natural powers of resistance and the chances of getting well. Eat right, live right, don't worry and see to it that the waste matter is properly and promptly eliminated and you will not "catch cold."

Dear Doctor: Some time ago you had something to say about the value of bananas as food, comparing them with potatoes, etc. Now, it seems to me you did not give the banana all the credit to which it is entitled. You, or the authorities you quoted, said nothing of the saving of energy in the digestion of the banana as compared with the potato. As the former requires so much less force expended in its digestion than the latter, it appears to me that the difference should be added to the nutritive value of the banana. Do you not think so? I have never seen any notice taken of this phase of the subject, but think it deserving of notice. However much nutriment a food contains if it is so hard to digest that it requires the expenditure of its digestion of as much force as it returns to us, how much better off are we for its use?

I believe that fruits and nuts, properly combined, contain the element required for man's physical well being. Being practically all the foods that are really palatable without artificial preparation it seems to me to indicate that nature intended them alone as the proper food for man. I am "cranky" I suppose, but I am glad that people are at least beginning to wake up to the evil effects of the ordinary diet—Miss L.

(Answer) I agree most heartily in what Miss L. has to say in regard to the digestibility of foods that require less of an effort in digestion, and that this should be added to the nutritive value of the food. However I also believe the digestive apparatus needs exercise as well as other parts of the body, therefore the exclusive use of very easily digested or predigested foods would have a tendency to weaken them, although they should not be overworked, which is the rule rather than the execption in the present day diet, as to manner and quantity and quality of food taken.

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

ROOSTER'S LONG WALK

Lost in New York, Turns Up in Port Jervis With Swollen Feet.

When the birds were crated and ready to be expressed back to Port Jervis, the prize rooster, valued at $250, escaped and for four weeks was lost. A few da vs ago when the Monroe brothers went out to feed their feathered stock they were amazed to find the missing prize winner in the yard. His feet were swollen and calloused and he was weak from exposure and lack of food. But he crowed lustily.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to the Warne Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

BLEW HIS MEMORY AWAY

Canadian Soldiers' Story of What a German Shell Did For Him.

Gunner Thomas F. Trusler of the Third brigade, Field artillery, Canadian forces, who is in New York, got too close to a big German shell in the battle of Vlamartinge in Belgium, just before the battle of Ypres, and forgot everything in his life before.

Trusler, who is from Montreal, says all he remembers of his twenty-two years of life dates from a day he awoke in a hospital at Shorncliffe, England, and wanted to know why he wasn't at the front. He couldn't tell what his name was, nor where he came from. He was told that he had been entered on the hospital lists as Private Howard Trusler, and it was by that name that he went back to the front and joined another Canadian artillery company, only to have his left leg shattered by a shell and be sent back to an English hospital. When convalescent, he was sent back to Montreal, where his papers showed he came from.

His relatives had been notified, he says, and his uncle went to Quebec to meet the Scandinavia, the ship on which he had sailed, but when his uncle greeted him the soldier told him he didn't know him. When he reached Bonaventure station, in Montreal, his parents met him, but got the same cold reception. He was taken all over the city to his old haunts, but he knew none and had to begin all over making acquaintances.

When he went to war he was engaged, and on his return was taken to meet his fiancee.

"I couldn't remember ever having seen her," said Trusler, "but if I wrote some of the letters she received from places I had been, I guess I was all right as a lover."

CHINA'S RULER

Yuan-Shi-Kai's step up from the position of President of the Republic to that of Emperor of China may have very far-reaching effects. Fifty-eight years of age, short, thick-set, and with the neck of a bull, Yuan-Shi-Kai is, in many ways, the exact opposite to the typical Chinese. China is a country of conservatives, of people who hate and mistrust change; Yuan is a revolutionary. He is practical, ambitious, and opposed to the traditions of China.

There is not a drop of royal blood in him; he is not even an aristocrat or a polished, educated, travelled gentleman. He comes of peasant stock and he looks it. His whole life, indeed, has been a remarkable mixture of good and bad, rough and smooth. To his credit may be placed:

The patronage of the great anti-opium crusade, the creation of a small but moderaly efficient portion of the Chinese army, the abolition of torture, and the beginning of a campaign of political, municipal and social reform. On the other hand, there are things at his door which savor more of the Middle Ages than of the twentieth century. For example, he maintained an almost ferocious standard of discipline among his troops, in suppressing uprisings he had heads cut off wholesale; and he has always posed as a friend to those whose brains he wanted to sap—and then he has thrown them overboard.

When the Dowager Empress of China and the deposed Emperor died, the latter's brother determined to show fight against Yuan-Shi-Kai, then Foreign Minister. But he shrank from doing more than dismissing him, and made a laughable excuse for even such a comparatively mild decision.

"He is to return to his native place because of the rheumatism in his leg," decreed the Regent. "Thus our clemency towards him is manifested." Needless to say Yuan had no rheumatic leg.

THE TWO ENDS OF LIFE

British Commander perished at 70; Boy of 15 Honorably Discharged.

LONDON, Feb. 12. — Nearly 70 years of age, Lieutenant-Commander H. T. Garside-Tipping of the British navy went down with the armed yacht Sanda when she was sunk by the enemy's fire in an attack on Zeebrugge on November 16, 1915. The vigorous old man could not have died a happier death, for he insisted upon serving his country afloat when he might have enjoyed the ease of the retired list. At the other end of life there is the no less interesting case of the Sussex boy Jannaway, who joined an artillery regiment at the age of 14, fought at Loos and elsewhere, and was honourably discharged recently on his fifteenth birthday.

SPAIN WON'T BUY WAR MATERIAL

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A despatch from Madrid says that in order to improve the financial situation the Spanish Government has decided not to proceed with the purchase of $6,000,000 worth of war material in the United States.

FRENCH TROOPS SCORED A SUCCESS IN THE CHAMPAGNE

Capture 300 Yards of German Trenches by Sudden Grenade Attack---Are Making Gains in the Direction of Tahure Heights---German Counter Attacks Were All Fruitless

ALLIES TO PROTEST TO UNITED STATES

PARIS, Feb. 12.—(French Official Communique)—The French conquered 300 yards of German trenches in the Champagne region by a sudden grenade attack, northeast of Mesnil, the War Office announced this afternoon. The gain was made in the direction of Tahure Heights, dominating the important Somme railroad, over which the German Champagne army obtains supplies.

The Germans made fruitless counter-attacks. The French captured sixty-five prisoners.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 12.—The Minister of Communications to-day announced that the Government has about completed arrangements for directing freight from Canada to Russia, via Vladivostok and Vancouver. War munitions and other supplies will be transported to the eastern battle-front in this manner.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Allies it was stated on good authority to-day will send a strong note of protest to the United States if Secretary Lansing, as forecast in cable despatches, accepts the German policy regarding armed merchantmen and holds that such vessels must be treated as ships of war.

"Maybe the landslide in America in November will sweep away Wilson with his trimming policies," said the Globe in a caustic editorial.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Neue Zuricher Zeitung, which is pro-German and has influential friends at Berlin, warns Germany that Rumania is rapidly drifting into the war on the side of the Allies, according to Milan despatches to-day.

The Bucharest correspondent of the Zeitung wired that military preparations are being made openly, which leave no doubt of Rumania's intentions.

SALONIKA, Feb. 12.—The French troops crossed the Vardar River on February 10th, and are now encamped on the right bank in the region of Janitsa, apparently expecting an attack by Teutonic forces from the direction of Monastir.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—The building which houses the Forging Department of the Canadian Car and Foundry Co. at Turcot, on the outskirts of Montreal, was badly damaged by fire early this morning.

The cause of the blaze is unknown, but in view of the recent activity of German agents in Canada, and considering that the company was engaged in manufacturing munitions, and was working 24 hours a day to fill rush orders. It is generally believed that an incendiary origin would be discovered.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Feb. 12.—Local newspapers have received communications from the Censorship Bureau at Ottawa serving notice that if any more reports of Canadian troop movements are printed all copies sent into Canada will be confiscated. This will apply to all United States papers.

The Official Chief Censor at Ottawa, Ernest J. Chambers, has even gone so far as to intimate that American newspapers violating this censorship might be prohibited from circulating in Canada during the period of the war.

RPOFESSOR LEACOCK IS A FOREMOST HUMOURIST

Professor Stephan Leacock of McGill University, who lectures in the Collegiate Hall next Thursday evening, 17th February, under the auspices of the Local Red Cross Society, has kindly given the Society permission to donate its half of the proceeds to its "Prisoners of War Fund."

The object of this Fund has been explained so frequently, and the citizens generally are in full sympathy with it, for no one feels comfortable if they think a Canadian soldier, a prisoner of war, is actually in need of food. The other half of the proceeds, Professor Leacock states he wishes to go to the Belgian Relief Fund" to aid the heroic people who held back the firs terrific onslaught of the Germans, and so saved the situation for the British and French nations.

There will be no tickets of stated admission to this lecture, but a collection will be taken up and the Red Cross Society feels it can confidently leave it to the people of Peterborough to make this collection a notable and worthy contribution from them to two of the most deserving funds of all the many which require our sympathy and support at the present time.

"It is safe to say that not for a decade, and perhaps never before in Toronto was so risible-raising an address given."—Toronto World.

"If Mr. Stephen cocock hears the deeply satisfied appreciation which is finding voice regarding him, his right ear will blush from now till midsummer. His lecture at the Royal Alexandra yesterday afternoon was one of the greatest successes of the season."—The Globe.

Rev. R. J. Bowen To Preach Here

Will Occupy Pulpit at St. John's in the Morning and at St. Luke's in the Evening

Rev. R. J. Bowen of London, Ont., will visit Peterborough to-morrow, and will preach at St. John's Church in the morning, and at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, in the evening. Rev. Mr. Bowen is an eloquent preacher and has had an interesting experience in the work of the Anglican Church in Canada. He had the privilege of preaching the Gospel in the Yukon territory before any gold was taken from the Klondike mines. His experience was that of a pioneer in Forty-Mile Creek, Circle City, Dawson City, White Horse, and in all the mining districts of the Yukon.

AUSTRIAN ARRESTED, FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

KINGSTON, Feb. 10.—The police to-day took into custody Augustus Prager, about 36 years of age and an Austrian, who, with his wife has been living for some time on the Raglan road, near Montreal street. He is alleged to have written a letter to a friend stating that there were many "rebels" in Kingston, and that an effort would be made to get together.

FAMOUS PICTURES OF THE WAR WILL BE SHOWN HERE

TAKEN AT THE FRONT

In order to give the citizens of Peterborough an opportunity of seeing the French Government's official war pictures the Examiner has arranged with the Famous Players Film Co., by taking outright the privilege of showing the pictures in Peterborough, and they will be presented to the public here on March 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

The pictures have appeared in New York, London, Montreal, Toronto, Brantford and other cities in a similar manner, that is, under the auspices of a prominent newspaper In New York, the World obtained the privilege; in Montreal, the Star, and in each place the interest has been intense. Any balance that might be made after the actual expenses have been paid, will be turned over to one of the organized funds, and the Belgian Relief Fund, just organized, is suggested as the recipient.

The pictures are pronounced by all who have seen them as the most wonderful war scenes ever exhibited.

There are six large reels of the films and they were secured by the great general staff of France for the National Archives, and brought to this continent by E. Alexander Powell, the War Correspondent.

Four Operators Wounded.

When it is said that in the many weeks occupied in the taking of these pictures four moving-picture photographers were seriously wounded, one can understand that it was under actual fighting conditions right on the lines that the views were secured. Hand grenade fighting at close quarters, the men in the trenches, the German trenches, and the preparation for the great battle of Champagne. A sight never to be forgotten is given the film which depicts that march to the rear of 21,000 German prisoners, taken in the great battles.

Everywhere these pictures have been shown the houses have been packed, which will doubtless be the case in Peterborough.

The prices of admission have been kept down. The gallery is 15c, reserved seats, 25 and 35c; boxes, 50c. All seats reserved and plan will be open the usual time before the attraction.

Attempted To Poison Archbishop

Arsenic Was Placed in Soup By An Employee of University club

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—A deliberate attempt to poison Archbishop George William Mundelein, Governor Dunne of Illinois, and one hundred distinguished guests at a university banquet for the Archbishop on Thursday night, was revealed to-day. H. J. Doherty, Manager of the Club, issued a statement indicating that arsenic had been placed in the soup served at the banquet by a Club employee, who has disappeared.

It was first believed ptomaine poisoning was responsible. None of the banqueters was made seriously ill.

The following is taken from the London (Eng.) Despatch:

The King Congratulates a Brighton Father.

Mr. J. T. Burrows of 151 Eastern-road, Brighton, has received a letter from Sir Frederick Ponsonby on behalf of his Majesty the King, in which the writer says:

I have the honour to inform you that the King has heard with much intrest that you have at the present moment five sons serving in the Army and Navy. I am commanded to express to you the King's congratulations and to assure you that his Majesty much appreciates the spirit of patriotism which prompted this example, in one family, of loyalty and devotion to their Sovereign and Empire.

Mr. Burrows has five sons serving their King and country.

The eldest, who is 26, is Ernest J. Burrows, ship's writer at Portland naval base. He has been in the Navy about fifteen months.

The second is Signaller Arthur B Burrows, who left a good position in Canada about nine months ago in order to join the 93rd Battalion Peterborough Regiment, Ontario. He is 23 years of age.

The third is Sergeant Gerald L. Burrows, 91st Canadian Highlanders training in Hamilton, Ontario. He is 21, left a good position in Canada and joined about the same time as his brother Arthur.

Private Douglas V. Burrows, aged 19, is next. He enlisted in the 13th Royal Sussex Regiment 14 months ago, and expects to see some fighting soon.

The youngest, who is 17 years old, has been at the front for seven months. He is Private Philip B. Burrows, of the 47th F. A. B.A.M.C. He was at the battle of Loos.

Mr. Burrows' youngest daughter is enrolled with the Girl Guides. His father was in the Royal Berkshires for 22 years and served in the Crimean and Mutiny campaigns.

Staff Sergeant Scott, Corp. Sims and Private Robb, of the 10th Field Ambulance (Winnipeg), are visiting relatives and friends in the city prior to embarking for active service. They will rejoin their comrades at Montreal next Wednesday.

Mrs. Lindsay Crouter, 497 Cross Street, has received the following letter from P. Bryant of the Canadian Army Service Corps. It refers to her son, Pte. Ephriam Lindsay, of the 39th Battalion, who is now in the hospital as a result of shrapnel wounds. The letter follows: "At the request of your son who is in the next bed to me, I am writing you a few lines, hoping they will find you well. I regret your son is ill, but I do not think there is any cause to be alarmed. His wound is healing up nicely. He may possibly get his discharge upon leaving the hospital."

Pte. Ephriam Lindsay adds the following: "I received your letter about two weeks ago and was sorry to note you had been ill during the Christmas holidays. I was brought into the hospital on January 24th."

THE 21ST BATTALION IS MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES

Canadian Patrols Including One From the Eastern Ontario Battalion Distinguished Themselves By Effective Work at the Front

SOME CLEVER SCOUTING

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has received the following communique from the Canadian general representative covering the period Feb. 2-9:

Canadian General Headquarters in France, Feb. 11.—On the night of Feb. 4 a patrol of our 10th Western battalion, under Lieut. S. H. Kent and Sergt. Milne, discovered a gap in the German outer wire. On reaching the wires they cut a lane right up to the German parapet without attracting attention. Early on the morning of Feb. 5 a strong patrol under Lieuts. Kent, A. H. Trimmer and L. Younger, with Sergt. Milne acting as guide, again approached the enemy's lines at the same point. When within a few yards of the trench a large German working party was observed at work on a parapet, and a second enemy working party was discovered still further to the right. While our patrol was engaged in watching the German working parties an enemy patrol of between 20 and 30 men was detected advancing in close formation. The patrol, which was probably intended to cover the enemy working parties, failed to observe our patrol until almost upon it. It then commenced firing and throwing bombs, but our men rushed in to the attack, using their bombs, bayonets and knobkerries.

Fought Hand-to-Hand.

A sharp hand-to-hand tussle ensued, during which five Germans were seized as prisoners. Meanwhile the German working parties took alarm and jumped back into their trench. A number of bombs were thrown into the trench by our men at close range, undoubtedly causing a number of casualties. A violent fire of machine guns, rifles and bombs were then opened from the enemy trenches in the vicinity, thus adding to the confusion into which the German patrol had been thrown. Word was passed to our men to retire. It is thought that few, if any, of the German patrol survived the fire from their own trenches. Our casualties were few, and of these the majority suffered only slight wounds. Immediately on the return of our patrol our artillery shelled the enemy front line trenches so effectively that the rifle and machine gun fire soon ceased.

During the week of February 2 to 9 the enemy has been unusually busy repairing his trenches and raising the height of the parapets. Our snipers and machine gunners have scattered several enemy working parties and inflicted some casualties.

Numerous useful reconnaissances of sections of the enemy's line have been made by our scouts and patrols in spite of the large number of flares used nightly by the Germans. On three occasions Lieutenants Hooper and Burnham, with Corp. J. R. Holt, of our 18th Western Ontario Battalion, reconnoitered a small enemy salient, obtaining useful information.

Entered German Sape.

On the night of February 4-5 Lieut. Shepherd, with Corpls. Watters and Ford, and a patrol of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, entered a German sap, and in spite of the proximity of enemy sentries made a close examination of the defences. Some German grenades and other articles found in the sap were brought back. On the same night Lieut. Shepherd, with another patrol, investigated a second German sap, and the following night went out and verified his observations.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR THE COLONIES WHEN THE WAR IS OVER

Struggle Will Probably Be Succeeded By a Large Emigration of Both Men and Women to the Brighter Possibilities Of New World

IDEAS REVOLUTIONIZED

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, Feb. 12.—So radical is the revolution among the families of British workingmen wrought by the war, that it is plainly impossible to restore the old social conditions. Woman's position in England has been forever altered by the war. Woman has accepted with eagerness and delight her new lot outside the home as a wage earner. There has come in fact a passion among the women of all classes for work, especially if it be work connected directly or indirectly with the war.

Probably the war will be succeeded by a large emigration of both men and women from the rather dreary countryside of England to the boundless and unfilled fields and the brighter possibilities of the New World. It may be then that this will be the great hour for the rapid development of Canada and Australia and New Zealand; and the rulers of these countries ought to be already preparing for the magnificent opportunity of increasing the population and accelerating their development.

The problem of all the after war problems, however, which will be presented to the British nation, is that of the position of women. Some curious and startling items appear in English papers this week. A tall fair-haired girl in long white surgical coat, toying with a wax cast of the human jaw, tells a reporter she is going to Harley street, known as Pillbox Row because nearly every house belongs to a doctor and she hopes to build a big practice there as a dentist. She is one of sixteen girl students in a dental hospital. At present there are only four or five qualified women dentists in England.

The second item describes the experience of a girl who already has been in practice as a dentist for a year. 'My first patient," she said, "fought in the chair under gas, and I had some trouble. I assured her that I was capable and in a few moments she was reassured."

Woman's General Position.

Finally, so it is stated by the 'Manchester Guardian,' the Dowager has already disappeared from society before the war. As conventional rules have gone overboard, and as the chaperone has followed the dowager, the nicest young girls now go out with a young sister and two men friends to supper and a dance at big hotels, and don't return until two in the morning. The young English girl now has as much freedom as her married sister. This tempting theme I might illustrate by describing the new fashionable supper club, where wealthy duchesses jostle pretty chorus ladies in the whirl of the tango and all in dresses both brief and fragile; but to-day I confine myself to the more serious side of the changes in women's general position, which are forecast by the war.

It is perhaps the first time in British history that women have been able to come by their own in British lands. As everybody knows, women have been bread-winners by the million for generations, in the mills of Lancashire, in drapery stores and, of course, as domestic servants. In some towns of England indeed the women earning their own living are as numerous if not more numerous than the men. In such towns, for instance, as Nottingham, where lace-making is the chief industry, and Luton, where three-quarters of the people employed in hat-making are women. The inven-

CRITICISM AND PATRIOTISM.

It is the reproach of the more rabid, and the complaint of the more moderate of Conservative journals, that Liberal public men and Liberal journals have not been loyal to the political truce, declared at the first war session of Parliament, and splendidly ratified at the latest. This asserted disloyalty is held to consist in criticism of Government actions, or actions performed under government authority, and demands for investigations. As to these demands they have heretofore been justified by the outcome. In every case where investigations, following Liberal demands have been held, there have been shown many things contrary to the public interests, contrary to the credit of our national honour and in themselves, hostile to Canada doing her full best in helping forward the war.

On other grounds Opposition criticism even under political truce and in time of war, is more than justified, it is a duty. Watchful criticism is the true function of a parliamentary opposition. It is the unofficial, as the government (and its following) are the official, custodian of national administrative interests. In this war we have agreed to put aside partisanship in its real sense. Both parties have joined to help Canada do her best in the war.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the leader of the Liberal Opposition, has declared that he and his following will co-operate in implementing the Government's programme of conducting our share of the war. In this it is necessary that, to be the most effective, the Government's programme should be properly and honestly carried out. If there are defects, if there are wrongs, it is the part and duty of the Opposition to point them out—we can't expect the Government to condemn itself; we seldom see our own faults. If two men form a partnership to do a certain work, one of them is, say, the senior partner, and the other, the junior. If the latter sees that the work is not going right is he to be charged with disloyalty if he points this out to the senior partner, and does his best to secure the best results? The Conservative Government and the Liberal Opposition have formed a partnership to carry out the contract of giving the Mother Country the best help we can give. If the Opposition, the junior partner, sees, or has reason to think, that the Government, the senior partner, or its agents, is not doing things properly, making mistakes and preventing the full discharge of the country's duty in waging war, it is not only its part, but its duty, dictated by loyalty to the country, the Empire, and the cause, to try to remove the hindrances to the most effective discharge of our national duty. It is not disloyalty, either, to the party truce, or to national and imperial interests, for the Opposition to strive by criticism, the only means it has, to secure the best results, but a solemn duty, an act of real patriotism which it would be disloyalty to the nation and the empire to neglect.

RELIGION AND BEAUTY.

At first thought it may be found difficult to perceive the relation between religion and beauty. It however needs very little thinking to discover the relation between religion and civic beauty—the city beautiful.

In creating the world, the Almighty God made beauty one of the essential elements of his work—a complementary quality to another essential element, utility—"herbs for the use of man." Our most useful plants, our grains and our grasses have not the beauty that much attracts any other than the utilitarian; but most of our other plants are and were created for their beauty alone, whether the beauty is seen and enjoyed by the eye of man or not. The flowers bloom as beautifully, with as much perfection of structure and grace of form and gorgeous colouring, in the depths of the trackless forests of Africa, as in the gardens of a public park, open to the view of all men.

But flowers are not the only beautiful things in nature. On a soberer and more dignified plan trees, in their many varied forms, in their individual or collective placing, are the universal complement of the floral splendours of nature. One without the other would not contribute to the conditions necessary to the city beautiful.

To combine the two, with the addition of human cooperation, needs the help of religion. The divine basis of religion, in the relations of man to man, is the, also, divinely constituted command, "Do ye unto other men as ye would they should do unto you." On this, as far as human associations are concerned, "hang all the law and the prophets."

The recognition and observance of this divine command is the absolute essential, and the necessary condition of the city beautiful as well as of all the associated interests, that term involves — not only the beauty of harmony of association as families, as neighbours, as fellow citizens, but in the material, natural and man created beauty of our streets and public places, whose preservation calls for the preaching and practice of the Golden Rule.

One cannot think of a more potential floral, horticultural and arboricultural nursery than our public schools, in which teachers have the moulding of impressionable and receptive minds. If full advantage were taken of the opportunity of developing in the children's minds the cult of the golden rule the next generation would be possessed of, and obsessed with, the cult of the city beautiful, which depends upon the general possession of that corollary, if not development and essence of the golden rule —respect for the rights, wishes and tastes of others.

Without this sense of respect, with our open lawns and unfenced parks and public flower gardens, we cannot, try as we may, achieve our best, in the way of making and keeping the city beautiful.

One of the chief hindrances; one of the most discouraging things citizens have to contend with is the destruction of the work they have done with much loving care and expenditure of money, to create civic beauty.

A man lays down a lawn and flanks it with a beautiful boulevard, shaves, cares for and tends the velvet turf as he would the child of his love.

Yet hardly is the work completed than it is made a foot-path—at the corners of streets especially — and tramped out of existence, as an ornamental feature of the street.

A man plants in his open lawn a flower bed, a blaze of beauty, when along comes some vagrant dog and reduces it to ruin. The owner of the dog, perhaps a hulking brute as big as a yearly calf, with the same capacity for destruction among flowers as a bull in a china shop doesn't think —if indeed he cares— that his dog, allowed to roam at large—in spite of thirteen policemen— is his agent in outraging the golden rule, as regards the rights, wishes and tastes of his neighbour.

If the people, who unthinkingly or unsparingly tramp the life out of beautiful boulevards and lawns, were governed by the golden rule—in this case synonymous with respect for other rights, his beauty of boulevard and lawn would be as free from destructive trespass, as if they were defended by a fence ten cubits high.

We have "nature study" in our schools. If, with the sense and love of the infinite beauty of vegetative growth—from the tuft of lowly lawn grass to the most opulently beautiful orchid, that the teacher implants in the child's mind and heart, he or she would at the same time implant in the soul the sense and love of a greater beauty, the spirit of the religion of the golden rule, in the next generation, the problem of the city beautiful and the problem of inconceivable civic harmony and happiness would be solved.

The foundation stone of our holy religion—Christianity— was altruism; not self seeking, but loving sacrifice in thought and deed for others.

The man who beautifies his premises adjacent to the public street, who makes them pleasant and sightly to the public view with sheltering trees and lawns studded with flowers and shrubs, is performing an act of the religion that has thought for others. He is not doing it all for his own pleasure, but he shares the beauty of his work with others; and in his humble way is following the example of Him who "went about doing good."

Religion and beauty—of city and character go hand in hand. They are cause and effect.

"PERSONAL LIBERTY"

We have been asked our opinion of the argument, put forth in an advertisement in our last week's issue, that the adoption of prohibition would be an unwarrantable interference with personal liberty. We do not agree. Personal liberty, rightly understood, is one of the best things in the world. But its abridgment to a greater or less extent is the very foundation of life in society. The right of the State to deprive us of that liberty to the extent that may be necessary for the general welfare, is axiomatic. It is exercised every day. The Imperial Parliament has just enacted the greatest interference with personal liberty that has been adopted in England for nearly two centuries,—compulsory military service; and while there were those who opposed it most strenuously, the only point they raised was the necessity. And that, in our view, is the only point that can properly be raised on this aspect of the Prohibition question. (We say "on this aspect;" for there are other phases of Prohibition such as the right to compensation, the possibility of its introducing other evils, etc.) We quite realize that the man who has been accustomed to use liquor in perfect moderation will find its prohibition a very unpleasant interference with his habits. But unless he is prepared to propound the question of the first murderer,—unless his interest in human welfare does not extend beyond his own palate,—he will ask himself whether the curse of the traffic, which a responsible British statesman declared to exceed the combined evils of war, famine and pestilence (a statement that was at least true when made) is not so great as to justify that interference. For all efforts to control the traffic otherwise in this country have signally and lamentably failed.—Catholic Register.

A SENSIBLE SENATOR.

In these days when nearly everybody's nerves are on edge, and when every nation has grievances of one sort or another against every other nation, the cool, calm philosophy and homely reasoning displayed in the U. S. Senate recently by Senator Williams, of Mississippi, is a welcome relief. At the risk of relating old news I am going to quote some of Senator William's remarks, for it will do no harm to read matter of this sort over twice in any event.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, was riding his favorite hobby of denouncing Britain's interference with American trade, and Senator Williams replied:

"Senator Smith's resolution would mean non-intercourse with the allies. What would ye look like, trying to bully a big nation like England with our army of 90,000 and the fourth navy of the world?"

"Does Senator Williams," asked Senator Hitchcock, "know that sixty-three sacks of United States mail were opened by Britain? That's violating the United States' sovereignity. Would he tolerate the censoring of our mails by Britain?"

"What the Senator wants me to say," replied Senator Williams, "is that I'd have a lot of Americans and British and Irish and Welsh and Canadians and Italians killed because my mail is opened, but I won't say it.

"Of course I resent every act of a belligerent that violates our rights, but I don't care enough about it to shed human blood over it. As to British censors handing over our trade letters to British business men, I have doubts. It strikes me that Great Britain is a little too busy at war right now defending her life to be engaged in catching on to trade secrets. We have 3,000 miles of undefended Canadian border. I don't want my boys to go up there killing Canadian boys just because somebody stopped somebody's mail on the way to Norway.

"I don't want to see Dixie put into the attitude of caring just as much about property as the life of the women and children sent to their graves in the ocean. Until the question as to the loss of women and children is settled, I do not intend to nag the President or his Administration, and I think I would not nag a Republican Administration about the loss of property. My people are not ready to put cotton and human life on the same basis, especially when they have sense enough to know that if the shipment of cotton to England and her allies was cut off, cotton would be worth about four cents a pound."

If there were more men of the type of the distinguished Mississippi Senator this would be a pretty peaceful and comfortable world to live in.—Toronto Saturday night.

Is The Canadian Government Too Tolerant For Our Safety?

"We are a little lax, it may be, in taking certain precautions when we admit strangers within our gates, but we British are a good-natured, unsuspicious tolerant lot, and great believers in personal liberty."

The qualities that Lord Shaughnessy speaks of are traditional with the British race. And we don't like to give up our traditions. Though they have got us into some bad holes they have also got us out again. In the main, Britain has been most successful with them.

But we are face to face to-day with a situation the like of which has never before existed. We are good-natured unsuspicious, tolerant, and we are foremost as exponents of personal liberty. It is instinctive with us to take the other fellow at his face value until we find out that he is bogus. In the national crisis of the past these traditional qualities have not worked very great injury to Britain except when stretched to foolhardy length, because those with whom we have dealt, while sometimes they have been deceitful and treacherous, have on the whole been honorable opponents and enemies. We meet them with fair weapons ourselves, and generally found that their weapons were also fair.

It is different, however, in this, the greatest crisis of all. We are not fighting for our existence against an enemy who fights as others do, who strikes in the open with fair weapons. We know what he is. Why should we be "good-natured," unsuspicious" and "tolerant" of, and believers in "personal liberty" for, people whose race has shown that it is instinctive with them to be without honor, who uphold and subscribe to the most inhuman and savage acts that the world has ever seen perpetrated? Are we to be such fools as to cling to our national tendencies when we know that those tendencies are not applicable in dealing with the kind of enemy we are fighting?

It was all right to believe in the other fellow when we had no reason to do otherwise. But surely we have seen enough of the German and his nature to know that we cannot trust him. Surely we know better than to be "unsuspicious" and "tolerant" of him; even when he seems most innocent. We have seen the unparalleled treachery of the German agents in the United States, who when honorably accredited to the government of that country, and when receiving the trust of that country, were secretly plotting its injury.

The United States was a friend of Germany and yet the representatives of the German government worked their plots against her. Canada is an enemy to the death of Germany. Are we likely to receive more honorable treatment?

We have no reason to believe that the Germans holding high offices in this country are unfriendly towards Canada. But they have less reason to be friendly toward us than had the Germans who carried out the propaganda of plots in the United States reason to be friendly to that country. And the United States had no reason to distrust the Germans there until the evidence was unearthed. We have seen how far other Germans could be trusted. Why should we trust the apparently innocent Germans holding high office in Canada?

We do not need to excuse them of the treachery. We do not have to hold them guilty when we have no knowledge that they are. But should we continue to give them opportunity? We do not wish to unjustly insult them, but could they reasonably take it as an insult, be they ever so innocent, if we took reasonable precautions for our own safety, since they knew that we know what Germans in every other part of the world are and have been doing?

So much has become knowledge of the manner in which Germany has planted her agents in every country under the sun to work in her interests while appearing to have no connection with the fatherland! We have no reason to believe that the men holding the important positions in the Canadian government come here at the order of the German government and in the interests of that government, but it is hardly reasonable to suppose that Germany left Canada to be the one country in which she should not be so represented. And if she didn't do that very unlikely thing, where are her agents? Is it not most likely that many of them are where they can see and learn the most—at the seat of government?

Why should we take a chance on any of these Germans who are in places of easy access to information valuable to Germany? Why should we jeopardize our own safety through hesitancy to injure the feelings of some innocent individuals?

Shall we continue to place alongside our fear of injuring the feelings of these people the grave danger we are running by continuing them in the service of this country?—Ottawa Free Press.

Anniversary of Landing of First Contingent

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The first anniversary of the landing of the Canadian contingent in France was given a fitting celebration yesterday, when services were held at St. Margaret's, which, standing on the same ground as Westminster Abbey, is the parish church of the Houses of Parliament opposite, and at Westminster Catholic Cathedral, a short distance away. Canon Carnegie's address dealt with the moral and spiritual lethargy preceding the war, from which the nation has been awakened by an act of flagitous wrong. The awakening, and the response to the call of duty in which the overseas Dominion had participated, the preacher regarded as the most momentous and inspiring episode in the history of the Anglo-Saxon race. In urging Empire unity and closer co-operation, he said that Britons the world over har become conscious that the ultimate cords which united them were moral cords —the maintenance of truth, justice and humanity.

Lieut.-Col. Steacy, director of chaplains, was among the officiating clergy. Major Bayley, from the front, and Major the Rev. C. W. Gordon were also present. The church was filled with soldiers, including part of the First Pioneers, from camp, and also the staff of the Canadian pay and record office.

Major the Rev. Mgr. Burke, of Toronto, officiated at mass in Westminster Cathedral. Cardinal Bourne, in his address, commended the courage of the representatives of a young, but a noble nation who had given up their homes voluntary to face danger, wounds, and death.".

IMPOLITE OFFICIALS.

They Sometimes Get a Jolt, as One of Them Did in Paris.

It would appear that the public servant, no matter how small his position or humble his function, is much the same person in France as in this country, manifesting much the same lack of courtesy as that which meets us so often here.

Recently in one of the departments of a Parisian mayoralty, toward midday, a little old employee was about to begin munching a bunch of carrots. Some one rapped at the door. No response from the little employee.

The person who had rapped entered.

"Monsieur," he began.

"Come back at 2 o'clock," growled the little employee, as he continued to gnaw away at the vegetables.

"But"—

"No buts about it. Come back at 2 o'clock."

"I am the new chief of the bureau," said the visitor.

At once the little employee jumped up, trying to hide the bunch of carrots behind his back, as he bowed deeply to the visitor.

"Go before me," said the chief, "and show me, if you please, to my bureau."

The little employee was greatly embarrassed by his carrots. He did not know where to put them.

The chief took pity on him. "My friend," he said, "put down your carrots. There is no shame in eating vegetables. But that respectable occupation should not prevent you from giving a gracious welcome to the public. Let this serve as a lesson to you."

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of the paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an unsightly amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1568, Montreal, Can.

AMERICAN BURNED ALIVE BY TURKS

Missionary Tells How He Himself Escaped a Similar Fate

PETROGRAD, Feb. 11.—Dr. Jacob Sargis, an American Methodist medical missionary, who has arrived in Petrograd after narrowly escaping death at the hands of the Turks and Kurds in Urumiah, Persian Armenia, asserts that among the outrages committed against the Christian refugees was the burning to death of an American doctor named Simon or Shimmun, as he was known there. His identity was not established further, but the story of the outrage, as told by Dr. Sargis, was as follows:

"Dr. Shimmun was in the village of Supurghan when the Turks attacked that place. He was among those who took refuge on a mountain near the lakes. He was captured and told that, since he had been a good doctor and had helped the wounded, they would not kill him, but that he must accept the Mohammedan faith. He refused, as almost all Christians did. They poured oil on him, and, before applying the torch, gave him another chance to forsake his religion. Again he refused, and they set his clothes afire. While fleeing in agony due to the flames the Turks shot him several times. After he fell to the ground unconscious they hacked his head off. Mr. Allen, an American missionary, who went from village to village burying the victims of this butchery, found the body of Shimmun half eaten by dogs.

"The Catholic mission there took 150 Christians of all sects and kept them in a small room and tried to save them, but at least forty-nine of them, among them one Bishop Dinkha, of the Episcopal mission, were bound together one night, taken to Gagin Mountain, and there shot down."

Dr. Sargis was born in Persia, but went to America in 1903, and was educated there by assistance of Dr. W. F. Oldham, former Bishop of India. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio Medical Universities, and was for a time resident physician of the Protestant Hospital at Columbus, Ohio.

He was doing relief work in Urumiah on Jan. 1 last year when the Russian Army retired from that city, followed by 14,000 refugees from Urumiah and a hundred surrounding villages.

There were still left in Urumiah and the villages 45,000 persons, chiefly Armenian refugees, when the Turks and Kurds entered. The latter at once began the work of extermination of the Christian population. In one town alone, Gulfarchin, in one night, according to Dr. Sargis, seventy-nine men and boys were tied hand to hand, taken to a hill outside the village and shot. Their wives and daughters were distributed among the Turks, Kurds, and Persian Mohammedads.

"On the second day after the Turkish officers came," continued Dr. Sargis, "they had a good many wounded and sick. As soon as they heard that I was an able physician, they took me, gave me a bodyguard, and put me in charge of Urumiah Hospital. That was how I came to learn most of their secrets; I helped their wounded and sick. One day there were sixty men brought from Bashkal, all well-to-do citizens, some of them noted men of that place. They were used as beasts of burden, forced to carry rolls of barbed wire into Urumiah. The next day they were all taken to the Castle of Ismayil and every one was shot or hacked to death.

"About that time Nuri, the Governor of Gavr, told me that he had received word from the Turkish commander to kill all the Armenian soldiers in the Turkish army. He said that for my sake he would not do it, but that somebody else would. Twenty-nine were killed about fifteen miles from Urumiah, at Karmad. We had eight of them in the city, fine fellows, some of them educated in Beirut. They had been disarmed, and one night the Turks took them to the suburbs and shot them. But one of them named Aslam escaped. He dropped with the others, but was not hit. After the butchers left he made his way to the Presbyterian mission college. I was notified and asked to take care of him. I kept him until the Russian Army came. He joined and is now fighting with them.

"In the First Turkish Corps, commanded by Khalil Bey, there were about 400 Armenians. One of them, Gulbankyan, a graduate of Beirut, told me that they were all doomed to be butchered. When they appointed me head physician of the hospital they gave me plenty of helpers, including seven Christian nurses, six Arabs, and one Greek. Gulbankyan told me that if I did not help them they would be killed.

"An Arab physician, Bahadin Effendi, was appointed to work under my direction. My Greek nurse warned me that Bahadin had already killed more than fifty Armenian Christians and cautioned me to watch him. One night about 10 o'clock Bahadin sent for me, saying that he was sick. Fortunately for me, the Greek and two Armenian nurses went with me. When I reached the hospital I found that Bahadin was not sick at all. He said to me, 'What business have you to disturb me at this time of the night? Your coming shows that you have some design upon my life.' I told him that it was a mistake, that I had been told he was sick, and went away. At the bottom of the stairs I was overtaken by an officer, who said that the doctor was not done with me. I protested, but was ordered to go back. So I put my trust in the Lord and went.

"The doctor greeted me with the question: 'Who gave you permission to leave the room' and continued: 'You are a prisoner and you will never see the light of to-morrow's sun.' I told him that I was an American citizen and that I was helping the wounded for the sake of humanity. He cut me off by saying: 'This is wartime. The top of your hat is green. That means that you are a descendant of the prophet, and it will give me pleasure to destroy your life to-night. I must think how I shall kill you. I could throw you out of the window, but that would be too quick. I could shoot you, but that also is too good for you. I shall have to use my sword. You sit down there in that corner and these Turkish nurses will sing your funeral before I begin to cut you up.'

"The Turks began to sing a droning chant, and I had no choice but to sit and listen. My bodyguard, the Greek nurse Theodore and two Armenian soldiers, the latter my servants, stood outside the door, and when they heard this chanting they thought it was all over with me. The Greek, who was a shrewd fellow, told my bodyguard to enter, and if he saw me, to say that the patients wanted to see the doctor. All of a sudden I saw him enter with a lantern. He saluted the Effendi and said: 'The patients want the doctor.' I didn't give Bahadin a chance to say a word. I was up and out and down in the street in about two seconds. When I got to the outpost they yelled from the window to stop me, but they were too late. My bodyguard and the Armenians and the Greek followed close behind me and I got away. I reached home at midnight. My wife and children thought I was already dead."

Dr. Sargis turned the tables on the Arab doctor by alleging that he was insane and having him put under guard and on a milk diet, notwithstanding he was a doctor in Khalil Bey's army.

"Soon after the Russians left Urumiah a German machinist, Neuman, who came in with the Turks, announced himself as German Consul. By his orders a Christian by the name of Mushi was hanged. Eighty-five hundred persons died in the vicinity of Urumiah in five months; 1,500 were killed and the rest died of cold and hunger.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

A FISH MARKET.

Big Opportunities for Business Have Arisen in Australia.

Opportunities for marketing the product of Canadian fisheries, "the most extensive in the world," in Australia, are treated in a report received by the Trade and Commerce Department from Commissioner Ross, of Melbourne. He states that there is a serious shortage in canned fish in Australia, advantage of which has already been taken by some New Brunswick packers to introduce canned sardines and herrings. However, the amounts exported are very small in comparison with the great demand that now exists in Australia for Canadian fish, says Mr. Ross, and he regrets that "no concerted effort has yet been made to develop the inshore or coastal industry by canning fish for export overseas."

Although Canada has quantities of fish, however, there is lacking the tonnage to carry them. Commissioner Bickerdike, of England, deals with this subject in a report just received. He states that at the present moment there is a famine in merchant ships for which the success of the British fleet, rather curiously, is partly responsible. Great Britain's navy has captured or driven off the sea some 2,500 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 6,500,000, possessed by Germany and Austria-Hungary, as well as 202 ships of 133,000 tons under the Turkish flag. By its success the fleet thus reduced the amount of shipping available for the carrying trade of the world, since the mercantile marine of Russia, which embraced 1,254 ships of over 1,000,000 tons, has been imprisoned to a considerable extent owing to conditions in th eBaltic Sea. The British Admiralty also has over 2,000 vessels requisitioned for carrying troops and stores and 2,100 auxiliary craft engaged in patrol services. The requirements of the French and Italian navies have also put a heavy drain on their merchant marine.

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLING HAIR

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxurience which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few week's use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

SHE PROPOSED BY MAIL.

And Leap Year Bride Gets a Free Wedding.

Mrs. Anna Marcus, 40 years old, of Cincinnati, and Victor Schadd, 64 years old, of Oakland, Cal., were married in Lexington, Ky., by County Judge Frank A. Bullock.

The bride admitted that she had proposed by mail to Schadd, who is said to be wealthy. No fee is charged by County Clerk Theodore Lewis for marriage licenses issued to "leap year" brides, and County Judge Bullock has agreed to marry all such without cost.

They came to Lexington to be married because Mrs. Marcus was born in Montgomery county and "dearly loves Kentucky," she said.

WHAT THE PERSONAL LIBERTY LEAGUE of Ontario Stands For!

IN response to the numerous inquiries regarding the aims and objects of The Personal Liberty League of Ontario, we append below a Declaration of Principles, which is self-explanatory. It will be seen from a reading of the Declaration that the League stands for the widest individual liberty compatible with effective government.

That there is pressing need for such a stand just now in Ontario cannot be denied. Constant inroads are being made upon personal liberty, and it seems to be the belief of many that the individual has no inherent rights which the majority are bound to respect, and that everything, however illusory, can be brought about by the mere passing of a law. The people of Ontario, indeed, are threatened with a real curtailment of their freedom, all, supposedly, in the interest of morality.

Declaration of Principles

"We are in favor of the proper observance of the Sabbath, but not of laws that restrict the right of the individual citizen to indulge in innocent amusements and harmless recreation on that day. We believe in the subordination of the interests of individual citizens to the interests of the community as a whole, but not in the curtailment of the personal rights and liberties of one class or party of citizens to satisfy the demands of another class or party who may desire to waive such personal rights and liberties for themselves.

"BELIEVING in the above principles, we declare our friendship and pledge our support to men and measures that stand for the self evident justice of these principles, and we declare our opposition to men and measures that favor sumptuary or restrictive legislation.

"WE BELIEVE in temperance in all things, and in its promotion; we favor the license system under proper regulation and control, but we are opposed to prohibition or any legislation which encroaches upon or curtails the purely personal liberties of our people."

Application for membership cards should be sent to The Personal Liberty League of Ontario, Head Office, 15 Wilton Avenue, Toronto.

No fees are required for membership in the League.

Fill out the application for membership and forward to the Secretary of The Personal Liberty League.
